Calkins clamps news blackout on L.B. crime

By Molly Burrell
Staff Writer

Acting police chief Carl Calkins has ordered a partial blackout on public information about crime in Long Beach.

The ban applies to all news media. It bars access to police reports and, in most instances, to crime scenes.

Since its beginning in a May 20 directive, Calkins has reversed a long-standing policy of police cooperation with news media.

The policy enunciated five years ago by then-Chief William J. Mooney called the "news media an asset to law enforcement" and said "the press should be helped in any way possible."

Calkins' administrative order specifies:

— No access to any police reports.

— Channeling all inquiries at a crime scene to a press information officer.

— Writing a memorandum to the commanding officer about any information given to the news media.

Calkins advised his officers that "certain information must be withheld in order to protect individuals' right to privacy, to avoid interference with investigative operations or because it is legally privileged."

A month later, a Calkins memo reaffirmed the May 20 directive but ordered that some reports be "made available for review by authorized media personnel."

The reports opened to the news media did not include those of homicides, discharge of firearms by police officers, dead bodies and suicides, arrest reports, follow-up reports and stolen vehicle reports.

Calkins has said the secrecy of reports on discharge of firearms by police officers need not alarm the public because he will not "let an officer go out and discharge his firearm or do anything reckless and abandoned and not take an immediate action on that officer." Calkins said he would at once make public any action he took in such a case.

Copies of authorized reports can be read but not duplicated by the news media, Calkins said in a June 15 memo. The reports will be shredded after 48 hours, according to an order from the commanding officer of the records division.

The May 20 directive quotes a state law authorizing members of the press access to areas closed to the general public due to riot, fire, flood, earthquake or other disaster, but Calkins' directive adds: "This does not entitle the press access to areas closed off for criminal investigation."

News media representatives conceivably could be barred from almost any area where news is breaking, whether or not a crime has been committed. That is because there must be an investigation to determine if a crime has been committed and this would qualify as a criminal investigation.

A further order reads: "Media requiring more detailed information on a crime or incident will contact the assigned investigator." If the investigator has finished his shift or is for any reason unavailable, there is no "detailed information" available.

In a telephone interview, Calkins said his policy "is as broad as broad can be, and it makes the officers responsible to give information when they have information."

In a memorandum prepared for Calkins' immediate predecessor, Ralph G. Kortz, the city attorney's office declared that on a case-by-case basis "the public's right to know must be weighed against the reasons for nondisclosure."

"That's what you need to do," Calkins told an I, P-T reporter.

Ford swings — Ouch!

Former President Gerald Ford watches in alarm as his tee shot sails into the crowd at the Vince Lombardi Memorial Golf Tournament Saturday in Milwaukee. At right, Ford leans over Gene Bartelt, 56, who was hit on the head by the ball, requiring six stitches. "I'm very sorry," Ford told him. Bartelt didn't reply at the time but later said, "And I voted for him!"

'Idi Amin wounded,' says man who tried to kill him

LONDON (AP) — A man claiming he took part in a bazooka-and-machinegun attempt on Idi Amin's life says the Ugandan president was wounded and carried away by bodyguards, the Observer newspaper reported today.

The newspaper said the man, who was reported to have reached the Kenyan capital of Nairobi with fellow plotters, asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals against relatives in Uganda.

The Observer quoted him as saying he and nine other heavily armed men ambushed Amin on June 18 as the dictator traveled by car from the Ugandan lakeside town of Entebbe to Kampala, the capital.

The man told Observer reporter David Martin that the ambush team fired a bazooka shell, killing two men in the front of Amin's car. The man was quoted as saying Amin returned fire with a pistol, but was hit by machinegun bullets as he leaped from the car and fell bleeding to the ground, clutching his stomach.

Amin's bodyguards shot dead the machinegun operator and the rest of the attackers fled, the man was quoted as saying.

The Observer article, which came as the London Sunday Times reported the possible defection of a second Ugandan government minister, is the latest account of an armed bid to end Amin's six-year rule.

Other reports reaching Kenya indicated Amin had gone into hiding after an abortive assassination attempt on the Entebbe road, but Amin told an American reporter last week that he had been honeymooning with his wife of two years, Sarah.

Government-controlled Radio Uganda Saturday quoted Amin as denying an attempt was made to assassinate him. But it said Amin indicated arms smuggled from neighboring Kenya and Tanzania had been captured and that exiles had attempted to enter Uganda to "bring chaos."

The newspaper quoted the alleged plotter as saying he did not know how badly Amin was wounded.

The paper quoted the man as saying he was told Amin was either treated at a house on the shore of Lake Victoria or flown to Libya for treatment.

The Sunday Times reported that Justice Minister Godfrey Lule, who had been sent by Amin to argue Uganda's case before the U.S. Human Rights Commission in Geneva, may have defected to Britain.

The paper said the 42-year-old Lule and his family were in Britain and "it is understood that he has asked the Home Office for permission to stay."

New harbor oil refinery planned

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

Plans have been quietly continuing for a major oil tank farm in Los Angeles Harbor that would have a storage capacity of 3½-million barrels — almost as much as the proposed Standard Oil of Ohio terminal in Long Beach Harbor.

Although Western Fuel Oil Co. reached agreement last October with Los Angeles Harbor on an option to lease 55 acres on Terminal Island for the $18-million facility, representatives of the State Coastal Commission and Air Resources Board say they are unaware of the project.

And the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, which is supposed to be using the oil, says it has no contract for the petroleum.

THE Los Angeles Harbor tank farm and a refinery to handle 100,000 barrels per day have been proposed by Western, a subsidiary of Coastal States Gas Corp. of Houston.

Last Oct. 27, Western reached an agreement with the Port of Los Angeles on a lease option for 55 acres on the former Reeves Navy Field on Terminal Island for the facility. Since then it has been negotiating for an additional 20 acres, according to a spokesman for Coastal States Gas.

Calvin Hurst, environmental scientist with the Los Angeles Harbor Department, said the proposal is still active, and he is awaiting word from Western on how it wants to proceed with an environmental review of the proposal.

Spokesmen for the State Air Resources Board and the Southern California Air Quality Management District say they are unaware of the Western proposal, even though air quality would be a major consideration in any review of the project.

AND Michael Dadasovich, port coordinator for the State Coastal Commission, said he has not been approached about the proposal.

Even the Los Angeles DWP, which supposedly will be supplied the oil desulfurized in the refinery, hasn't heard much about the project.

"We don't have any contract for the oil," said Elizabeth Wimmer, a DWP spokeswoman. She said Western, which has a contract with the utility for 500,000 barrels per month through September 1978, has talked to DWP about the project but there are no agreements for the oil.

However, an Oct. 22, 1976, memo from Los Angeles Port General Manager Fred Crawford to harbor commissioners states, "I am advised that there are tentative agreements between the Company and the city of Los Angeles, Department of Water & Power for the utilization for this desulfurized fuel."

Wellington Osterloh, a spokesman for Coastal States, confirmed that the project was still "on", but that the company is negotiating for another 20 acres. He spoke only in general terms about the project and when asked where the crude oil would come from, only would answer "from anywhere."

HE SAID the project might not be completed for five years. He referred most questions to the agreement signed last October with the port.

Osterloh also said the project had no connection with any other petroleum project in harbor area.

Educator recalls violent Oakland days

The stormy, Nov. 6, 1973, Oakland School District board meeting had just concluded with threats of violence against school administrators who had proposed safety measures to protect teachers. Richard Arthur, principal of Castlemont High School, was talking to District Superintendent Marcus A. Foster. Arthur, now an adult coordinator for the ABC Unified School District, offered to give Foster a ride home. Foster declined.

Twenty minutes later, as he was driving home, Arthur listened in shock on the radio to the details of the parking lot shooting of Foster. The murder of Foster, a respected black educator from Philadelphia, was traced to Symbionese Liberation Army members Russell Little and Joseph Remiro, who were convicted of the murder and sentenced to life terms in prison.

Arthur has witnessed violence, as a teacher for 22 years in the Los Angeles City School system and as principal for four years in Oakland.

At Castlemont, Arthur had replaced a black woman who had been murdered, and he had major challenges of satisfying the demands of black students in a violent area of the city. Now, with the murders and riots only a memory, he has embarked on a more relaxing assignment with the ABC District.

Arthur, who lives in Norwalk with his wife and three children, is coordinator of a new class, "Contemporary Problems and Issues in Education" for Pacific Christian College.

He was interviewed by Independent, Press-Telegram reporter Tim Burt.

Q. How did you manage to wind up at Oakland?

A. I'm not really sure. The new superintendent, Marcus Foster, had heard about me — I don't know how — except that I was doing a lot of work with the Los Angeles city schools conducting workshops for teachers, principals and parents in the district.

Chef bares 22 bizarre months in Groucho's home

Combined News Services

A chef who worked for Groucho Marx has told of 22 bizarre months in the comedian's household, where the dinner table was "an explosive battlefield," and the aged comedian's companion dreamed of inheriting all his money.

John Edward Ballow's memories were contained in a 368-page, three-volume sworn deposition filed in connection with Erin Fleming's bid for conservatorship of the frail 86-year-old comedian.

A Santa Monica Superior Court trial is scheduled July 18 to decide whether Miss Fleming, Marx's long-time companion, secretary and manager, should be named permanent conservator.

The comedian's son, Arthur, has won the first round of court battles by having the 37-year-old woman removed last month as conservator, after witnesses contended she had abused Marx. Two private detectives stated barbituate-containing hypodermic syringes were concealed outside Marx's Beverly Hills home.

"She wanted to be conservator and she wanted to inherit as much as she could," the 27-year-old chef alleged in the documents made public Friday.

Meanwhile, Marx returned to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center Friday, where spokesman Larry Baum said he was suffering from pneumonitis, "a kind of benign pneumonia." He had been released from the hospital earlier in the week after undergoing hip surgery.

And on Friday, his long-time friend Nat Perrin, 72, asked Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie to be relieved of his responsibilities as Marx's temporary conservator because "it's been far too much of a strain for myself and my wife." Perrin described Marx as "quite sick, quite feeble."

Marx' condition remained unchanged Saturday, a hospital spokesman said.

In the deposition, Ballow alleged that Miss Fleming convinced Marx to tear up all of his pictures of his daughter, Melinda. "And at lunch that day, he said, 'I don't have any children,'" Ballow recalled.

Frequently, Ballow said Miss Fleming railed against Marx's son, Arthur. The chef said she told Marx: "You don't love him, Groucho. I'm here. Don't worry about Arthur. Arthur doesn't deserve anything from you."

He said he saw Miss Fleming gag Marx by forcing a linen napkin into his mouth until he turned blue. On other occasion, he said she shoved a plate of food in Marx's face.

Miss Fleming was not available for comment but has maintained that she has done nothing that was not in Marx's best interest and theirs was a close, loving relationship.

"There were tons of incidents at that dinner table," he said. "It was like an explosive battlefield."

"She would drive him to the point that he was incapable of even sitting in his chair," Ballow said. "He was just a mass of nerves (from) the screaming alone."

He said Miss Fleming had frequently ordered a nurse to administer drugs to Marx even though doctors had advised that they could kill him.

"If she got him upset ... she would always come up as a way of, I felt, a way of soothing her own conscience, smack him full of those things (drugs) and that would calm him down," Ballow said.

Ballow said a doctor had told him "Mr. Marx could die any second. He's on a very thin line. He's not a strong man. He's had many strokes."

For a time, he said Miss Fleming was intent on having Marx adopt her. Ballow said a woman psychiatrist intervewed Groucho twice about the matter.

Another of Miss Fleming's plans, he said, was to sell Marx's house, and move him, perhaps, to a penthouse somewhere.

"I said, 'That sounds like a real drag. Do you realize that might be depressing? This is his castle; this is what he worked his entire life for.'

"And she said, 'To hell with the castle. He'll do what I tell him to do.'"

At one point in the deposition, one of the attorneys hinted Ballow might be exaggerating the situation. The chef replied: "I can't paint any picture uglier than really occurred in that home."

He indicated he had received phone calls urging him not to testify, and he said, "I am very afraid of Erin Fleming and always have been."

Ballow insisted that his motivation for telling all was to right some of the "many injustices" that he witnessed in the Marx household.

Police gas black funeral

Combined News Services

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police used tear gas to disperse an estimated 20,000 Soweto blacks massed for the burial Saturday of a 17-year-old youth whose death was blamed by some blacks on a police beating. Police said there were a few stoning incidents but no one was reported injured or arrested. Witnesses said the mood at the funeral for Philemon Tloana was one of volatile anger, but for most of the day police kept their distance.

Lutherans veto bias

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — The Lutheran World Federation, representing 58 million members worldwide, has overwhelmingly adopted a resolution saying its churches in southern Africa must reject racial segregation as a matter of faith. The assembly called the apartheid system contrary to Lutheran teachings and said churches must publicly oppose it regardless of possible dangers to them or their members.

China aids Egypt

CAIRO — The Egyptian government, which Friday declared that it had made "no progress" toward improved relations with the Soviet Union, Saturday pointedly announced that it has received a shipment of military spare parts from China. The Chinese gift is believed to consist of Chinese-made engines for some of Egypt's Soviet MIG17s and 21s but there was no official confirmation of this.

Amin bares 'plot'

NAIROBI, Kenya — President Idi Amin has denied that he was the target of an assassination attempt a week ago, but he said there had been a plot to topple his 6½-year-old government, Radio Uganda reported Saturday. Amin said the plot was launched by Ugandan exiles, trained by "imperialists and Zionists."

Canadians jail Huey Newton

TORONTO — Fugitive Black Panther leader Huey P. Newton was taken into custody late Saturday after arriving here from Cuba on the first leg of a journey to California where he faces murder and assault charges.

Canadian officials said the 35-year-old Newton, who spent the last 2½ years in Communist Cuba, was being held pending a deportation hearing today.

An immigration spokesman said officials would seek to have Newton deported to the U.S. because of a criminal record.

8 on hunger strike

GENEVA, Switzerland — A spokesman for eight Chileans holding a hunger strike at International Red Cross headquarters said Saturday they were "confident" their demand would be met over the weekend. They are demanding an international panel be set up to travel to Santiago and investigate their claim that 2,500 Chileans have "disappeared" since the military government took power there in 1973, toppling the electedgovernment of Salvador Allende.

Korean anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea — The two Koreas marked the 27th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on Saturday with mass rallies on each side. Each called for the ouster of the other's leader. But quiet was reported along the demilitarized zone separating the armies of the Communist North and U.S.-backed South.

Shelling kills 4

BEIRUT — Rightist Christians said Saturday a Christian village in southern Lebanon was heavily shelled during the night, leaving four dead and many injured. The bombardment marked the fifth day of fighting just north of the Israeli border between Christians and an alliance of Moslem leftists and Palestinian guerrillas.

Reds squabble

MADRID — The Communist party declared Saturday that an attack by Moscow against Spanish Communist leader Santiago Carrillo, "is an attack against the entire party." The party said the Soviet attack was directed at all Communist parties seeking to establish socialism in democratic nations. The Soviets accused Carrillo of "anti-Sovietism" and claimed he was trying to divide the Communist movement by asserting his independence from Moscow.

Women assail ERA

SALT LAKE CITY — A loud, overwhelming majority of about 4,000 women at a Utah International Women's Year conference workshop voted to go on record against the Equal Rights Amendment. In another workshop, tempers flared as participants voted against abortions under any circumstances, sex education in schools and wider availability of contraceptives.

Young foils misquotes by taping self

In Richmond, Va. Saturday, United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, who has often accused the news media of misquoting him or quoting him out of context, turned on a tape recorder he was wearing under his suit coat before speaking with reporters.

Young made no reference to the recorder in answering questions put to him at Byrd International Airport after his arrival for an appearance at the Church of the Brethren's Annual Conference.

Reporters who have traveled with him say to their knowledge he has never personally carried a tape recorder in the past.

But Young said later he had been using a tape recorder for all of his appearances since he was in Congress. The ambassador says he does not generally speak from prepared texts and that he records his comments in case he decides to write a book about his experiences.

In response to questions at the airport, Young denounced South African police treatment of black demonstrators in Soweto on Saturday as "a kind of savagery we haven't seen in public for a long time in the world."

Police in the Johannesburg suburb fired cannisters of tear gas to disperse thousands of blacks gathered for the burial of a 17-year-old youth whose death was blamed by some blacks on a police beating.

Young said the South African government has exhibited "the kind of primitive racism that feeds the seeds of Communist expansion ...

"There are many good people in South Africa who are white, but they don't seem to be in control."

Young commented only briefly on Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, who referred to Young in a Radio Uganda broadcast as a "puppet diplomat" with "no power to talk about American policy in Africa."

Young said the regimes of South Africa and Uganda are similar — "Neither government is concerned about their citizens."

He said Amin "represents almost nothing" of contemporary thinking of Africa.

"We have no interest in Uganda," he said. "The less said about Idi Amin, the better."

Young, an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, preached at an evening worship service of the Church of the Brethren gathering at Richmond Coliseum.

Elvis still in fighting form

Elvis Presley's age and waistline are both about 42 now. But there's still a hint of the duck-tailed Elvis the Pelvis of 20 years ago in the king of rock 'n' roll.

In Madison, Wis. Friday his limousine stopped next to two teen-agers fighting, and, leaving his bodyguards behind, Presley jumped out.

"He sat there in his car watching for a couple minutes while I was fighting this other guy," recalled Keith Lowry Jr., 17. "Then he jumped out."

"He jumped out like one of those kung fu guys," Lowry said of Presley, a reputed martial arts devotee. "He looked kind of tough."

"All right, I'll take you all on," Presley told the fighters and a teen-age onlooker.

"We kind of froze," Lowry said. "It stopped the fight instantly. That was Elvis, no doubt about it. He was overweight and had jet black hair."

"He shook our hands and said he hoped everything was okay now and that it was all settled," Lowry said. "Then he shook hands with some other people and a woman took pictures of him and then he left. The whole thing took about five minutes."

Presley was in Madison for a Friday night concert.

ELVIS PRESLEY

Sirica

Despite the "long, lonely, sad hours" and the many crucial rulings that helped topple a president, Judge John J. Sirica says the Watergate case was not his toughest.

"Surprisingly, no," Sirica said in a rare interview. "The toughest was a Federal Commerce Commission case in which a trucking company sued a number of railroads for unfair competition."

That was back in the early 1960s, and the case took two years to prepare, 10 months to try and 10 days for a jury to reach a verdict.

Sirica, 73, was in Orlando, Fla. to receive an American Academy of Achievement award Saturday.

He did not belittle the case that thrust him into the world spotlight.

Speaking cautiously of his role in the Watergate case which forced President Nixon to resign and left a number of close aides in jail, Sirica said the rigors of the trial probably caused his heart attack in February 1976.

'Genteel wake' held for Joan Crawford

It was like "a genteel Irish wake," said John Wayne.

"It is the first time the entire film industry has come together to honor one of its own," remarked Myrna Loy.

The two indelible film stars were speakers at "A Tribute to Joan Crawford," held Friday night at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Los Angeles, with the film industry and its guilds participating and a thousand of Miss Crawford's friends and co-workers in the audience.

The star died May 10 in New York at the reported age of 69.

"This is not a somber memorial service," said Kathleen Nolan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, which Miss Crawford joined June 12, 1931, as the 328th member. "She never looked back. Regret was not in her vocabulary."

And so, for a couple of hours, friends talked about the actress who seemed to epitomize stardom. The audience watched scenes of her memorable performances in "Dancing Lady," "Mildred Pierce," "Humoresque," "Torch Song," "The Gorgeous Hussy," "Reunion in France," and others.

Miss Loy claims to be Miss Crawford's oldest friend in Hollywood, since they appeared as showgirls in the 1925 "Pretty Ladies." Miss Loy recalled, "We had to form a human chandelier."

Robert Young, who appeared in four Crawford films, reminisced about his secret marriage 44 years ago — "Film actors weren't supposed to get married in those days and having children was out of the question." He brought his bride home to find two dozen red roses and a copy of "The Prophet," gifts of Joan Crawford.

Wayne recalled seeing Miss Crawford at tea dances in Los Angeles in the late 1920s and termed the star "so courteous, polite and gracious to fellow workers and unknowns."

Steven Spielberg, director of "Jaws," remembered his first directorial assignment, a "Night Gallery" television segment starring Joan Crawford. He was only 21 at the time.

"She treated me like I knew what I was doing," the young director said. "It was a baptism of fire, and I loved her for it."

Water wasters

With all the noise about saving water, has our water company come out with any plan to reward people who conserve water? Do they plan to charge according to the amount used? To whom do we write to ask that pressure be put on our water company to do this? F.B.H., Long Beach.

There are no plans to reward individuals who conserve water, said a spokesman for the Long Beach Water Department, "but we are gradually approaching a single rate, which would treat all customers equally." No specific date has been set for this new rate structure, however.

He said the department also is developing a rationing plan "to have ready in case water conditions worsen."

Under the plan, all customers would be required to use 10 per cent less water than they used at the same time a year ago. Certain types of water use, now discouraged, would be forbidden, such as hosing sidewalks and driveways, watering during the heat of the day and running non-recycling fountains for display purposes.

Conservationists would not be rewarded, but violators would be penalized either by having to pay a surcharge on excess water used, or by having a flow restrictor installed in the water line. The restrictor would reduce water flow from 15 gallons per minute to one gallon a minute.

You can write to the Long Beach Board of Water Commissioners, 1800 E. Wardlow Road, Long Beach, Calif. 90807. Carl E. Gallman is president of the board.

Swarm

There is a swarm of bees that has set up housekeeping in a stucco fence on my property. Can Action Line find someone who will remove them free of charge? I live on a fixed income. Mrs. M.R., Long Beach.

Action Line has put you in touch with a local beekeeper who has promised to help you with the problem at no charge. The Long Beach Animal Shelter, 595-5449, maintains a list of beekeepers who will remove swarms of bees. If the bee-catching job is a simple one, there usually is no charge for the service. But if the swarm is not easily accessible and the job involves extra work, the beekeepers frequently will charge a nominal fee.

Landmark

I have heard that the management of the landmark Long Beach tavern, Joe Jost's, plans to sell the business. Will the establishment remain open? R.L., Huntington Beach.

The Jost family has no plans to sell the colorful bar at 2803 E. Anaheim St. "Three buildings nearby have been condemned and that apparently started the rumor and then when we had to post a new liquor license application because we were making some technical changes in the ownership records, that really started people talking, but we're not making any changes," said a spokesman for the tavern.

The bar actually started out in 1924 as a barber shop, pool hall and soda stand. It survived the March 1933 Long Beach earthquake undamaged and with the repeal of Prohibition later that year, Joe Jost's was on its way to becoming one of Long Beach's best known bars. Joe Jost, the tavern's founder, was born in Hungary in 1890 and came to the United States when he was 16. He died in 1975 at the age of 85, but the bar is still owned by his family.

With the original mahogany bar and furnishings still intact, Jost's has hundreds of regular patrons who enjoy the oldtime atmosphere. With its sawdust-covered floors, pool tables and simple fare (schooners of beer, sausage sandwiches and pickled eggs) the bar has long been a sanctuary for men, but since the 1960s, women have joined the crowds — Joe Jost's only concession to modern times.

Unclaimed

Can Action Line give me the name and address of the agency that governs the moving and storage business? I'm interested in contacting them about possible fraud in the sale of "unopened" cartons at "unclaimed storage" auctions. J.M., Long Beach.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, 12th Street and Constitution Avenue NW, Washington, D.C. 20423, regulates firms that transport goods from state to state, and the Public Utilities Commission, 107 S. Broadway, Room 5109, Los Angeles, Calif. 90012, has jurisdiction over moving firms that operate only in California. Spokesmen for both agencies said they investigate all the complaints they receive and try to resolve as many of them as possible.

These agencies, however, do not regulate freight outlets that advertise unclaimed goods auctions, but are not actually involved in shipping. If you believe such a firm is falsely advertising goods as unclaimed storage items, you can complain to the Federal Trade Commission, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90024, which enforces the federal laws prohibiting false or misleading advertising, but such cases often are difficult to prove.

5 dead, 4 hurt in plane crash

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — A twin-engine Piper Navajo airplane, apparently leased from a Riverside, Calif., flying service, crashed and burned east of Grand Canyon Airport Saturday, killing five of the nine persons reported aboard, authorities said.

Coconino County Sheriff's Detective Jack Judd said the dead were badly burned and dental charts would be needed to complete identification.

THE FOUR injured, all from California, were taken to a Phoenix hospital for treatment.

Hospital officials identified the injured as Eckhardt Esil, 35, and his wife Christine, both of Del Mar; Elizabeth Luttom, 19, Norco, and Brad Anderson, 19, Santa Ana.

The Esils were listed in guarded condition, Miss Luttom and Anderson in fair condition, all suffering second-degree burns.

Dick McLaren, assistant chief ranger for Grand Canyon National Park, said the aircraft apparently lost an engine, plunged into the forest and caught fire some 15 miles south of Hermit's Rest outside the park.

The Federal Aviation Administration Western Regional Office in Los Angeles said the aircraft was leased from the Riverside Air Service at Riverside Municipal Airport. The airplane departed for Arizona at 8:02 a.m., apparently en route to the Grand Canyon.

L.B. gun victims

2 youths' killers sought

Long Beach police continued to search Saturday for the killers of two teen-age boys slain Friday in separate shootings.

Police said autopsies conducted Saturday determined that both youths died from gunshot wounds.

In the first murder, Jerry Timothy Dixon, 18, of 2390 E. 15th St., was found shortly before 4 p.m. at 2184 E. 17th St., where he was visiting.

Homicide Sgt. R.M. Luman said Saturday that an autopsy showed Dixon had been shot once. He said he was not sure what kind of gun was used. On Friday, investigators thought Dixon might have been stabbed.

Luman said the Fire Department first received a call regarding a shooting but was given only sketchy details. When officers arrived, they found the wounded Dixon in the house. Dixon died at St. Mary Medical Center just before 5 p.m.

Dixon had last been seen by a friend 30 minutes before the Fire Department received the call. The same friend was the person who found the body, Luman said. He would not identify the friend.

Although neighbors interviewed Saturday said they thought the shooting was gang-related, Luman would only say that was a possibility.

He said there have been no arrests in the shooting.

In the second shooting, reported at 10:25 p.m., police are looking for two young men. They chased one man in his early 20s on foot but no one was arrested.

Homicide Sgt. D.P. Sallmen said that in the second shooting Adrian Pace Jr., 17, was shot once while trying to intervene in a fight involving his younger brother in front of their apartment at 2133 Elm St.

Sallmen said it was the second fight between the brother and one of the suspects. The first fight occurred about 10:05 p.m. and included "pushing and shoving," according to Sallmen.

The suspect left the apartment complex and returned about 20 minutes later with another young man. Another fight was about to start when Pace intervened and was shot once with a handgun. The gun was the only weapon used in either fight, Sallmen said.

Pace was taken to Memorial Hospital, where he died shortly before midnight.

There were about 15 people at the apartment complex during both fights.

Encino man, 24, drowns at Catalina

A 24-year-old Encino man drowned Saturday while diving in 90 feet of water off Casino Point on Catalina Island, sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said Mark Lank was pronounced dead at 11:55 a.m. at Avalon Hospital.

Lank's diving companion told deputies that when Lank experienced unknown difficulties while diving in Avalon Bay, he began swimming toward the surface and then made a rapid ascent.

Ships watch for overdue sailor

The Coast Guard has alerted vessels in the Pacific to be on the lookout for an Anaheim yachtsman who is overdue on a solo sailing voyage from Newport Harbor to Honolulu.

Dr. Fred Elesh, 55, of 1415 W. North St., left Lido Yacht Anchorage May 10, expecting to make a five-week crossing in his 26-foot yawl Isis, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Elesh's brother-in-law reported him overdue on Wednesday. The Coast Guard then began periodic harbor checks around the islands. A Coast Guard search plane saw no sign of the boat Friday.

Elesh was well-equipped when he left, with at least 45 days' supply of food and water, an emergency radio beacon, a navigation sexton, flares and 15 years' sailing experience.

Last contact with Elesh, according to the Coast Guard, was on June 5, when he talked with the crew of another sailing vessel, the Old Salt, about 800 miles east of Hawaii.

At the time, Elesh reported he had only about eight days of food left, but declined the Old Salt crew's offer for extra food, the spokesman said.

1 held after picketing

Associated Press

An Orange County man was arrested Saturday in downtown Los Angeles at the end of a peaceful demonstration seeking amnesty for alien workers and jobs for minority youth.

William Parker, 32, of Orange, was booked for investigation of aiding and abetting violations of the weapons law.

The demonstrators picketed for 2½ hours in front of the Grand Central Market.

Official offered Foster ride home before murder

One of my jobs was to get them to work better together — to understand each other because there was so much turmoil at the time. I was trying to get the district to hire more minority administrators. I got a call from Oakland and flew up for the interview. Also, I had read in the paper that Oakland had hired Foster from Philadelphia and I was really impressed with what he had to say.

Q. Such as?

A. He said some newer things. He said some things about involving the community and how he wanted to choose principals by having community input.

Q. Why was the former principal there murdered?

A. You know, I never did really get the right story, but that wasn't the only turmoil at the school. Prior to my coming, they had a major riot there that wasn't related to the murder. That school had gone through a major change. In the early '60s, it was almost all white. It was an upper-middle-class school. The district did what many districts do — they built a brand new high school up in the hills and when they redistricted, they put most of the white kids in that school.

Let's face it, I guess it was done on purpose but you couldn't prove that. Therefore, within a few years Castlemont was close to 95 per cent black.

Q. Was there racial tension when you were there?

A. The worst tension was before I got there. There was at least one murder on campus and a major riot and what they tell me was that the teachers were really beaten up.

Q. By students?

A. By students, or outsiders. And the riots spread out onto the streets.

Q. What were the problems? Were black students not getting along with white teachers?

A. The way I see it, and this was all over the country, there were school administrators who weren't recognizing the needs of the kids, and I'm not just talking about black kids. There were very strict rules about hair, dress codes, and everything. Too many high schools were like prisons, and the kids weren't treated as growing adults so the black kids seem to lead the rebellion against this — they wanted black studies. They would go to the principal and usually would be told no they couldn't have certain programs and that would lead to a riot or a walkout. By the time I got there, the faculty was about 50 per cent black and 50 per cent white, and they were divided. The situation was very tense.

Q. The white kids were in the minority?

A. Yes, and I found myself protecting the white kids, which was different from what I was accustomed to. They were the minority so it was always kind of a cute twist because they would come to me and say, "Why can't we be on the student council— the same as what the black kids were saying when they were the minority.

Q. What is your race?

A. Well, I'm not black and I'm not white. My mother and father both had some black blood but it's tough to say what percentage I am. I've had people think I'm black. On my driver's license and birth certificate, it reads Caucasian.

Q. Did the kids think you were black?

A. That's tough to say. Some of the black kids would call me nigger, and I considered that a compliment when they did that. It was more a matter of attitudes about the persons, not whether he was black or white.

Q. You mentioned violence in the district. What sort of fears did teachers have?

A. You know, it's difficult to argue against fear or anxiety when you're teaching and a kid can come off the street and slug you. What led to Foster's death was that he approved for us to have community walkers — parents, who knew the kids and could walk around the campus and say, "Johnny, go to class." Some kids hated them and some parents and groups did, too. Some were saying that Foster was putting police in the schools. But at the same time, the teachers were hitting me up, telling me I had to protect them.

At one school, a teacher threw a guy out of the class. The police came, the guy got the gun away from them and killed both of them. At one of our games, someone fired a shot from a hill and killed a student's mother.

Q. What kind of precautions did you take at your school?

A. Every woman teacher had a necklace. She could press a button for trouble and every man carried a button. There would be a flash in my office and we could get there in two minutes. But the kids knew they had these things.

Q. Were the precautions effective?

A. I don't know if they were any more effective, but they made the teachers feel more secure. It's a horrible way to teach. It's just not conducive to learning. If you have to resort to this, it's a serious problem.

Q. What about specific cases on your campus?

A. I would just bluntly tell the kids, "I know that you fight and are in gangs. But if you're going to do something violent, don't do it on this campus. Do it at night, on weekends. Do it any place else but don't do it here."

Q. Was that the right thing to say? Were they violent off-campus?

A. What else could I say? Yes, there was violence off-campus. We read about our kids in the newspapers. Murders all the time. Sometimes, it was just a girlfriend problem or a stupid argument.

Q. You were with Foster the night he was murdered. Do you recall the events?

A. He asked me to come to a board meeting for a presentation on the proposed security measures because he was getting all this flack and he wanted to explain to the teachers why they needed the security. When I got to the meeting, the place was packed. He came over to me and said, "Dick, I don't want you to say anything. It's too dangerous today."

So I sat through the meeting and they had all these speeches by parents and others threatening his life for proposing these measures.

After the meeting, we walked downstairs together and talked a little.

He said he might not be able to get the security devices, but that he would try to bring them up at the next board meeting. I walked with him to the back door and I asked him if he had a ride because we had driven to meetings together before. He said he did. As I was driving home, I heard it on the radio that he had been shot.

Q. Was that the incident that triggered your resignation?

A. Oh yes, definitely.

Q. Had there been any talk about the SLA before?

A. No, nobody had ever heard about them. I was personally relieved when I watched that shootout (1974 shootout in Los Angeles with police in which six members died) on television — I'll admit it.

Q. What made you come to the ABC district?

A. I had to choose one of three jobs and I chose that one as one of three adult-class coordinators. I had some background in adult education and this looked like it would be a good challenge.

RICHARD ARTHUR

Q. Has the ABC district experienced any of the problems that the Oakland and Los Angeles school districts experienced?

A. No, I haven't seen the problems. I have to give the ABC officials credit. It seems to be one of the best districts in the state. ABC just has not seen a lot of the problems such as violence, and I hope it never does.

Navy copter crash kills 3

LEXINGTON PARK, Md. (AP) — A Naval board of inquiry is investigating the crash of a Navy helicopter on a training flight in which all three crew members died.

The men were identified as Lt. Walter S. Howdyshell, 29, of New Lexington, Ohio; Lt. Richard A. Creighton, 30, of Los Alamitos, Calif., and PO 2.C Robert M. Emery, Jr., 20, of Williams, Ore.

Howdyshell was the pilot, and Creighton was the co-pilot of the SH2F anti-submarine helicopter.

The men were assigned to the 1st Air Test and Evaluation Squadron, at the Patuxent Naval Air Station.

Roof falling down on first-time home buyers

American Dream soars out of reach in '70s

By Robert Lindsey
New York Times Service

James Minor, the U.S. Public Health Service pharmacist in Los Angeles is 28 years old, and his wife, Yvonne, is 26. For months, they watched the price of houses climb seemingly into the stratosphere while their $240 apartment rent left them with nothing but a monthly receipt.

This spring, Mrs. Minor went to work at a local savings bank, the couple plunged deeper into debt than either of them had ever imagined, and they moved into a 10-year-old home in San Pedro for which they paid $52,000.

"It was a tremendous price by the standards we were used to in North Carolina where we grew up," she recalled, "but we wanted our own home. It takes two salaries to keep a house going these days — it's a necessity for women to work if you want to own your own home."

THE Minors, by some projections, may be an endangered species in America: the first-time home buyer.

But, at the same time, they are part of a generation of young people, which, by adjusting their life styles and making sacrifices that their parents could not face, are realizing the American dream — their own home — despite spectacular increases in the price of the dream.

America is in the midst of its biggest single-family housing boom in history. Most housing experts expect at least 1.5 million new homes to be started in 1977, about 20 per cent more than in 1972, the previous record year. And one question that has puzzled some economists is: where are the buyers coming from?

The boom is occurring in spite of price increases that have brought the median cost of a new home nationally to almost $49,000 and caused a steadily widening gap between home prices and average income.

A RECENT federal survey concluded that the median value of a single-family home had risen 73 per cent between 1970 and late 1975, while the median income had risen just 40 per cent. Some experts believe the gap has widened even more since 1975.

There are fewer first-time buyers today than there were even four years ago when, according to government data, the housing market was evenly divided among families who were buying their first homes, and families who already owned a home and were using its accumulated value as down payment on another house. This year, according to a survey by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, only about 35 per cent of purchasers are first-time home buyers.

The price trend has forced more and more young people out of the housing market at a time when members of the widely publicized statistical population bulge born after World War II has reached the age when they expect to have their own home. Some, it appears, will never be able to buy one.

STILL, many young families are buying homes at prices that only a few years ago seemed in the luxury class. How are they doing it? Interviews with developers, real estate agents and scores of young families in 14 cities during the past two weeks have indicated some fundamental changes in the living and home-buying patterns of the 20-to-35-year-old generation:

—More wives are working to buy a home; few young couples can afford a home on one salary; the need for the wife's paycheck is adding further pressure on the national trend of a reduced birth rate.

—Many younger couples are going more deeply into debt than their parents to support the mortgage payments, taxes and other housing expenses; while monthly payments equal to 20 to 25 per cent of income has been typical in the past, the average now is more likely to be 25 to 30 per cent.

—Proportionately higher payments are leaving more and more first-time buyers in financial squeezes that could get them into trouble if one of the two paychecks is lost.

—Many younger couples are having to lower expectations of their first house; instead of a bright new home in a sparkling suburb, more and more are buying older "fixer-upper" homes in the suburbs and, increasingly, more are moving into older homes within cities.

—Many younger couples can only find homes they can afford far from city jobs, which means longer, energy-consuming commutes to work.

—In California and other communities where housing costs are higher than even the national average, prices are increasingly prompting some younger people to move away — to low-cost rural communities or in other states where housing prices still are relatively low, such as in Arizona or parts of the Middle West or South.

Lending institutions once regularly refused to recognize a wife's income in computing eligibility for a mortgage, largely because of an expectation that she would become pregnant. Now, partly because of birth-control technology, and partly from fear of legal action if they do not, more and more banks give full weight to a woman's salary — even, in some cases, when the couple are not married.

Typical of today's first-home buyers are Robert McDonald, 25, and his wife, Diane, 26. He works for a bank in New York City and she works as a secretary for a company in Greenwich, Conn. After saving all of her salary for several years to accumulate a down payment and scrimping where they could, they recently moved from their apartment in Yonkers to a new home in Yorktown Heights.

"My mother comes from the old tradition where you get married and have kids right away," he said. "I tell her, 'Ma, there is no way you can do that.' "

"The most striking thing we've seen in the last two years," Richard Stattler, a realtor in Portland, Ore., said, "has been the increasing number of couples whose salaries nearly match — a husband, say, who makes $800 a month with a wife who earns $700 a month."

Despite this extra earning, the American dreams, increasingly, often turn out to be less in today's economy than young people expect them to be — often, a small home in a remote suburb, a home considerably less fancy than the ones in which they were reared; an older home.

"They expect to start at the top," Sam Feldt, a broker said of first-time buyers in Houston. "They've never had anything less than comfortable and find it difficult to relate to some houses; they're not willing to start with a Volkswagen house, they want a Cadillac."

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board sees some benefit in the economic pressure on young people to take a second look at older homes. "To an increasing degree," the board said recently, "first-time home purchasers appear to be using existing homes more often for their first homes, and expenditures and remodeling and have been accelerating: thus, there is an important improvement in the quality of the existing housing stock that is not measured in looking at housing starts."

For all the young families who are managing to buy their own home, there are many particularly in one-salary, blue-collar families — who are looking at the housing market and despairing. If present conditions continue, some housing experts believe the large number of baby-boom generation Americans priced out of the American dream could become a political force to be reckoned with.

VFW sour on Sacramento

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Blaming "jeers, muggings and abuse" from winos and teen-aged bicycle gangs, the Veterans of Foreign Wars says it may not hold another state convention in Sacramento.

The 5,000 delegates to this year's convention wound up a week-long session Friday with a resolution that said:

"The VFW is not coming back to the city of Sacramento until the winos and gangs are cleared from the (community) center and mall, and it is safe for our ladies and members to walk up and down the streets without being subjected to jeers, muggings and abuse."

Mayor Phillip Isenberg said he was sorry the VFW hadn't informed him earlier because he had been unaware of the problems.

"We might have been able to help them out," the mayor said.

He said police do patrol the mall and convention center area, and that Sacramento has no more public drunks than other cities.

Vote fraud figure loses Congress try

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Richard Tonry, who resigned from Congress in a vote-fraud scandal, was rejected by voters Saturday in the first step of an attempt to regain the House seat he gave up last month.

Just hours earlier, a federal court judge denied Tonry's request for dismissal of an 11-count federal indictment against him.

In the Democratic primary to choose the party's nominee for the seat Tonry resigned, State Rep. Ron Faucheux, 26, had 45,586 votes to 35,445 for Tonry with 90 per cent of 1st District precincts reporting.

A third candidate in the Democratic race, one-time League of Nations delegate Florence Tye Jennison, polled 1,420 votes.

Neither Tonry nor Faucheux made much primary campaign mention of the election fraud in last fall's Democratic race or the indictment charging Tonry with receiving illegal campaign contributions, obstructing justice and offering federal jobs to contributors.

Trial on the charges is set for July 5.

In the Republican primary on Saturday, New Orleans attorney Robert Livingston defeated James Moreau. Livingston had collected 4,082 votes to 958 for Moreau with 293 of 327 precincts counted.

The general election is scheduled for Aug. 27.

Tonry spent four months in Congress this year as successor to Democrat F. Edward Hebert, who did not seek a 19th term. But Tonry resigned May 4 in the midst of a growing vote fraud scandal, saying he wanted to win his seat again "fair and square."

A week later, a federal grand jury indicted Tonry on 11 counts of receiving illegal campaign contributions and trying to hide the deals. His court appearance Saturday was scheduled so attorneys could file pretrial motions in relation to those charges.

Moreau — a Democrat until earlier this month — was defeated by 184 votes in a runoff with Tonry on Oct. 2. That election was later proven fraudulent, largely because of Moreau's persistence in pressing a series of court actions.

Foreign oil threat feared

U.S. energy plan 'may not be strong enough'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's energy plan "may not be strong enough to prevent oil imports from reaching levels that could threaten national security and economic stability," a congressional report said Saturday.

The President failed to consider possible delays that could prevent domestic energy production from meeting his goals, the report said. The domestic supplies would offset dependence on foreign oil.

"If such delays occur, production of oil could fall short of the plan's goals by as much as .5-to-1.5 millions of barrels per day," said the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

"Production of natural gas may also fall below the goals by the equivalent of .5-to-1.5 million barrels of oil per day. Coal production could fall short of the goals by 200 million tons per year. Nuclear power plants could produce 15 per cent less energy than the plan anticipates."

While the report criticizes some aspects of Carter's plan, it says he's moving in the right direction with a national effort to combat the energy crisis.

"Without immediate action, the growth in world demand for oil could exceed the production capacities of exporting nations by the mid-1980's," the report said. "If that were to happen, intense competition among importing nations over scarce supplies of oil and gas they all needed to survive would begin to set the stage for worldwide economic and social upheaval."

The report says the potential delays are different for each source of energy.

Oil and gas production problems would most likely occur because laws and regulations may postpone access to frontier areas for exploration and development, particularly on the Outer Continental Shelf.

Additional coal production facilities would be constructed by the coal industry only if new markets for coal were ensured. Manpower and capital shortages could delay opening of new underground mines, and transportation bottlenecks could prevent coal from reaching areas that needed it.

The report also said:

—The plan emphasizes the importance of setting more realistic prices for energy so that consumers can see total costs more clearly and can make their choices accordingly.

—Given the seriousness of the energy problem, the conservation measures proposed in the plan could be more drastic.

—The plan anticipates higher-than-average growth in the gross national product, continued gains in environmental protection, and a move toward coal as an energy source. The goals are commendable, but the plan does not demonstrate that all three can be achieved simultaneously.

Big Canadian iceberg called Russ spy base

PARIS (AP) — Three French newspapers said Saturday the Soviet Union is using a giant iceberg off northern Canada as a floating spy base, possibly for guiding Russian submarines to American waters.

The Russians say they are using the iceberg, code-named North Pole 22, for meteorological and oceanic research.

The Paris daily France Soir quoted North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) sources in Brussels as saying about 160 Soviets were stationed aboard the iceberg, located north of Canada's Queen Elizabeth Islands and west of Greenland.

According to France Soir, the Pentagon has urged Canada to use discretion in monitoring the base because it said Washington also uses icebergs for surveillance purposes.

Two other papers, Le Figaro and L'Aurore, said the Soviets began using the iceberg station three years ago "like a novel by John Le Carre," author of "The Spy Who Came in From the Cold."

U.S. tries to show need for underseas research

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States took delegates from 54 countries on an Atlantic cruise Saturday in an effort to demonstrate the need for scientific research under the seas.

But not even Elliot Richardson, chief U.S. delegate to the U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea, was convinced the delegates had been persuaded. He said he feared that a general treaty on sea laws which the conference is drafting would have provisions crippling such research.

Scientists aboard the Researcher, a 2,875-ton ship of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, showed the guests instruments used to monitor the character of the weather, water and ocean bottom.

Twelve miles out of New York Harbor, the delegates watched the New York sanitation vessel North Sea dump sewage sludge into 60 feet of water. Then they went below and saw the descending sludge trace a brown cloud on a graph created by sound waves bounced off the ocean floor.

Scientists explained that the technique was being used to study the pattern of undersea pollution.

Richardson told reporters he thought the demonstrations were helpful for an understanding of "the worldwide relevance of science to all countries" and "an appreciation of the openness and straightforwardness" of the research process.

He said proposals before the conference that would hamper scientists grew in part from "the suspicion that scientific research is a cover for something else."

Among the proposals he mentioned were those that would let a country bar research within 200 miles off its coast that "unduly interferes" with its economic activities, to stop a research project judged to have strayed from the stated aim, and to veto publication of research findings on offshore resources.

He said the United States also wanted to remove the word "exclusive" from a provision that would declare 200-mile offshore areas the exclusive economic zone of the coastal state.

Carter OKs arms to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to recommend the sale to Israel of some $115 million in tactical military missiles and vehicles, an administration source said Saturday night.

The sale, first sought by Israel last December, involves 700 armored personnel carriers, 200 wire-guided anti-tank missiles and 15 tank bulldozers, the source said.

Carter's commitment to Israel's future military security has come under question recently from some American Jewish leaders. But the source called attention to Vice President Walter F. Mondale's unqualified promise of a continued commitment in a San Francisco speech June 17.

Mondale said the survival of the Jewish state is not a political question "but rather stands as a moral imperitive of our foreign policy."

Power company 'game' irks environmentalists

NEW YORK (AP) — High school students who are playing an "energy environment game" distributed nationwide by the Edison Electric Institute as an educational aid are really being exposed to a "slick propaganda package promoting nuclear power," the National Audubon Society says.

In the July issue of Audubon, the society's bimonthly magazine, environmental writer Marvin Zeldin says the game portrays environmentalists as "unthinking fools who oppose all proposals for new power plants."

Utility executives, on the other hand, are portrayed in the game as reasonable people equally concerned about environmental and energy problems, he said.

"We think it's a sound educational tool," said Dr. Richard Scheetz, coordinator of educational services for Edison, a trade association of privately owned power companies.

"It's an instructional simulation that presents a complete diversity of points of view so students can decide for themselves," Scheetz said in a telephone interview when asked about the Audubon charges. "There are no predetermined answers."

The game was developed by Creative Studies, a Boston firm that designs educational simulations, and first distributed in 1974. Edison sells the games to utilities for free distribution to schools, or directly to the schools themselves. More than 5,000 of the kits have been distributed nationwide, the institute said.

In the game, students adopt the roles of environmentalists, utility executives, interest groups and residents who must determine the need for a power plant in a fictional area. Each group's recommendation is then considered by a commission, which rules on the need for a plant, what type of plant should be built, and which of three sites should be used.

Thirty-two roles are assigned to students. Zeldin charges that the role cards include biased descriptions of anti-utility groups. For instance, a student radical is said to be "known as an oddball in this area."

A city planner is told he believes more power plants mean more harm to the environment, "and if it takes blackouts to wake people up to the need for change, then blackouts it should be."

Scheetz responded that Zeldin excerpted the description out of context.

"The only ax we have to grind is to get a better informed public in response to demands for energy," Scheetz said.

The Audubon article quotes the designer of the game, Raymond Montgomery, as saying, "The last thing I wanted to do was promote nuclear power. My own personal bias is against nuclear power, but I bent over backward to keep my bias out. Perhaps I bent over backward too far."

No-smoke focus turns on young

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The federal government is planning to shift the focus of its antismoking campaign from middle-aged men to women and teen-agers.

The plan, disclosed by Joseph A. Califano Jr., Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, comes in response to statistics showing that, while millions of men have been persuaded to stop smoking cigarettes, much less progress has been made among women and young people.

Califano told of the plan in response to questions at a news briefing Friday in his offices here. At the same time he elaborated on his often-expressed opposition to smoking. He has been trying to end the seemingly inconsistent government policy of simultaneously discouraging smoking and subsidizing the cultivation of tobacco at a cost of nearly $80 million a year.

He said he hoped the Agriculture Department could find a way to end the subsidies while protecting thousands of small tobacco farmers against economic hardship.

"But I do think that when the evidence is overwhelming that cigarette smoking kills, we should look at the extent to which the government in effect encourages smoking," Califano said. "It is not the function of this government to make it less expensive to buy something that is going to give people lung cancer, heart disease and emphysema." He added that he was "not naive" about the difficulties of getting Congress to terminate the subsidies.

On the cost and quality of medical care, a subject that has embroiled him in controversy, Califano said his department would continue to publish lists of doctors, hospitals and nursing homes receiving federal funds such as Medicare payments.

"My strong belief is that one of the problems that plagues the health industry is lack of information," he said. "We intend to publish more and more of that information as time goes on." He added that "sunshine is going to be a great disinfectant in the health industry."

Agents arrest airline worker

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two federal Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents took an airline employe into custody after he refused to delay the departure of a Los Angeles-bound passenger plane so the agents could board, officials said Saturday.

Rodney Moore, a passenger service employe of United Airlines, was released after U.S. Atty. Sidney Lezak talked with the DEA agents by telephone.

The agents searched Moore and "rather roughly pushed him against a wall," said an airline official.

Greater role for women seen key to volunteer army

By Vernon A. Guidry Jr.
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — A new Defense Department study suggests that the future of the all-volunteer force may depend on expanding the role of women in the military service. The study is part of a "priority analysis" of manpower issues ordered by Defense Secretary Harold Brown and conducted in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for manpower, reserve affairs and logistics.

The work focuses primarily on the use of women to ease the problems and costs of recruiting, expected to increase in the 1980s with the dwindling pool of eligible 18-to-20-year-old males.

"The success of the all-volunteer force may well depend on reducing the number of young male high school graduates the department needs to recruit each year," the study read. "This is potentially the major benefit of using more women, but it is not without costs."

The study said the choice department planners face in the current recruiting market is between a high-quality female recruit and a low-quality male recruit.

"The average woman available . . . is smaller, weighs less and is physically weaker than the vast majority of male recruits," according to the study.

"She is also much brighter, better educated (a high school graduate), scores much higher on the aptitude tests and is much less likely to become a disciplinary problem," it continued.

"WHILE LACK OF strength is raised by the service leaders as the most common problem . . . no positions were identified in the service submission as being closed to women for physiological reasons," the study noted, adding that the question needs more attention.

It pointed out that many of the problems arising in using women in non-traditional positions were also faced when adapting American equipment and procedures to the use of male Oriental allied troops, who were also generally smaller than American men.

"The problems are not insurmountable, but the reality of these physiological differences should not be wished away in our efforts to avoid sexual discrimination or to substitute women for men in sustaining the all-volunteer force," the manpower specialists said.

Among the services, the Air Force has gone farthest in developing strength standards to classify positions without regard to gender.

"About 28 per cent of the women tested by the Air Force could lift 70 pounds to a height of six feet, which was the most stringent test. Virtually all women tested could lift 40 pounds to elbow height (which) would meet the strength needs of most non-combat jobs in the military," the study reported.

Another serious concern is time lost due to pregnancy and childbearing. The services report that pregnancy did result in considerable loss of time.

ACCORDING TO Army figures, about 8 per cent of its enlisted women members became pregnant each year, with about two-thirds of those giving birth. The average pregnancy completed caused 105 days of lost time. Some 40 per cent of women giving birth asked to be relieved from active duty following post-natal leave.

The Army said time lost for abortions approximated that for minor illnesses, averaging 10 to 12 days including just under five days of hospitalization.

The other services reported similar figures but the Navy compared total lost-time rates for enlisted men and women and found that male members lost more time. This was due generally to alcohol and drug use, unauthorized absence and desertion.

There was a catch to the comparison, however. "Both desertions and unauthorized absences may correlate with unpleasantness of an individual's job. Women are less likely to be in such jobs, especially in the Navy," the study pointed out.

The military-wide analysis found a vast difference among the services in the number of positions available for women after the exclusion of combat positions from which they are barred by law. For the Air Force the total available was 93 per cent. The Army combat exclusion was 50 per cent of its positions and the Navy, because of combat and shipboard prohibitions against service by women, excluded 60 per cent of its positions. The Marine Corps had only 27 positions of its slots available to women.

The picture is further complicated by what manpower planners call the "rotation base problem." Men who fill combat, overseas or shipboard duty closed to women must have alternate assignments to which they can rotate when their tours have ended.

THE AIR FORCE says it doesn't need any such positions. The Army says it must reserve 8 per cent of its non-combat jobs as rotation positions. The Navy and Marine Corps, with high shipboard and combat duty levels, experience the greatest problem. The Navy reports that it must keep open 55 per cent of its non-combat jobs for rotation and the Marine Corps must hold open 75 per cent of the positions remaining after combat.

Looking at these factors and others, the Defense Department analysis finds "the Air Force would appear to have a tremendous potential to use women." The study suggests also that some good-quality male recruits turned away by the Air Force might wind up with the other services.

The study identified a number of questions that must be examined before any final judgment on greatly expanding service by women can be made. These include what price the services will pay in flexibility, readiness and deploy ability if they put more women in combat-support roles.

SIGN OF TIMES greets visitors to Inverness in Marin County, which imposed strict water rationing. —AP Wirephoto

Golden State turns slow brown

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — On a hillside near the Pacific Ocean, sheep nuzzle the earth for a few dried blades of grass. A Bay Area hostess rents a portable toilet for a party, and a hotel on Catalina Island asks guests to bring their own linen.

It's the drought, California-style — the effects of two years of unprecedented dry weather changing the life styles and landscapes of the nation's most populous state.

More than 100 cities and towns have been forced to impose mandatory water rationing, since rainfall for the 1976-77 rainy season dropped to about half of normal for the second year in a row.

Officials warn that many of the state's 1,000 reservoirs could dry up. On the caked bottom of a Marin County reservoir a bridge covered for years by stored water bakes in the summer sun.

The marks of the drought are not always apparent at first glance. In Marin County, which imposed strict water rationing in February, tenacious native plants and trees create a deceptive veil of green. But behind it are brown lawns and withered gardens.

The Nicasio Reservoir has dwindled to expose yards of cracked surface like a moonscape and the beds of small creeks and streams in the hills look like the bottoms of empty aquariums.

In Monterey, as in Marin County, San Francisco and Oakland and the surrounding area, officials report full public cooperation with mandatory water rationing. In some areas, officials said water consumption even has dropped below allotments.

Water rationing calling for a 10 per cent cut in use takes effect Friday in Los Angeles, where voluntary reductions didn't achieve the needed savings.

Beverly Hills, where water usually flows as freely as money, has hired a water cop to prowl the estate-lined streets and advise wasteful water users to mend their ways.

And in Hollywood, 20th Century-Fox said they carefully review any movie scenes requiring rain and are stressing shorter shampoos of the pampered hair of the stars.

Fresno in the San Joaquin Valley has set up a "snitch" line which people dial to report on wayward water users, and a local television station has started a "drip of the day" booby prize for water wasters complete with a rubber duck logo.

At Audrey Dodson's Mill Valley home, the sunburst locust out front bloomed this year, but the yellow clusters were tight and dull.

Mrs. Dodson and other customers of the Marin Municipal Water District can't spare much water for home landscaping because they are limited to 46 gallons per person per day. However, like many of her friends, Mrs. Dodson has kept her swimming pool full by buying water by the truckload.

She remembers the time when she wouldn't bother to turn off the faucet if she had to dash to answer the telephone.

"I won't do that ever again," she said. "It's surprising the things you become aware of, how to conserve."

The mountains guarding most of California's 1,072-mile Pacific Ocean coastline turn golden every year by the end of the summer. This year they turned to parchment by June.

For most people, the hardest part of rationing is changing their bathroom habits. It means no more long showers or luxurious bubble baths, shutting off water while brushing teeth and shaving.

Tanker crowding fear discounted

Sohio, foes see little surplus

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

Predictions that the congestion of Alaskan oil tankers could make the Port of Long Beach look like a seagoing Los Angeles International Airport are being discounted by some unlikely sources.

The forecast was made this week by Jim McJunkin, general manager of the Port of Long Beach, who told city officials that the anticipated flood of North Slope oil into West Coast ports later this year could jeopardize port safety.

McJunkin's comments came as he told the City Council time is running short for a decision on the proposed Sohio supertanker terminal to receive the Alaskan oil and ship it east through a 1,000-mile pipeline to Texas.

Unless the project is built, McJunkin claimed, "the port can expect a hazardous situation from the great number of oil tankers that can be expected to start jamming into Long Beach in August."

Opponents of the Sohio project — and even Sohio itself — say it isn't so. They discount the forecast as too much, too soon.

"This is just my prophesy at the moment," McJunkin said. "No, I haven't had any oil companies call me and say, 'We'll have 50 tankers in Long Beach in October.'

"They wouldn't call ahead, anyway.

"But the tankers will be anchoring inside the breakwater," he explained. "I'm saying this will be hazardous because of all that lightering traffic."

Lightering, he said, involves transferring some of a supertanker's cargo to smaller ships when the supertanker rides too deep to enter a port.

For example, a tanker drawing 65 feet would have to discharge more than 25 per cent of its cargo to float high enough to enter a port having a depth of only 45 feet.

"Consider the air pollution, too," McJunkin added. "Having to lighter those tankers will mean having to unload the same cargo twice — doubling the emissions.

"And the oil companies will use the larger tankers," McJunkin predicted. "More economical, and they'll come here rather than make the passage through the Panama Canal.

"Why? Because at the moment you can get the same price for that oil here as you could in the Gulf states. It makes sense to unload here.

"They'll want to anchor them in the harbor, and all that shuttling back and forth can't improve the safety situation."

He said he considers the potential hazards far more serious than those posed by a proper terminal with all its safeguards.

"It's imperative we develop the capacity to handle these tankers," he said, "because all that oil is coming. It can't be avoided."

Few others believe McJunkin's doomsday forecast.

There are only six berths on the West Coast that can accommodate the ships McJunkin has in mind. Three are in Long Beach — two operated by Texaco and one by Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) — while there is one each in Los Angeles, El Segundo and Cherry Point, Wash.

Sohio itself says McJunkin's presumed port congestion means more tankers would have to be arriving than could be unloaded.

"And that presumes the surplus — which is the whole reason we need to build the Long Beach terminal," said Bernerd Buttler, spokesman at Sohio headquarters in Cleveland.

"But there won't be a surplus this year," he said. "Initial output from the pipeline will be 300,000 barrels a day, and it will increase in the fall to 600,000 barrels.

"We already know the West Coast can absorb at least 600,000 barrels a day.

"It's not until December that the (Alaskan) pipeline will be approaching capacity — 1.2 million barrels a day," Buttler said. "So that surplus, if it ever materializes, is a long way off.

"And when there is one, there are still two ways to go," he went on. "Either take it through the Panama Canal to the East, which we've already said we'll do, or find some way to swap it with Japan.

"You have to understand," he emphasized, "that this Alaskan oil will 'backout' — replace — foreign oil now coming into California and Washington.

"So it's not that Alaskan oil comes in in addition to foreign oil; it arrives instead of the foreign product."

A spokesman for ARCO in Los Angeles agreed.

"There's only one thing to do with the oil," he said. "Sell it.

"We'll sell to whomever is buying — and the East is buying. Yes, we'll try to land as much on the West Coast as possible, but after that it goes East.

"The point is: We're going to move that oil."

Robert Kilpatrick, a young Long Beach attorney leading the fight against construction of the Sohio terminal, says he would agree with Buttler — to a point.

"Look," he said, "they want to sell that oil. If Sohio or anyone else can't get it off the ship in Long Beach, they'll take it through the canal and sell it east.

"Ships aren't going to stack up in Long Beach," Kilpatrick said.

"But as to this 'backout' argument, I don't believe it. Sohio doesn't have any contracts to sell that Alaskan oil in Southern California. The foreign sources do.

"So it's my guess that all of Sohio's oil will probably go through the canal — if Sohio doesn't first stampede Congress into approving sales or swaps with Japan."

Several government agencies will be involved in the landing of Alaskan oil in Long Beach, but to date they are noncommittal.

The State Air Resources Board says it won't be involved in this particular question of Alaskan oil because the issue involves existing facilities.

"It would be different if someone wanted to build a new facility or terminal," said Jean Cone, ARB spokeswoman.

"But because the terminals are already in place, it's a local air quality problem — if it's one at all."

The Coast Guard in Long Beach acknowledges it would have jurisdiction over this tanker traffic and density in the port, but spokesmen decline comment on specifics.

"We're making a study of this potential port problem," one Coast Guard spokesman said. "We'll know more later.

"Right now, we're involved with tanker traffic patterns through the Santa Barbara Channel."

McJunkin remains adamant.

"When it finally gets here," he insists, "I don't want people saying, 'Why didn't you tell us?' "

However, the tank farm would be adjacent to a proposed $62-million bulk-petroleum storage facility that would have a storage capacity of 8.6 million barrels.

That proposal, by Paktank Pacific Co., is being revived, according to Allen Goodley, chief of the engineering branch of the ARB in Sacramento. He said representatives of Paktank recently discussed the possibility of air quality tradeoffs for their project.

Last week Exxon Pipeline Co. withdrew financial support for the Sohio pipeline to carry Alaskan crude oil from Long Beach to Texas. The company cited as its reason "unreasonable permit requirements" being imposed by state air quality authorities.

Sohio is still proceeding with its $60-million terminal and pipeline. The State Coastal Commission has said it will review the project this summer.

IN December 1975, Long Beach Harbor was selected over Los Angeles Harbor by Sohio as its preferred site for the terminal that could handle 600,000 barrels of oil a day with storage for 3.7 million barrels at the harbor and additional inland storage capacity.

Goodley said the air quality effects from all petroleum-related facilities in the harbor area are being analyzed by his agency. Although he initially was unaware of the Western proposal, after checking he determined that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had been approached by Western last year but the project then went into the EPA inactive file.

Under the lease option agreement between Western and Los Angeles Harbor, Western pays $6,000 per month to the city to hold 55 acres for two years with the possibility of a one-year extension.

The low-sulphur facility located at the former Westoil refinery near Gaffey Street and the Harbor Freeway in San Pedro will be able to process 100,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

The current plans call for tankers to unload the oil at Berths 45-47, pumping the oil through an existing Mobil pipleine to Terminal Island and the tank farm site, south of Seaside Avenue and east of Ferry Street.

Western's parent company, Coastal States, owns refineries and is involved in natural gas transmission and distribution and the manufacturing of nitrogen chemicals. It employs nearly 5,000 workers and had a net profit in 1975 of $54 million on sales of $1.8 billion.

Carter doubts Russ thaw

By David Binder
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter doubts there will be a positive trend in the evolution of U.S.-Soviet relations in the coming months, a close White House aide said Saturday after the President had met for 75 minutes with his top foreign policy advisers.

The aide said Carter's doubts were based on his belief that the Soviet leadership needed time to adjust to his foreign policy initiatives and that Moscow was also preoccupied with serious domestic problems, principally involving economic shortcomings.

Over a longer period, the aide continued, Carter is convinced that the Soviet Union and the United States will find fruitful areas for cooperation.

Carter conferred on a wide range of foreign policy issues over breakfast with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Vice President Mondale and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's adviser on national security.

The discussion centered on Vance's report on President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's impressions of Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, who visited France for three days last week.

Other topics reviewed at the meeting were human rights issues, the Middle East conflict and relations between the industrialized nations and developing countries.

Rex Granum, deputy White House spokesman, said later that Carter intended the meeting to be the first of regular weekly reviews of international developments by the President and his advisers.

PRESIDENT CARTER'S short-term view of relations with the Soviet Union was conveyed in remarks made public Saturday by the White House following his meeting Friday afternoon with a group of American news editors.

Carter said his dispute with the Soviet leadership on human rights and other issues "has provided a greater obstacle to other friendly pursuits," as in the SALT, or strategic arms limitations talks, than he had expected.

He added, in regard to his attempt to curb and if possible to reduce the size and number of strategic weapons between the two major powers: "We have not achieved success yet in any of these efforts, and may not. I can't guarantee success."

The President told the editors that he believed some of the international questions were "going to take more time to resolve, if they are solved, than I had previously thought."

"There has been a surprising adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights," he added. "We have never singled them out. I think I have been quite reticent in trying to publicly condemn the Soviets. I have never said anything except complimentary things about Mr. Brezhnev, for instance. But apparently that has provided a greater obstacle to other friendly pursuits, common goals, like in SALT, than I had anticipated."

A Presidential aide, interpreting these remarks, said that the Carter administration had concluded that the Soviet leadership was going through a somewhat painful readjustment of perception of relations between the two countries.

THE ASSISTANT added that Carter had also concluded the readjustment was inevitable — that the Soviet Union had viewed the United States under the Ford and Nixon administrations, however skillful, as running a kind of defensive, rearguard foreign policy of retreat.

The Soviet leadership was therefore caught unawares, the aide continued, by Carter's challenges on human rights issues, his demands to curb arms sales, complete a total ban of nuclear tests, and demilitarize the Indian Ocean. These were all areas where the Soviet Union had felt secure and, in some, they felt they enjoyed a propaganda edge.

Carter and his advisers feel the Soviet leaders have been dismayed by the thought that their concept of the decline of the West might no longer be valid, the residential aide said.

This, together with Carter's belief that the Communist system is slow to shift perceptions also explains the President's suggestion that negotiations with the Soviet Union might take longer than he had expected, the aide went on.

The aide said Carter was well aware of the bumpy relationship pertaining between Moscow and Washington and said it would probably continue for some months.

HEW to list doctors' pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A revised list of doctors doing $100,000 or more in Medicare business a year will include 214 who asked that their names be omitted, says Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano Jr.

"We will not let a doctor decide if he wants to be listed," Califano told a news briefing.

"The taxpayers of this country have a right to know who is getting federal money and how much he is receiving," he said. "We can't have a secret government payment system for doctors and hospitals when we don't have that for anyone else."

Califano said the listing did not invade doctors' privacy because of the public money involved.

The question of whether to list protesting doctors has slowed attempts to correct an error-riddled list published in March which named 409 solo practitioners, 1,752 group practices and 58 laboratories.

Asking not to be included on the new list are 214 of 469 physicians who complained of errors concerning their 1975 earnings from Medicare, the federal health assistance program for the elderly.

"I have been told that about half of the complaining doctors don't want to be listed and won't supply any other information," Califano said.

Without added information from the doctors, it may not be possible to correct all the errors.

But Califano said the physicians would be listed anyway, with a notation of the complaint and whether he or she declined to give further information.

Califano, who has apologized to physicians and the American Medical Association for the previous errors, said the new list should be out in a few weeks.

In other matters, Califano said he did not know if the Supreme Court ruling last Monday on abortion would eventually increase welfare rolls. The high court said states could refuse to pay for abortions unrelated to medical necessities with public funds.

He re-stated the Carter administration's opposition to using federal money for abortion unless the life of the mother is threatened.

Califano said there were many alternatives to abortion, such as sex education and trying to get at the roots of the teen-age pregnancy problem.

4th drowning victim found

LOS BANOS (AP) — Fishermen recovered the body of a young girl Saturday in San Luis Reservoir, apparently the last of four members of the same family who drowned when a boat capsized two weeks earlier.

Authorities said they were awaiting positive identification on whether the body was that of Jennifer Hanly, 2.

LBJ skin cancer reported; denied by widow, doctor

By Lawrence Altman
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The Reader's Digest reported Saturday that Lyndon B. Johnson had a secret operation for skin cancer when he was president, but his widow and physician cast doubt on the story.

The report in the July issue was based on an interview with Dr. Edmund Klein, a dermatologist and cancer researcher in Buffalo, who said, "It's been a closely held secret until now, but I can tell you authoritatively that President Lyndon B. Johnson had skin cancer."

Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson, responding to questions about the article, said she had no knowledge that skin cancer had ever been diagnosed in her husband.

Adm. George G. Burkley, physician to Johnson at the White House, said in an interview that small spots that resulted from chronic sun exposure and callus-like growths had been removed several times from the back of Johnson's hands.

Burkley, in California, said he did not have immediate access to his medical records on Johnson. But he said, "I don't remember that any of the lesions ever were diagnosed as a true skin cancer."

Klein said he was called by the White House as a consultant in the mid-1960s by Johnson's personal physician.

"I was informed in the utmost secrecy that the president had a moderately severe case of skin cancer and was asked for my opinion on how to treat it," he said in the article. He added:

"Since the president's advisers were afraid that any mention of the word 'cancer' in connection with the president of the United States might have a devastating impact, the operation was performed secretly in Washington — with satisfactory results."

Skin cancer is the most common form of cancer and generally the most easily cured. The overwhelming majority of the 300,000 new skin cancers diagnosed each year do not spread or cause fatal damage if treated early and properly.

Klein said in an interview that the diagnosis of cancer — even though a skin cancer — in a president would have led the public to have put far greater significance on the word "cancer" than was medically warranted.

Mrs. Johnson said in her statement:

"As far as I know, the spots on Lyndon's hands were never diagnosed as cancer, but their removal from time to time was a preventive measure. Sun spots are a common ailment in this part of the country where people live outdoors and in the sun as Lyndon did."

Reporters find other area law agencies 'open'

I,P-T survey rates news policies

A survey by I,P-T staff members reveals that 13 law enforcement agencies in areas surrounding Long Beach have news media policies less restrictive than the new Long Beach Police Department policy.

The agencies and their media policies as determined by the survey include:

—Los Angeles Police Department: The policy as stated by public information officer Lt. Dan Cook stresses "full cooperation with the news media." Crime and arrest reports, aside from those regarded as of security-sensitive nature, are available to accredited media representatives. Watch commanders, duty officers, and officers in the field are authorized to give information to the media without clearance by superior officers. Veteran police reporters stationed at Parker Center reported the cooperation is good, and they experience no trouble in obtaining prompt information.

—Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department: Deputy Anthony Silas of the Sheriff's Information Bureau quoted basic policy as "every sworn member of the Sheriff's Department has been directed to cooperate fully with representatives of the media." Police reports and arrest reports are available to accredited news representatives. I, P-T reporter Hal Lowe, covering the Lakewood, Norwalk, Carson, Downey and Lynwood stations, termed the cooperation "excellent, above and beyond the call of duty."

—Signal Hill Police Department: Chief Richard Denham expressed his policy as "absolute, unreserved and unqualified cooperation with any accredited media representatives," and says all crime reports, arrest reports, and any related paperwork are available to the media at any time. Denham said all Signal Hill officers have been instructed to follow this policy and provide any information, written or verbal, without necessity of checking with superiors. I,P-T reporters dealing with the Signal Hill department verified that the cooperation is as good in practice as it is in theory.

—Seal Beach Police Department: Capt. Sam D'Amico, queried in the absence of Chief Edward Cibbarelli, said the department's basic policy is contained in a general order signed by the chief which states general information may be given by any duty officer or officer in the field without clearance. Specific information involving major crimes or cases under investigation are handled by an officer of command rank. Crime and arrest reports are available to the media for cursory use, and a media log of activity over each 24-hour shift is kept at the station for telephone relay to five print and broadcast representatives who contact the department on a daily basis. Media representatives covering the Seal Beach department called the cooperation good.

—Torrance Police Department Lt. James Papst, speaking in the absence on vacation of Chief Donald Nash, said the basic departmental policy is contained in a general order which states watch commanders or their designates are responsible for release of news to the media. Police reports and arrest reports are available to accredited media representatives, and the station maintains a "press board" at the information desk with rundowns on cases and incidents believed newsworthy. Ranking field officers are authorized to give information without clearance. News media representatives covering this department rated the cooperation as good.

—Compton Police Department: In this relatively small department, most media relations are handled personally by Chief Joseph T. Rouzan, or by officers he designates in his absence. Police and arrest reports are not routinely available from station personnel but are not flatly denied on authorization from Rouzan. Cooperation in this department was termed by news representatives as the worst of the 13 agencies listed in the survey, but better than Long Beach under the new policy.

'Press have no access to any police reports'

The May 20 administrative directive signed by acting police chief Carl Calkins reads in full:

"In keeping with the basic concept that the public has the right to know, the Long Beach Police Department seeks to establish a cooperative climate in which the media may obtain information in a manner which does not hamper police operations. However, certain information must be withheld in order to protect individuals' right to privacy, to avoid interference with investigative operations or because it is legally privileged.

"The following News Media Policy adheres to the April 1977 City Attorney's opinion relative to media relations.

"The Public Information Officer(s) will be assigned to the Public Affairs Section. The objective of media liaison is to establish an accurate, concise, and objective method of disseminating information.

"The following policy guidelines are in effect regarding personnel releasing information to the media:

"Members of the media will not have access to any police reports.

"Members of the media will only have access to the departmental 24-hour crime synopsis sheets.

"Members of the media requiring more detailed information regarding a crime or incident will contact the assigned investigator.

"Personal information regarding juveniles involved in criminal acts will not be released. Release of general information regarding the crime, arrest, and/or prosecution is permissible.

"Personnel at the scene of an incident will refer the media to the Press Information Officer (P.I.O.). In the absence of a P.I.O., the Senior Investigator present will act as media liaison. The Senior Investigator may delegate media liaison to the senior ranking member of the Field Operations Bureau. In the absence of a P.I.O. or Investigator, the senior ranking member of the Field Operations Bureau will assume responsibility for media releases.

"Media personnel requesting information on access to the scene of an incident will be required to display press passes authorized by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, Los Angeles Police Department, or Orange County Sheriff's Department.

"Section 409.D of the California Penal Code allows duly authorized members of the press access to areas closed to the general public. The areas include those closed due to riot, fire, flood, earthquake, or other disasters. This section does not entitle the press access to areas closed off for criminal investigation.

"Departmental personnel should use the following criteria when releasing information to the media:

"A. Consider if disclosure of information such as name, address, etc., would jeopardize the safety of the victim, witness, or suspect.

"B. Consider if disclosure of information would hinder the investigation, apprehension, or prosecution of the suspect.

"C. Personnel releasing departmental information verbally or in writing will file a memorandum to his Commanding Officer prior to completion of his tour of duty, with a copy incorporating the subject matter to the Commanding Officer Public Affairs Section. This is not to be construed as an act of censorship, but rather as a method to relay the information in order that appropriate responses can be made when necessary."

A memorandum issued by the acting chief June 15 modified the directive to make some crime reports available for review by authorized media personnel, but these do not include homicides, suicides, discharge of firearms by police officers, dead bodies, arrest reports, follow-up reports, or reports of stolen/recovered vehicles.

Despite this modification, the memorandum concluded:

"It should be noted that Administrative Directive AD 10/77 (May 20) remains in effect."

The June 15 memorandum signed by the acting chief reads:

"Effective immediately all crime reports, excluding homicides, suicides, dead bodies, or discharge of firearms by police officers, will be made available for review by authorized media personnel. Also excluded are arrest reports, stolen/recovered vehicle reports, and follow-up reports.

"Crime report information authorized for news media review will be at the desk of the Report Review Sergeant, located in the Main Station Lobby. The Report Review Sergeant, or Business Desk personnel, will maintain security on the clipboard file and the duplication or removal of copies will not be permitted. The media will not have access to the Departmental Watch Report or any other police reports or files, other than the aforementioned crime reports.

"Maintenance of the clipboard file will be the responsibility of the Records Division and will encompass an approximate 48-hour period. This procedure will alleviate Watch Commanders from the responsibility of having to release information on the aforementioned reports.

"It should be noted that Administrative Directive AD-10/77 remains in effect."

Calkins clamps news blackout

"But not what the police have to do?" the reporter asked.

"Our job isn't making news," Calkins responded.

The chief also declined to accept the statement that under state law the burden is on a public agency to demonstrate a need for confidentiality and nondisclosure in a given case. He said he believed a police chief could rule that "there will be no information on crime given to any members of the media" except through court records.

The acting chief said he had not known of Chief Mooney's news media policy. He said he thought the department had no formal policy at all.

"Things were loosely run," Calkins declared. "We've managed to improve the operation of the department in the last year. The morale is up. Our crime rate for the first six months of this year is down over 10 per cent compared to the first six months of last year. I'm a stricter administrator than maybe the prior administrators have been.

"I speak in a different language, apparently, than the media — and I am different. I'm different than Mooney, and I'm different than Kortz."

The "right to privacy" issue cited in the Calkins directive was treated in a California Supreme Court case last year in which the court held that the right "does not prevail over the right of the public to an honest and impartial government."

In Loder vs. San Diego Judicial District, the court ruled: "A suspect's constitutional right of privacy is not violated by prompt and accurate public reporting of the facts and circumstances of his arrest."

Calkins' new policy changes a long tradition of open access to police reports in Long Beach and a longtime understanding between press and police which meant that some information was disclosed to reporters but not printed. Names of crime victims or witnesses were not used if they could be in jeopardy, and stories were not printed which would jeopardize an investigation, a search or an arrest.

The clearest explanation of that working relationship in recent years came in 1972 from then Chief Mooney. In an April 27 memorandum to the department, he wrote:

"Press relations are important to each and every one of us as law enforcement officers. . . . Members of the press operating in the city of Long Beach can be identified by a press pass issued by the sheriff of Los Angeles County. . . . Members of the press approaching any officer and asking direction or assistance should be helped in any way possible, as the news media are certainly an asset to law enforcement and have a powerful influence in creating a good image between the police and the public we serve."

Inmates sack N.M. prison

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Much of a New Mexico state prison maximum-security cell block was in ruins Saturday after an inmate riot which erupted when an apparent escape attempt was thwarted.

Warden C.J. Malley said a squad of specially trained and equipped guards quickly restored order. No injuries were reported.

"Porcelain commodes were ripped off the walls and broken to pieces, beds were taken apart where they could be used as weapons, and (rioters) stopped up the commodes and caused three inches of flooding," Malley said.

Prison guard Larry Mendoza was making a routine patrol through Cell Block 3, a segregation unit, about 10:30 p.m. Friday when he was grabbed by inmate Manuel Maldonado, 21.

Border Patrol tracks flying drug suspects

HANFORD (AP) — With border patrolmen keeping track of the suspects from an airplane, authorities captured two men early Saturday for investigation of smuggling $750,000 worth of marijuana.

Border Patrol agents in the observer plane had followed the suspects' airplane from Mexico to a landing strip in Kings County. They notified the California Highway Patrol and sheriff's offices in Kings and Kern counties that two cars were leaving the area.

The ground chase took officers over rural, unpaved roads looking for cars running without lights in the early morning darkness. The Border Patrol agents kept watch from the air and alerted the ground crews whenever they saw one of the suspect vehicles.

Finally, Darrell Lee Tarkington, 38, of Hanford, was arrested at an intersection near Wasco in Kern County. And Richard Ellis, 47, of Lemoore, was captured in Kings County. Officers said they confiscated about 2,400 pounds of marijuana.

150 Tijuana police dismissed for abuses

TIJUANA (AP) — More than 150 police officers here have been dismissed in recent months for allegedly assaulting, robbing and extorting bribes from Mexicans as they crossed illegally into the United States.

The latest firings occurred Friday after a group of officers and Mayor Fernando Marquez Arce, all masquerading as persons about to cross the border illegally, arrested two other officers.

The 150 dismissals are part of a campaign by Police Chief Antonio Escobedo to rid his force of corruption.

More than 320 officers, including the 150 suspected of the attacks on border crossers, have been fired since Escobedo took office 18 months ago.

Officials said veteran police officers, including Subcommander Martin Esquibel, have been dismissed in the past 10 days.

Esquibel, appointed as Escobedo's second in command about 18 months ago, was asked to submit his resignation after Escobedo held him responsible for failing to stop officers under his command from assaulting the border crossers.

Lynwood woman and son found strangled

A 23-year-old woman and her 8-year-old son were found strangled in their Lynwood apartment early Saturday, Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said the bodies of Linda Brown and her son, Johnny Cannon, were found at 12:10 a.m. at 3141 Euclid Ave. by relatives.

No one was in custody in the case, but deputies were trying to locate the woman's husband for questioning.

There was no apparent motive for the killings. The bodies were fully clothed, deputies said. It was not known whether the apartment had been ransacked.

Bicentennials— 'plural, please'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration is going out of business this week with the request that the 1987 bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution not be neglected.

Because the government agency which orchestrated the 200th Independence Day festivities last year closes its doors Thursday, there will be no national coordination or promotion of the bicentennial dates of the many important events in the nation's early years.

The 200th anniversary of the United States flag already has passed this month virtually unnoticed. Coming up later this year with local preparations at best are the bicentennials of George Washington's encampment at Valley Forge, the arrival of Lafayette and the battle of Saratoga, which were among the most important events of the Revolution.

Later are the bicentennials of the exploits of John Paul Jones and Molly Pitcher, the perfidy of Benedict Arnold, the diplomacy of Benjamin Franklin, the victory of the backwoods patriots at Kings Mountain and the final victory at Yorktown, to name just a few.

In her farewell letter to President Carter, acting ARBA Administrator Jean McKee urges that he appoint a task force to begin studying a proper commemoration for the Constitution, hinting that it fits Carter's oft-expressed concern for citizen participation.

"It surely follows that a better knowledge and understanding of this document of democracy is an integral part of encouraging citizen participation, from voting on election days to influencing day-to-day decisions at all levels of government," Miss McKee wrote.

THE SAME recommendation will be made in the final report of the American Revolution Bicentennial Board, which oversees the ARBA.

A draft of the board's final report says the ARBA did a good job of drawing attention to the Declaration of Independence and its bicentennial last July 4 but said that isn't enough.

"That great document represents the beginning, not the end, of the creative process which brought into being the United States of America," says the draft report.

Referring to the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, the report says: "It would seem appropriate as we approach the 200th anniversary of these basic documents that the years 1987-89 provide an opportunity for a focus of attention on and an appraisal of the great principles embodied in them which have supported our form of government and democratic way of life through two centuries."

The Constitution was drafted in the summer of 1787 in Philadelphia in the same room where the Declaration of Independence had been produced.

It was ratified by most of the states over the next two years and became effective in the spring of 1789, with George Washington as the first president under the Constitution.

The Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments, was added in 1791.

Commemoration of these documents on their bicentennials would still leave out the last five years of the Revolution, which made all the rest possible. By comparison, the Civil War Centennial a decade ago celebrated every battle and skirmish from Ft. Sumter to Appomattox over a five-year span, compared to the 16 months given the Revolution's Bicentennial.

Other area law agencies 'open to reporters'

—Garden Grove Police Department: Chief Francis R. Kessler said his department has a directive ordering "an open policy of full cooperation with the media, respecting all rights of print and broadcast media representatives." Kessler said the department goes further when possible by initiating press contacts on newsworthy cases. Crime and arrest reports are available to accredited media representatives, and all sworn personnel directed to cooperate. Newsmen called the cooperation adequate to good.

—Fullerton Police Department: Chief Wayne H. Bornhoft said the basic departmental policy is "prompt and courteous cooperation with the media, with the reporting officer using his or her own discretion on aspects to be withheld if the safety of victims or witnesses is threatened. Crime and arrest reports are available to the media, and there are no directives requiring personnel to clear general information with superiors. Working newsmen said the cooperation ranges "from adequate to very good."

—Newport Beach Police Department: Lt. Arb Campbell, speaking in the absence of Chief B. J. Glavas, said the basic departmental policy is contained in a general order calling for cooperation with the media. Station commanders, duty officers, and personnel in the field are authorized to give general information to accredited media representatives without necessity of clearance. Crime and arrest reports are available to media representatives. Press contacts rated the cooperation in practice as about the same as in Fullerton and Garden Grove.

—Huntington Beach Police Department: Chief Earl Robitaille said a general order directs all officers under his command to supply information promptly and courteously to accredited media representatives. Crime and arrest reports are available to media representatives, and a press log containing summaries of newsworthy cases and events is maintained. Station officers and officers in the field are authorized to give general information to the media without necessity of clearance. News representatives contacting this station rated the cooperation as good.

—Santa Ana Police Department: Lt. Ted Weatherly, speaking in absence of Chief Raymond C. Davis, said the department has "a basic policy of completely open relations with the media. All sworn members are directed to follow this policy." Further, he added, officers are furnished press release forms and asked to fill them out in cases involving major crimes as well as human interest stories so they can be turned over to media representatives. Weatherly said the department makes sure that media representatives get copies of supplemental and follow-up reports in major cases. Long Beach and Santa Ana newsmen contacting this department agreed that the cooperation is good.

—Anaheim Police Department: Chief Harold Bastrup summarized his basic media policy as "close cooperation, extending all the help possible." Files of crime and arrest reports are maintained exclusively for accredited media representatives, and newspeople are welcome to use the watch commander's report file if someone else is busy with the pressroom files. Duty officers and officers in the field are authorized to give any desired information to the media. Bastrup added: "We are proud to say we have excellent working relationships with the media. We've never had problems of any kind." Orange County and Long Beach news representatives verified Bastrup's latter statement.

—Orange County Sheriff's Office: A deputy who desired to remain anonymous, after efforts failed to reach Sheriff Brad Gates or designated policy spokesmen, summed up the basic policy as "cooperation qualified by circumstances." He said crime and arrest reports are available to accredited members of the media, and duty officers and officers in the field are authorized to give information to accredited representatives of the media. Long Beach and Orange County news representatives customarily dealing with this department agreed that the cooperation extended in practice "is at least as good and more often better" than the policy voiced by the deputy.

Car thief unloads sleepy passenger

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Nearly six hours after a young man stole a car at a hamburger stand and sped away with an 8-month-old baby asleep in her toddler's seat, the infant was found alive and well, abandoned outside an apartment house Saturday morning.

"When someone steals a car, the only thing he is looking at is the ignition. He could have been completely unaware of the baby beside him," a police spokesman said. "He did leave the baby off as soon as possible."

Sgt. Dennis Davis said a tenant in the apartment building notified police after becoming suspicious because a baby had been crying most of the night.

Kristina Marie Seidell, hungry and wet, was already in the arms of the tenant when officers arrived, Davis said.

"It was plenty warm outside and the baby was just fine," he said.

A short time later, police found the car abandoned nearby.

The baby had been taken along with her mother's automobile Friday night when a young man stole the car, which had been left unattended for a few minutes, police said. As the car sped off, the baby's mother, Barbara Seidell, threw herself at the door trying to rescue her child.

Police said that Mrs. Seidell had left the baby asleep in a toddler's seat and the keys in the ignition while picking up a food order.

Croat bombing sifted

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Investigators sifting through rubble at the bombed home of the president of the Croatian Fraternal Union found clock-like parts Saturday that may have been part of a detonator.

Stephen Abbate, an agent of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said two explosions Friday night heavily damaged the split-level Penn Hills home of John Badovinac, 69.

He said Badovinac and his wife, Catherine, were en route to St. Louis for a Junior Cultural Taburiza Festival when the explosions occurred but returned home immediately.

No injuries were reported.

Badovinac heads the largest organization of Croatians in this country, and some people believe the bombings may have been the work of radicals supporting an independent Croatia, now part of Yugoslavia.

One of the bombs was placed outside a bedroom window, the other near a bathroom window. The explosions blew out walls on the left side and rear of the Badovinac home and caused slight damage to neighboring homes.

ARMED AND READY to join search for girls' killer are three members of Oklahoma Highway Patrol SWAT team.

Killer hunt goes on amid fear in Ozarks

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — They think he's still out there, wandering the densely wooded limestone foothills of the Ozarks. The posse doggedly hunts the man accused of sexually assaulting and killing three Girl Scouts nearly two weeks ago.

Saturday morning, about 150 lawmen and a handful of volunteer citizens continued their search for Gene Leroy Hart, an escaped convict who has been charged in the deaths. Officers have said Hart is a native of the area and is an experienced backwoodsman.

On Friday, about 400 persons — including the father of one of the victims — helped in the search. But most of them were sent home later because authorities said inexperienced hunters were hindering professional efforts to find clues that might lead to Hart.

Police have advised residents of farms, ranches and homes to stay in their houses and keep their doors locked. Many are frightened.

"If they don't catch him, what's he going to do next?" wondered one housewife in this northeastern Oklahoma area. "What do we do next? Where do we go from here? We can't just hibernate."

And, from the locked security of her nearby home, Mrs. Jim English said:

"You feel more conscious of this thing at night. At night you don't know what's coming through the woods."

The manhunt is in a 10-square-mile area about three miles from the Girl Scout camp where, with his footsteps muffled by a thunderstorm, the killer struck on June 13.

On Thursday, three counts of first-degree murder were filed against the convicted rapist who escaped nearly four years ago from the Mayes County Jail at nearby Pryor.

More than half an inch of rain fell late Friday, washing out old tracks but also helping by making new ones more visible.

Temperatures rising toward 90 and humidity above 80 per cent made the tick-infested woods a steam bath for the searchers and those standing by at Camp Scott, where the girls were slain.

About 50 patrol troopers, along with State Bureau of Investigation and FBI agents, awaited developments at the camp, ready to move in with tracking dogs and aircraft should any sightings be reported.

Hart, 33, was linked to the case through two tattered photographs found near the death scene, an annual retreat for hundreds of Oklahoma Girl Scouts.

"You don't know what to do. There's nothing really you can do. But we keep our pistols on the bar all day and a shotgun by the bed all night," said Mrs. Wayne McCartney.

Not far away, at the R. L. Stamper quarterhorse ranch, Randy Stamper said several families gathered in his father's house and kept an armed radio vigil deep into the night. He declared:

"There are a lot of people sitting up at night listening to their CB radios. They've got their doors locked and their guns loaded. The women are afraid to go into the yards by themselves.

"Police and patrol cars have been buzzing around telling people to keep their doors locked and stay away from the windows. Everything is kinda sealed up."

One newsman drove up to a farmhouse to use a telephone. A screen door slowly opened; a grizzled old man stepped out, pointed a shotgun at him and said:

"Listen, around here, in these times, if you want to come up to my house, you honk first, step out of the car and wave your hands so I can see what you got."

Mayes County Dist. Atty. Sid Wise vowed to continue the hunt:

"First, we're going to catch Mr. Hart, and then we're going to determine to our satisfaction whether he killed the girls. And, if not, we'll look for somebody else."

Relatives of Hart said they believed he had nothing to do with the killings and that authorities were searching for him as a scapegoat.

"I think it's crazy, because anytime anything goes wrong they always go to him," said Hart's half-brother, Millard Johnson, 21.

A cousin, Ruby Leach, said Hart was accused of the killings because of his Cherokee background.

"I think they're after him because he's an Indian," she said.

Victor Auxier, a 63-year-old farmer, believes he may have accidentally stumbled across Hart on Thursday while walking his dog along a fence line.

"I was just walking along that fence about noon and all of a sudden my dog started growling, and when I looked up there was this fellow sitting under a small cliff," Auxier said.

"He was on the other side of the fence about 10 feet away. I knew he saw me.

"Well, I didn't know what to do. After hearing all the news about this killer running loose, I just pretended I hadn't seen him and said something sorta to myself about fixing the fence and walked on.

"As soon as I got back to the house, I called the law."

4 held in brutal S.F. slaying of homosexual

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Four young men have been arrested in the beating and stabbing death of a homosexual whose murder ignited a furor.

Police said the accused were apprehended on the basis of information from two citizens after reward offers reached $13,000 in the death of Robert Hillsborough, 33.

Hillsborough's roommate, Jerry Taylor, 27, was badly beaten.

Arrested on murder warrants early Saturday without incident were John L. Cordova, 19, of Daly City and a 17-year-old Daly City boy whose identity was withheld because of his age.

Michael Chavez, 20, of Daly City, and Thomas J. Spooner, 20, of San Bruno, had been booked Friday at city prison for investigation of murder, Lt. Daniel Murphy said.

Chavez was being held without bail. Spooner and Cordova were being held on $50,000 bail each. Arraignment was scheduled for Monday.

Municipal Court Judge John Figone signed arrest warrants late Friday night for Cordova and the 17-year-old in connection with the slaying.

A $5,000 reward had been offered by Mayor George Moscone for the capture of the persons responsible. The Tavern Guild, an organization of gay bar and restaurant owners, also put up a reward.

Gay community leaders blamed the slaying on hostilities generated by singer Anita Bryant and others in recent campaigns against gay rights.

Hillsborough, a city gardener, was stabbed repeatedly after four young men taunted him and his roommate with shouts of "faggot" on Wednesday night in a gay neighborhood. The roommate was beaten but escaped into a friend's residence during the attack.

Moscone ordered City Hall flags lowered to half-staff in memory of the slain city employe.

Investigators said a five-inch knife found at Cordova's home was the size described by coroner Boyd Stephens as inflicting the fatal stabbing.

'Gay Pride' Seattle march draws 2,000

SEATTLE (AP) — More than 2,000 persons joined a downtown parade Saturday to kick off Gay Pride Week proclaimed by Mayor Wes Uhlman in honor of the city's homosexual citizens.

Many of the parade participants, who were mostly young men, carried signs protesting the recent repeal of a Dade County, Fla., law which made it illegal to deny housing or job opportunities to homosexuals.

The parade was organized by the Washington Coalition for Sexual Minority Rights and was supported by 60 organizations.

On Friday, an Uhlman aide said public reaction to the mayor's proclamation was mixed. Uhlman was out of town during the weekend.

The aide said the proclamation drew dozens of telephone calls and letters.

Man found guilty of murder in bar

MERCED (AP) — A Stanislaus County man has been convicted of second-degree murder in the shotgun shooting death of a man during a dispute over a bet in a pool game at an Atwater tavern.

Sentencing of Isabello Rivera, 21, of Patterson, was scheduled for July 18 after a Merced County Superior Court jury issued its verdict Friday.

Rivera was convicted of killing Rene Saenz, 27, of Atwater on March 7.

An earlier trial ended in a hung jury as the panel agreed Rivera was innocent of first-degree murder but could not decide whether to convict him of second-degree murder or manslaughter.

Heroes have no regrets

By John Barbour
AP Newsfeatures Writer

> Where most would hang back, these people stepped forward and risked life and limb to save a stranger. They paid a heavy price. Do they have any regrets? And what makes for unselfish bravery in a world where indifference often is the norm?

CONNEAUT, Ohio — They stepped out of the shadows of ordinary life into the glare of danger, and they carry the scars they earned for being Good Samaritans. It changed their lives.

Not one of them regrets it.

Not Dorothy Kochs in her wheelchair, nor Alex Patitsas on his artificial legs, nor Don Hemphill with his crippled hands and tissue paper skin, nor Christal Lynn who taught himself to walk again.

Don Hemphill says it best. He dashed after a gasoline truck that was being dragged by a train, through a sea of gasoline. He tried unsuccessfully to pry the driver from behind the steering wheel before it blew. The explosion threw Hemphill through the air, afire.

"No sir, no regrets," he says 23 years later, many of those years spent in pain. "If I had to do it over, I'd try a little harder, I believe. If I'd been a little quicker, maybe I'd have done it. I had a brother driving a bus at the time. If that had been my brother in there, I'd want somebody to do something.

"I CAN'T understand anybody who can just stand by and do nothing. I didn't know the man driving the truck. But he was a man. And likely he had a family. And if it had been me in that truck, likely he'd have done something."

People like Don Hemphill have always been the exceptions, but in recent years the reluctance of people to step forward — risking danger or merely becoming "involved" — has been a subject of much social comment.

However, while there are no statistics to prove it, there are some indications that the tide of indifference may be turning. More often now, New York police arriving at the scene of a crime find the culprit in the hands of bystanders. In Washington, D.C., police say, it's more common now for bysuanders to tail armed, robbers until they find the police, to thwart a pickpocket on a bus, to flush a robber looting a store.

THERE ARE signs, a New York police official says, that "the public has had enough," that more people answer calls for help.

Why do ordinary citizens step forward? Each has his own reasons. Hemphill, who delivers mail and farms in Union Mills, N.C., shares the produce of his farm with his neighbors. "I was brought up that way. I had a good mother and father. And the Bible tells you to love your neighbor as yourself."

Dorothy Kochs, who now lives quietly in a small white farmhouse outside of Conneaut with three immense German shepherds, grabbed the arm of a gunman to deflect his aim, saving the lives of two policemen. But she was paralyzed from the waist down by a police bullet. Regrets? "No, none."

Alex Patitsas (rhymes with "vicious," he says smiling) lives in a tiny home in a working class neighborhood of Gary, Ind. He outran a seven-car train to throw a body block on a man in the train's path. He saved a life, but he lost his legs. The man he saved never came to thank him. Regrets? Only that he can't go back to railroading.

CHRISTAL LYNN of Bainbridge, Ga., answered the screams of an 11-year-old boy, found himself facing a drunk-crazed man with a shotgun, took shotgun blasts at close range in his left foot, his right leg, his right chest, still staggered forward pleading with the gunman. Then he lay there for 4½ hours bleeding and praying, dissuading the gun-wielding drunk until help arrived. Regrets?

"No sir, I do not. The things that bothered me most when I came to was the expression on that child's face, and the look on my wife's face when she came to the emergency room."

All these Good Samaritans are winners of Carnegie Hero Fund awards that were established in 1904 by Andrew Carnegie with these words:

"We live in an heroic age. Not seldom are we thrilled by deeds of heroism where men or women are injured or lose their lives in attempting to preserve or rescue their fellows; such the heroes of civilization."

The Carnegie commission investigates hundreds of heroic acts each year, gleaning the most deserving. Last year it made 57 awards, 11 of them posthumously.

Dorothy Kochs is 54 now. Her hair is gray and frizzed, but her smile is bright and her features recall prettier days. She was a night club dancer in Cleveland, a tough and independent girl who grew up in the depression in Chicago.

From time to time she ponders that awful moment of decision in 1956 when she threw her 5-foot-3 frame and the future of her baby daughter into a wrestling match with a menacing gunman.

"There isn't much time to think. It's just knowing that this terrible thing is going to happen and trying to prevent it from happening. And many ridiculous things come into your mind. A lot of ideas that don't make sense . . .

"The last moment before I made my move, the realization that I'm going to die came in. And that's when I said, 'Dear God,' almost like a prayer, and 'Jody forgive me.' Because a sudden emotion went through me: 'Gee, what a rotten deal I'm giving this kid. I divorced her father, and she has nobody but me, and I'm taking me away.'"

Alex Patitsas is 56 now. He was a lean 225-pounder in 1965, an athletic man who liked to fish and hunt, who earned the name "rubber legs" as a halfback in high school. He prided himself on his speed afoot.

"Why did I do it? I don't know. It was just a reaction. To be honest with you, if I'd known I was going to be hurt, I certainly wouldn't have done it. I'm not the hero type. I just reacted. I was always the type of person who looked out for the underdog. But would I do it again? I don't know. If it meant saving somebody's life, maybe. I just can't answer the question."

3 cops 'beat driver to death'

New York Times Service

BUFFALO — Three Buffalo policemen were ordered Saturday to appear in a lineup in the investigation of the death of an 18-year-old boy who was dragged from his small sports car and stomped and beaten by a group of men.

Chief Leo J. Donovan, the head of the Buffalo police department's homicide bureau, said the victim, Richard Y. Young, a recent graduate of the Tennessee Military Institute who was planning to attend the State University College at Buffalo in the fall, had been forced to the roadside early Saturday by a larger car after a chase of about six blocks.

Donovan identified the three police officers, who were off-duty and in civilian clothes when the incident occurred, as Philip Gramaglia, Samuel Fusco and Gary Atti.

Donovan said that according to witnesses, the chase had started after Young attempted to turn through an intersection into the path of the larger car and both drivers had slammed on their brakes to avoid a collision. Shouts were exchanged, the homicide chief said, and Young sped off with the larger car in pursuit.

Young was forced over, almost in front of his home, the homicide chief said, and was set upon by seven to nine men.

His roommate heard the commotion, and hollering and swinging a club, managed to break up the attack as neighbors rushed into the street.

As the assailants piled into the larger car and raced off, one witness took down the license plate number, later traced to Samuel Fusco, a 27-year-old policeman who had been on the force for six years.

After the death, Donovan was called to the hospital. A short while later he was approached by Philip Gramaglia, a 30-year-old officer with seven years on the force, who asked about Young's condition.

"When we told him the victim was dead," the chief said, "he became visibly shaken. He was asked to give a statement and he refused."

Clouded past of Laetrile movement leaders bared

False or exaggerated claims of scientific competence made

By Richard D. Lyons
New York Times Service

LOS ALTOS — With states legalizing the use of Laetrile at an increasing rate, an inquiry into the background of some leaders of the movement to promote the purported anticancer drug shows they have frequently been the subject of exaggerated claims about their scientific and medical competence.

The inquiry, which dealt with four men, also disclosed various brushes with the law, including a number of convictions stemming primarily from their efforts to promote and distribute Laetrile.

The leaders include:

—Robert W. Bradford of Los Altos, president of the largest organization seeking to legalize Laetrile, the Committee for Freedom of Choice in Cancer Therapy Inc., which claims a membership of 35,000 persons.

—Ernst T. Krebs Jr. of San Francisco, the committee's "science director" considered by many to be the chief theoretician of the Laetrile movement.

—Dr. John A. Richardson of Clear Lake, one of the first physicians in the United States to openly espouse Laetrile as a cancer cure and whose arrest for doing so led to the committee's formation.

—Andrew R.L. McNaughton, a Canadian citizen now living in Mexico, who helped promote Laetrile to prominence and is a fugitive from justice.

Ten states already have legalized the use of Laetrile, a substance extracted from the seeds of fruits such as apricots. Before the end of the year, other states probably will permit its use, although the interstate manufacture and sale of Laetrile in the United States has been banned by the federal government and the substance has been condemned by the scientific and medical community as being ineffective in treating cancer.

On the second floor of a small office building in this San Francisco suburb is the headquarters of the largest organization devoted to promoting the legalization and use of the chemical, the Committee for Freedom of Choice, as it is known.

Bradford, 46, a poised spokesman for the group, has at various times described himself as a scientist, an engineer who attended Georgia Tech, and an electronics specialist who helped develop guidance systems for missiles. Each point is open to question.

Asked in a recent interview if he had attended Georgia Tech, Bradford answered: "Yes, for two years."

Yet employees of the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta said a search of their registration and alumni records failed to turn up the name Robert W. Bradford.

RECORDS on file with the U.S. attorney's office in San Diego, where Bradford was convicted earlier this year of conspiracy to smuggle Laetrile into the country and was fined $10,000, indicate that in 1950 he attended San Jose Community College for one semester, studying police administration.

John McLain, a spokesman for what is now San Jose State University, confirmed that Bradford had attended the institution. He added that the records indicated that "he wasn't a very good student."

After leaving the college, Bradford enlisted in the Air Force. David Rorvik, a freelance journalist, has said that Bradford described himself as having "helped develop the guidance system for the first United States tactical guided missile" during his service at Cape Kennedy and as having directed "the Air Force electronics and guidance systems program."

Yet the records indicate that Bradford's highest rank was that of staff sergeant, which would hardly have qualified him for such important positions.

After leaving the Air Force, Bradford was employed by several defense contractors in the San Francisco Bay area and in the early 1960s was hired by Stanford University, then developing one of the world's largest linear accelerators for research into subatomic physics.

Bradford described himself as an engineer and was listed on the Stanford employment records as such. Yet his supervisor there, Carl Olsen, said Bradford's duties would be more accurately described as those of an "expert technician."

FEDERAL and state investigators have testified that Bradford had taken part in Laetrile sales transactions involving hundreds of thousands and even millions of dollars; he said, however, that he had only a modest income. He would not be specific.

Grant Leake, an agent of the California Food and Drug Bureau, estimated that Bradford, who has openly conceded that he was a distributor of Laetrile, takes in $150,000 to $200,000 a month on Laetrile sales.

Attempts to reach Bradford for elaboration on some of these points were unavailing. Employes at the committee office said he was out of the state.

Krebs, 66, is the son of Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Sr., who patented Laetrile in the 1910s and who in the ensuing years was arrested several times for using the chemical in violation of state law. Dr. Krebs was convicted in 1962 and 1966 of selling illegal medicines including Laetrile and fined $4,000. He died in 1970.

One recent day Krebs served luncheon guests tunafish sandwiches, coffee, and apricots in syrup dusted with a flour made of pulverized apricot pits.

His polka-dot tie sported the gold leaf pin of the John Birch Society, whose members include many in the Laetrile movement, including Bradford and Richardson.

WHEN an interviewer noted that the telephone directory listed him as "Dr. Krebs" and his staff referred to him as "Dr. Krebs," Krebs said he had received an honorary doctorate from American University, a well known institution in Washington.

The degree actually was awarded in 1973 — not by American University but by American Christian College, a small Bible school in Tulsa, Okla. Yet Dr. Dan Hobbs, an official of the Oklahoma State Board of Regents, said the school is not empowered to award any degrees other than the bachelor's.

Over the years Krebs has stated that he completed three years of study at the Hahnemann Medical College in Philadelphia, but that he did not finish the fourth and final year.

Asked by an interviewer why he had not completed his senior year, Krebs replied that he had been hounded out of the school because of his belief in unorthodox medical treatments.

BUT Dr. Joseph R. DiPalma, the dean of Hahnemann, said Krebs had failed his freshman year at the school in 1939, had been allowed to repeat it, and had successfully finished the freshman course on his second try.

DiPalma said Krebs then failed his sophomore year and was expelled. "The letters in the file show that he pleaded and begged for reinstatement but that the officials at the time refused," DiPalma said.

Krebs, who has at other times used the initials Ph.D. after his name without further elaboration, has had a circuitous academic career. At various times he has attended Memphis State Teachers College, the University of Mississippi, San Mateo Junior College, UC Berkeley and the University of Illinois, which awarded him a bachelor of arts degree in 1942.

Transcripts of his college records indicate that he was a lackluster student, having been awarded low or failing grades in some of his scientific courses, including chemistry. Yet Krebs has repeatedly referred to himself as a biochemist and a nutritionist.

REGARDING his finances, Krebs told an interviewer that "neither myself nor any member of the Krebs family has ever made a cent from Laetrile."

Yet records seized by state and federal agents in 1972 indicated that Krebs and his brother, Byron Krebs, a medical doctor, had an income of $250,000 in 1970 and 1971, primarily from the sale of Laetrile and other substances not recognized as valid drugs.

In 1974, Krebs and Dr. Byron Krebs pleaded guilty to violations of state health and safety laws and were fined $500 each, given suspended sentences of six months and placed on probation. Last month Krebs was ordered by a San Francisco court to serve the suspended sentence because of violations of the conditions of his probation. Dr. Krebs' license to practice medicine was revoked after the original trial. He died later that year.

IN recent years, one of Krebs's close associates has been Richardson, coauthor of a book dedicated to the Krebs's brothers and their father, to be published Monday. It is called "Laetrile Case Histories: The Richardson Cancer Clinic Experience."

The 390-page book contains dozens of detailed case histories of persons supposedly aided by the use of Laetrile, with the names of the persons missing; and a few pictures of persons purportedly aided by Laetrile, with the names used.

Also missing from the book are the names of seven cancer patients whose case studies were described last September in a hearing of the California Board of Medical Quality Assurance, at which Richardson's license to practice medicine was revoked.

Among the charges against Richardson was that he had "aided and abetted the unlicensed practice of medicine by permitting unauthorized persons, to wit: Angela Jenkins (a nurse), Steve Richardson (his son) or Ralph Bowman (his business manager), to treat and care for" seven patients.

ACCORDING to the board's documents, Richardson "also permitted an unlicensed person, to wit: Ernest (sic) T. Krebs Jr., to examine Helen D. Schneck."

The board also found that Richardson "personally and his agents, advised and discouraged Helen D. Schneck, Kapitan P. Zema, Poul Olsen and Margaret Baldock from seeking conventional cancer therapy.

The board noted that the treatment for cancer with the unrecognized drugs had started even before Richardson had either diagnosed cancer or been "privy to prior medical records reflecting such diagnosis."

Four of the seven patients either paid or were asked to pay $2,000 each for a course of Laetrile treatments. Data on the total amounts paid by the others were unavailable.

Financial records indicate that until Richardson started prescribing and administering Laetrile in the early 1970s he was barely making ends meet through his medical practice. After becoming involved in the Laetrile movement, the income from his practice rose more than tenfold.

THE records are on file in the San Diego Federal Court where Richardson was convicted last month of conspiracy to smuggle Laetrile into the United States and fined $20,000. His co-defendants were Bradford, Bowman, who was fined $10,000, and Frank Salaman of Redwood City, Calif., the vice president of the Freedom of Choice committee, who also was fined $10,000.

For 1972, Richardson reported on his federal income tax return that he had netted $10,400 on a gross income from his medical practice of $88,000. By 1974, however, he was reporting a net income of $172,981 on a gross income of $783,000.

Herbert Hoffman, the assistant U.S. Atty. who prosecuted the case, told the court that Richardson took in $2.8 million from January 1973 to March 1976.

The size of the smuggling operation in recent years had been estimated at $20 million by the federal authorities.

RICHARDSON is a graduate of Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., and the University of Rochester School of Medicine. He is 54 and served as a sergeant in the Marine Corps.

He began practicing medicine in the San Francisco Bay area in 1954, first at Kaiser Hospital, then in a series of group practices. He said in an interview he was a general practitioner who also performed surgery, obstetrics and eye, ear, nose and throat work.

Asked specifically if he had been the target of any malpractice suit, Richardson said there had been only one and that it had "fizzled out a few years ago."

Court records indicate, however, that in 1964 and in 1968 the American Mutual Insurance Co., which covered Richardson for malpractice, had paid claims against him totaling $77,000. The cases involved his treatment of two infants. One died, the other was disfigured.

THE arrest of Richardson in 1972 for espousing Laetrile as a cancer cure, together with the publicity surrounding the raid on his office, helped trigger the formation of the Freedom of Choice committee. In 1974, the doctor was one of 16 persons indicted with three Mexican corporations on charges of conspiring to smuggle Laetrile into the United States.

Also indicted was McNaughton, the fourth of the Laetrile leaders, a Canadian citizen now living in Mexico, who has yet to be tried and probably will not be since the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service has refused to allow him back into the country.

McNaughton, 61, is a member of a distinguished Canadian family. His father, the late Gen. A.G.L. McNaughton, was the commander in chief of the Canadian Armed Forces in World War II, and after the war was a delegate to the United Nations Security Council.

Laetrile patient's case history

New York Times Service

Helen D. Schneck, a California woman who died of breast cancer in 1973, was a patient of Dr. John A. Richardson. What follows is her case history, which is illustrative of several others. It was compiled by the California Board of Medical Quality Assurance, which last fall revoked Richardson's license to practice.

FROM March through October 1972, Schneck underwent a series of Laetrile injections of 10cc each, prescribed by respondent (Dr. Richardson) as a preventative treatment for cancer. In addition, respondent prescribed vitamin therapy including various enzymes, pangamic acid (another outlawed chemical) and Laetrile tablets. The cost of said injections was $20 each plus $20 for said Laetrile tablets and an additional amount for said vitamins.

In November 1972, Schneck developed a small lump on her neck. Respondent advised that Laetrile injections would cause said lump to disappear and prescribed a series of 15 such injections at a cost of $25 each.

By December 1972 Schneck had developed a rash with bumps on her left shoulder. In January 1973 said rash extended to her left breast. Respondent advised that Schneck undergo a biopsy at Albany (Calif.) Hospital.

ON Jan. 23, 1973, adenocarcinoma (cancer of the soft tissues) was diagnosed by her attending physician (not respondent). Respondent had administered approximately 16 injections of Laetrile during Schneck's hospital stay. Although her attending physician recommended conventional therapy, Schneck opted to continue with respondent, who recommended tripling the injection dosage of Laetrile to 33cc, at a cost of $70 per injection to control the cancer. Said injections were administered by respondent and his agents, including one Ralph Bowman.

By February 1973, said rash and swelling had spread. Respondent (Dr. Richardson) made an appointment for Schneck with one Ernest (sic) Krebs Jr., a biochemist located in San Francisco, who examined Schneck and advised that she did not have cancer but rather a serious skin infection.

Respondent thereafter treated Schneck with antibiotics and administered injections of 10cc of Laetrile. On Feb. 14, 1973, with no demonstrable improvement in Schneck's condition, and upon being advised by Schneck that she had years before eaten raw meat, respondent diagnosed her condition as trichinosis. Respondent continued to administer Laetrile.

ON Feb. 24, 1973, Schneck was unable to leave her bed. A physician, called by her husband, ordered her immediate admission to Marin (Calif.) General Hospital. Schneck was diagnosed as having inflammatory cancer in the left breast ranging from her collar bone to jaw, and an enlarged liver, presumably cancerous. The primary site was inflammatory carcinoma of the breast.

Schneck died on Oct. 4, 1973, from her condition.

Hughes' secret drug habit bared

Aides' L.A. testimony, memos detail massive illegal doses of narcotics and tranquilizers

By Donald L. Barlett and James B. Steele
Knight-Ridder Service
(c) 1977, The Philadelphia Inquirer

For many years before his death on April 5, 1976, Howard Hughes was illegally given massive doses of narcotics, tranquilizers and other pain-killing drugs that often left him dazed and destroyed his kidneys — the ultimate cause of his death.

The drugs were obtained with prescriptions issued in the names of Hughes employes. Personal aides, after getting the prescriptions filled — on his orders, it was said — then gave him the drugs. It is unlawful to purposely have prescriptions made out to one person but then give the drugs to another. Hughes aides have testified that at least some of the prescriptions were written by one of the industrialist's four personal physicians.

Details of the illegal use of drugs are contained in secret memos from the Hughes organization and in secret testimony of his long-time personal aides given as part of legal proceedings in Los Angeles in connection with the administration of Hughes' estate.

Other new findings in a continuing investigation into the life and death of the industrialist and his vast estate include:

—The drug Empirin Compound No. 4, a pain killer, was supplied to Hughes for nearly 25 years, even though it has long been known that prolonged, steady use of the drug, which contains phenacetin, can cause severe kidney damage.

—Hughes began taking drugs in the late 1940s, starting with Empirin Compound No. 4, which also contains the addictive narcotic codeine. Hughes then began taking straight codeine tablets and Valium, a non-narcotic, non-addictive tranquilizer. By his last years, Hughes was dissolving codeine tablets in water and injecting himself with a syringe. Codeine, a weaker form of morphine, is a pain killer and a sedative.

Hughes injected self with syringe

—For the last 15 years of his life, Hughes never left his bedroom except to move from a house to a hotel or from one hotel suite to another. He spent most of his time sitting in a chair. Sometimes he wore pajamas; very often he wore nothing at all.

—Despite accumulating evidence of state and federal criminal law violations by one or more Hughes employes, not a single local, state or federal law enforcement agency has initiated criminal proceedings. The statute of limitations on any offenses committed began running the day Hughes died.

—Some attorneys involved in the administration of Hughes' estate, including the Houston, Tex., law firm of Andrews, Kurth, Campbell & Jones, which represented Hughes and his father for half a century and is now representing the administrators of the estate in Nevada and Texas, have attempted in depositions and other proceedings to limit questioning about the possibility of negligence on the part of Hughes employes.

Nonetheless, it is known that Hughes, who dazzled the world in 1938 by flying around the globe in the then-record time of three days, spent his last years chained to a drug-dependent routine. And when he died at age 70, this man, who was linked romantically in his earlier years to some of Hollywood's most famous beauties, was an emaciated scarecrow of a figure, having shrunk from a height of 6 feet 4 and a weight of 150 pounds to 6 feet 1 and 94 pounds.

Excerpts from the logs maintained by the half dozen close personal aides who were with Hughes during his last 15 years show the pattern of the life Hughes led and the amount of drugs he consumed.

The log for Sunday, Nov. 7, 1971, is typical.

11:15 a.m. Hughes awake.

11:35 a.m. Watches movie, "Situation Hopeless — But Not Serious."

1:30p.m. Finishes movie and takes 10 codeine tablets.

1:50 p.m. Goes to bathroom.

2:10 p.m. Returns to chair and watches movie, "The Killers."

3:30 p.m. Eats chicken.

4:20 p.m. Finishes eating. Again watches "Situation Hopeless — But Not Serious" and then watches movie, "Do Not Disturb."

It is not clear when Hughes began taking codeine tablets orally. But testimony from aides indicates that sometime after 1971 he started dissolving the tablets in water and injecting himself with the solution.

In an interview, a physician who specializes in internal medicine estimated that codeine taken orally is only about two-thirds as effective as codeine injected into the bloodstream.

The log for Saturday, Dec. 18, 1971, recorded another fairly typical day for Hughes:

Prolonged usage ruined kidneys

1:30 a.m. Dinner of chicken and dessert.

3:30 a.m. Finished dinner.

3:40 a.m. Went to bathroom.

4:30 a.m. In bed and asleep.

9:20 a.m. To the bathroom.

11:30 a.m. Sitting in chair.

11:45 a.m. Consumes 10 tablets of Empirin Compound No. 4.

Pharmacologists interviewed said prolonged usage of Empirin Compound No. 4 would cause a painful inflammation of the kidneys and permanent kidney damage.

"High doses of phenacetin over a long period of time are definitely going to destroy the kidneys," one said.

The report of the autopsy performed on Hughes revealed that one kidney weighed 110 grams and the other 90 grams. The pathologist who performed the autopsy said a person of Hughes' size should have had kidneys weighing between 150 and 200 grams.

The log for Monday, June 26, 1972, shows Hughes' life style unchanged.

1:15 a.m. Eats a dinner of chicken and dessert.

2:30 a.m. Finishes dinner.

2:55 a.m. Goes to bathroom.

3:35 a.m. Returns and sits in chair watching movie, "Inside Daisy Clover."

6:20 a.m. Goes to bathroom.

6:55 a.m. Back in chair watching movie, "The Grasshopper."

11:15 a.m. Watches movie, "Shanghai Lillie."

12:05 p.m. Eats dessert and watches "The Guns of Navarone."

2:50 p.m. Takes four Blue Bombers. (This was the name Hughes aides gave to the 10-milligram blue Valium tablets that Hughes took regularly.

5 p.m. Takes five Blue Bombers.

6 p.m. In bed and asleep.

At 2:45 a.m. the next day, Hughes took eight more 10-milligram Valium tablets -- a total of 170 milligrams of Valium in 12 hours.

A pharmacologist at a major hospital told interviewers that he doubted a physician could justify allowing a patient to take even four 10-milligram Valium tablets at one time.

"Medically, it would be difficult to justify," he said. "The patient receiving that much at one time should be re-evaluated to determine if he should be placed under psychiatric care."

Another pharmacologist said that although Valium is a relatively safe drug used by many persons, prolonged, heavy usage can cause "adverse reactions — depression, constipation, double vision, slurred speech."

In his last years, Hughes lived in a succession of hotel rooms in Las Vegas and in the Bahamas, Canada, England, Nicaragua and Mexico. During his last 15 years, only about a half dozen close aides saw him regularly. These are the men who are testifying in Los Angeles in connection with the Hughes estate.

Hughes began taking Empirin Compound No. 4 shortly after he was critically injured in a 1946 crash of an experimental photo reconnaissance plane that his firm, Hughes Aircraft Co., was building for the Air Force.

For years there has been speculation that Hughes suffered pain caused by crash-related injuries until the end of his life and that he took Empirin Compound No. 4 to relieve that pain.

But aides have now testified that their reclusive boss never complained of chronic pain.

They also have testified that from the early 1950s until Hughes' death some of the prescriptions for Empirin Compound No. 4 and other drugs were issued by Dr. Norman F. Crane, now 72, a Los Angeles physician who once cared for a number of Hollywood starlets under contract to Hughes in the 1940s and 1950s.

Roy E. Crawford, 60, one of Hughes' aides, testified that the prescriptions were not written in Hughes' name. When he was asked in whose name they were written, Crawford's attorney advised him not to answer on the grounds that the answer might incriminate him.

Crawford said the prescriptions were filled at a number of drugstores to avoid attracting attention.

Other aides questioned so far also refused to say what names were on the prescriptions.

In fact, Hughes' aides have been vague about almost all the details of Hughes' drug usage.

For example, Howard L. Eckersley, 52, who, like all of Hughes' aides, spent considerable time with the industrialist, testified that he never bought drugs for Hughes and could not even say who did.

He testifed also that at the insistence of the aides, the chore of giving Hughes his medicine in the last year of his life was assumed by doctors. Eckersley added, though, that he did not know who was directly responsible for ordering the change in procedure.

When Clarence A. "Chuck" Waldron, 42, another aide, was asked earlier this month how Hughes received medication, William M. Bitting, a Los Angeles attorney representing Waldron and other Hughes aides, instructed him not to answer on the grounds the question was irrelevant.

Bitting made the same objection when Waldron was asked whose name appeared on the labels attached to the medication. Waldron did deny that he ever obtained or administered medication or saw anyone give medication to Hughes.

Waldron's testimony was in sharp contrast to a memorandum, written to Hughes by one of the aides, which has surfaced in the investigation and which indicates that Waldron was giving drugs to Hughes.

"Chuck told me that he gave you the bongers (10-milligram Valium tablets) and did not know whether you actually took them or not," says the memo. "He said you were so sleepy and groggy that he did not want to awaken you to try to find out. He did not try to keep you from taking them.

"Of course no one wants you to take any, but we don't try to keep them away. When you use words and phrases such as 'putting you to sleep,' 'permitting you to go to sleep,' etc., you imply that we have some kind of control over what you or your mind tells you to do.

"The fact is re: the bombers . . . you slept more today without any than you did yesterday with six. And that has happened many times in the past. You seem to delight in blaming us if you do not achieve the sleeping results you want, which vary. Sometimes you are happy with 10 and sometimes you are not happy with an overall 'down' period of 20 hours."

Another memorandum reveals that the aides were well aware of the possible legal consequences of assisting Hughes in his use of drugs.

"You seem to have forgotten," an aide wrote to Hughes sometime during the last few years of Hughes' life, "that several months ago, not only Norman, but also Wilbur and Homer decided that they would not want to talk through a third party such as the six (personal aides) of your staff.

His aides feared for their security

"The reasoning was because of possible testimony which we might sometime be required to give. With doctors, it is privileged information, and they cannot be forced to testify unless it is in a criminal case.

"They suggest that your staff be in the position of saying that your doctors see you occasionally and that what they talk to you about or administer to you is not known to any of us.

"That is also the reason that we six should not only not view any medication you have, but not be in the position of giving or handing you any type of medication, even Excedrin."

Questioned about the memo, Waldron denied ever seeing it but did identify Norman, Wilbur and Homer as three of Hughes' personal physicians.

The "Norman" mentioned in the memo apparently refers to Dr. Crane.

"Wilbur" and "Homer" apparently refer to Dr. Wilbur S. Thain, 51, of Logan, Utah, and Dr. Homer Hone Clark, 55, of Salt Lake City.

Soupy on 65th floor: no pie in sky

NEW YORK — Soupy Sales warns the world it had better not try to surprise him by hitting him in the face with a pie when he takes his comedy act to the Rainbow Grill, 65 stories up, this week.

Soupy said he has received 19,970 pies in the face in his pie-faced career but that every pie-throwing was planned and expected and had a reason.

"Oh, if anybody tries it, I'll kill 'em," Soupy said the other afternoon.

"But wouldn't it be a good publicity stunt if you walked on stage and were promptly hit with a pie?" we asked.

"NO. If anybody tries it, I'll hit 'em with a club! I'm gonna duck, and it'll go on somebody else. That stuff splatters and it burns, especially if it's a real pie."

Back in the 1960s — or was it the 1950s? — Soupy made it an honor to get hit in the face with a pie. Celebrities asked for the privilege of going on his popular TV show to get splattered.

"Frank Sinatra came on twice," he said. "Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis. We couldn't get George Burns because of his toupee, nor Fred MacMurray. Cary Grant was a fan of my show, but I couldn't get him to do it. I said, 'Listen, this pays $150,' and he got hysterical. People used to offer me money to hit somebody with a pie unexpectedly. Some musicians wanted to pay me $100 to hit their famous bandleader. Of course I wouldn't do it."

SOUPY made it easy for his guests. The "pie" was really shaving cream. Nevertheless the guests became a gooey mess and had to dig shaving cream out of their shirt collars. Soupy became the hottest thing in show business, and in Easter week 1965 he headlined the Paramount and brought back some of the hysteria of the '40s.

Remember the Mouse dance? The kids loved that invention of Soupy's. Ed Sullivan set a precedent by booking Soupy for two shows in a row.

SOUPY SALES
"I'll kill 'em"

Milton Suttman from Franklinton, N.C., and Huntington, W. Va., (hometown of Dagmar and Peter Marshall) probably borrowed the name Sales from the late comedian Chic Sale. He had his own TV shows in Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland before going to Hollywood and New York. Next he went on "What's My Line?" and played nightclubs around the country. He believes he's done more TV than any living survivor.

SOUPY'S ready for New York nightclubs. "I've been woodshedding this act for several years," he says. "Red Skelton, guys like that, get nervous before going on. So do I. I go to the bathroom two or three times. But I'm prepared.

"The worst job is the 1 a.m. show at the Playboy. There's a guy sitting there trying to get his date drunk, and the girl's trying to stall him off from taking her home. They sit there hating you and hating each other. And they show it, and your act can go right down the toilet."

Soupy — divorced now, father of Tony, 25, and Hunt, 23 — plays numerous telethons during the season. He says his comedy is physical. He has a morning TV show on ABC, "The Junior Almost Anything Goes Show." He has been known to permit a pie in the face if a telethon donor makes the contribution big enough to be of huge assistance to a charity.

In Ft. Lauderdale a boy threw a frozen pie at Soupy — he'd forgotten to thaw it.

WEEKEND windup:

Dorothy Loudon of "Annie" (and Claremont, N.H.) was made an honorary member of the New Hampshire legislature. ... Gordon McKellen Jr. and Kathy Malmbert of Toller Cranston's Ice Show at the Palace, a Broadway hit, will wed Aug. 23, and producer Dennis Bass wants 'em to marry on stage, on skates. ... Children's album stirs controversy

Anne Murray, who a year ago gave birth to a boy, just recorded an album of children's songs which might not see the light of day on her Capitol Records label.

People at Capitol are not so sure they want their super singer to release songs for children. They'd much rather she continued singing pop music.

THE ISLAND OF DR. MOREAU

Sweet tooth

Not your average matinee idol is "the Great John L." Clark, who plays half-human Boarman in T-shirt titled "The Island of Dr. Moreau" and movie of same name. Here he gets bit of refreshment from Sheri Bernstein while promoting the film, to be released July 13.

Fans make tracks to Luckenbach

LUCKENBACH, Tex. (AP) — This hill country hamlet has one parking meter, one fireplug, one store and a nationwide hit country song named for it.

It also has a horde of tourists, who started arriving a few weeks ago after Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson released the song "Luckenbach, Tex."

Hundreds now brave the back roads of central Texas seeking the place with the funny name, where, as the song says, Waylon and Willie go to get back to the "basics of life."

Most stay long enough to fall under Luckenbach's lazy-day spell and leave only after they can't hold another bottle of beer. Some took time last weekend to carry off the town's beer-drinking chicken and every sign that said "Luckenbach."

But not everybody likes the hoopla. Mrs. Armin Engel, who lives in one of Luckenbach's two houses, calls it "foolishness."

"The elderly people used to play cards at the dance hall on Sunday, but the local people don't go there anymore," she said.

The biggest thing before Waylon and Willie was Mud Dauber Day, when thousands of Texans sodden with beer annually flood Luckenbach to celebrate the return of the first mud dauber wasp during the spring.

Luckenbach was established in 1849, but few people paid it any mind until reporters and columnists took a fancy to Hondo Crouch, the late part owner of the store and post office.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: While striving to overcome resistance or restrictions, you mature in rapid stages, sometimes at uncomfortable personal sacrifice but eventually rewarding. Plan on a six-month holding pattern during the last quarter of your year plus the first quarter of next. Today's natives put up their best scrap when faced with adversity. Those born this year will create structures of lasting importance, as in architecture; if born late evening, will make advances in science.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Local rivalries, being out of step with your own team is awkward, but permits privileged objectivity. Business turns tricky. Keep a keen eye on details.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): As you barge in with big ideas, realize that your new challenge is someone else's old grievance. Hilarious causes are reason enough to switch appointments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Likes, dislikes, state of health, moods figure in how you fare. Nobody notices or makes allowances. Unplanned incidents are useful later, not funny now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your best intentions bring mixed, generally irritating results. You're obligated to dip into your savings. Keep it at minimum, avoid pledging more.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Let others spot problems, propose their solutions. You can legitimately move in, carry part of the burden, collect a share of the reward, and be welcome doing so.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In search of perfection, you overdo. Concentrate on getting a few positive items right the first time. Associates bollix the job if you pass the buck.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Review of spending habits, use of money, thrift isn't exactly happy, but you'll be ahead long-run. Skip placing blame, doing post-mortems on recent misadventures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unfamiliar work is uphill, every step needs attention. If there's no opposition, you stir it by projecting the humor you're in. Talk drifts into bickering.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): News sounds distressing, shouldn't trigger alarm, drastic corrective measures. It's not your job to save the world; simply alleviate local symptoms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Leave resources intact, not lent or staked as collateral for deals. Otherwise, don't be obstinate. Enough stress exists without adding behavior problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Patience with people unable to make up their minds is well worth whatever it costs you. Let a good story stop with you; another version pops up soon.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accept promises graciously, knowing nothing will transpire. Let others turn the wheels, find out the work involved. Relief from tension comes tomorrow.

Bad Company tries to be good company to fans

By Christine Brown
Knight-Ridder Service

Bad Company — the name carries with it suggestions of evil, of musical excess, of a certain perversion, perhaps. But in rock Bad Company means good, unpretentious music delivered well in concert, and, members say, concern for the fan.

As lead guitarist Mick Ralphs says, "We don't just want to take the money and run." It's a standard reassurance from rock performer to fan, designed to make the concertgoer or record buyer feel he's turning over $6 or $7 to an entertainer who really cares about him. In the case of Ralphs and Bad Company, musical evidence makes the statement convincing.

Ralphs, singer Paul Rodgers, bassist Boz Burrell and drummer Simon Kirke all played with other groups— namely, Free, King Crimson and Mott the Hoople. They are on a long tour — mid-April to late August — which Ralphs describes as "a backwards tour."

"We started this tour on the West Coast," he says. "We always looked forward to going towards the sun, ending the tour in California. But we had some good shows early at the L.A. Forum. It was like going off the deep end early; it set a high standard."

Ralphs says this tour has been markedly different from the first time Bad Company ventured out as a headline act, nearly four years ago, on the strength of a debut album that rocketed to the top of the charts:

"The first tour, we were trying to make a statement. Now, the wave of newness is gone. It's the most nontour tour we've ever done."

Bad Company has its own jet for transportation on the nontour tour, but Ralphs insists that the plane and other tour accoutrements are not used for flamboyant effect.

"Our plane is more homey than Led Zeppelin's. We're more down-to-earth. We take limousines because in the United States it's expected. I'd be just as happy to walk, but then they'd think I was a hick. It's an image. I care about an image on stage, but, as for myself, I don't care about going to the right parties or dressing in the right clothes.

"We will always have simplicity. It's inherent in the way we play. We've never been a great production band — with horns, strings. We're into touring, and we want to be able to play everything on an album. Who wants an orchestra on the road? But we can play other stuff, if people will hear us out. We don't want to play it safe. That's definitely not the object of Bad Company. We do what we want to do, even though there's lots of pressure to deliver.

"With our first album, there was no pressure. But then, with our fast success, it was, 'What are you going to do this time?' What I care about is what we're putting out. I don't want to get into a commercial cop-out. I don't want to be sucked in by that."

To reassure themselves that they could just enjoy playing for people without the vast machinery of the record industry — touring, promotion and the like — they gave a Christmas show at a tiny hall in England where they first got together. They were billed as Rough Diamond (another group has taken the name now), and they did things like Sam and Dave music, rock 'n' roll classics like "Sweet Little Sixteen," Ralphs recalls.

"We're in a good position, and we don't intend to let it slip. The live show is better than ever. We were never into production like Pink Floyd. We didn't want it to take away from the music. That lasts. Floyd is just four anonymous men with special effects. It could be a record playing up there. We put ourselves across, rather than a laser.

"The next album must be the best we've ever done." (And they've done four — "Bad Company," "Straight Shooter," "Run With the Pack" and "Burnin' Sky," their latest). "Rock groups come and go in a year now. We want to stick around, like Led Zeppelin. We can't overdo it — Elton John did, and it became shallow for him. And we can't rework old formulae — we must broaden to last."

Broadening for Ralphs means "writing things that are more meaningful musically and lyrically." The recording of "Burnin' Sky," he says, was not done under conditions conducive to meaningful writing.

"We'd just come off a 57-city tour, and when you finish a tour you don't want to see the others for a while. Two weeks later we were in the studio with only sketchy ideas. I enjoyed it, but on the next album I want to do broader things."

So far, the album hasn't sold as well as the first three, and it drew mixed reviews — partially, Ralphs says, because many critics misunderstood parts of it.

"The reggae number, 'Everything I Need,' was tongue-in-cheek, a sendup. Everyone else was trying seriously to do reggae — the (Rolling) Stones' attempt on their 'Black and Blue' album was pathetic. I'd been to the Caribbean and heard the real thing, so we decided to do it with humor. Lots of things we do with a nod and a wink. With the awards and acclaim, you could get your ego blown up; but we bring each other back down."

Ralphs says he's happy now, personally and professionally, but the success hasn't come free:

"Bad Company is what I want. It's hard to get the right chemistry together, and we don't have any internal problems. It's done me more good than bad.

"I've had to sacrifice my personal life. My marriage broke up. It's hard to do two things properly at once, and the group needed 200 per cent. I would never do that again. Now I value my personal life — it's important to be happy. You have to make sacrifices to achieve your ambitions, so it's very gratifying when people cheer you."

Ralphs has a farm about 40 miles from London where he likes to "go out and look at my field." He rides a dirt bike and hangs out at the pubs with friend Alvin Lee of Ten Years After, and he revels in the history of the region — he once lived in a cottage built in 1475.

And if Bad Company's good fortune should end soon — though all signs are against that happening — what would Ralphs do?

"I'd always write and perform. I'm strong enough that I wouldn't do anything like withdraw into drugs. We've had the groupies, the drugs, all the rest. We don't need them anymore. If it ended, I'd just go home. I'm a survivor."

4 soloists interesting if uninspired

By Jim Cox

REVIEW

Four soloists provided an interesting, if not inspired, performance Friday of concertos by Franz Joseph Haydn, Frank Martin and Francis Poulenc at Saint Cross Episcopal Church in Hermosa Beach.

Backed by a proficient 27-member string orchestra (with two oboes and two French horns added) under the direction of John Wright, the featured musicians included harpsichordist Malcolm Hamilton, organist Jack Miller, pianist Sherryl James-Voss and harpist Lou Anne Neill.

The most cohesive performance was of the program's opening work, the Haydn concerto in D for harpsichord and orchestra.

In the other two compositions, the often mechanical conducting of Wright resulted in performances that were at times strained, dragged out and expressionless.

The performance of the Martin "Petite Symphonie Concertante," written for double string orchestra, harpsichord, piano and harp, was dull. James-Voss and Neill both performed well, but Wright's conducting gave no shape to the work.

The program concluded with an on-again, off-again playing of Poulenc's D-minor concerto for organ, orchestra and tympani. Again, the soloist was restricted by the constraints of the conductor.

At times the playing was effective, mostly when the tempo was fairly quick. However, the slow passages were too frequently dreary and disjointed.

Throughout the concert the members of the orchestra demonstrated their versatility and ability to perform with precision and in tune.

Beatty paging Robert Young

Warren Beatty wants Robert Young as his costar in the remake of the movie "Here Comes Mr. Jordan."

It's the title role he's offering, that of an angel called Mr. Jordan who comes down to earth. The role was originally played by Claude Rains.

Is Young interested? He told Warren: "There's one thing I've learned. I never say 'yes' until I've seen the script. But if the script is as good as you say it is, send it to me, and I'll do it."

Crops 'pushed' to human limit

New basic farm research urged

By Boyce Rensberger
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In recent years American farm productivity has leveled off or even declined in some cases, and experts say the reason is that the applied research that once led to steadily increasing yields has nearly depleted its storehouse of basic knowledge of how plants grow.

It is time, experts say, to learn more about the fundamental aspects of how plants capture solar energy and use it to assemble atoms of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen into food. Only then, they say, can scientists find new ways of manipulating the inner workings of corn, rice, wheat, soybean and other plants to push yields above present levels.

After more than a quarter-century of spectacular increases, the average national yield per acre of corn began declining dramatically in 1972, according to statistics compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Sorghum yields have fallen similarly. Yields of wheat and soybeans have largely failed to gain for most of this decade.

ACCORDING to a major report on overcoming world hunger, submitted to President Carter last week by the National Research Council, an essential step toward such a goal is an increase in both the funding and scope of research sponsored by the Department of Agriculture. The department's research programs have been criticized as slow to take advantage of new avenues of scientific inquiry.

The report also urged a major change in the way the department's money is spent.

The panel of top agricultural scientists who produced the report, entitled "World Food and Nutrition Study: The Potential Contributions of Research," said the department needed a $120-million increase (20 per cent) for its research expenditures for the first year and additional $60-million increases in each of the following four years.

The panel also recommended that half the increased funds be given out in grants for which any scientist could compete. This is the predominant method by which the government supports other areas of research. In agriculture, however, experiment stations at land-grant colleges have done most of the publicly supported agricultural research since 1887, when the system was founded.

Although these stations and the department's in-house laboratories are responsible for much of the spectacular growth in American farm productivity of past decades, the panel felt they were not adequately exploiting new research opportunities.

BY OPENING food and nutrition research to the entire scientific community on a competitive basis, new ideas are more likely to be developed, said Dr. E. T. York, who headed one of the panel's study teams, in an interview.

"Over recent years we've been depleting our basic storehouse of knowledge," he said. "We need to bring into food and nutrition research segments of the scientific community that haven't considered themselves part of this effort." York, who has been department administrator and head of a land-grant college of agriculture, is chancellor of the State University System of Florida.

The panel also urged that the department broaden its outlook from the needs of American farmers to problems of worldwide food and nutrition. Such an approach, York said, would be of benefit to the United States as well as to other countries.

The report notes that cooperative research with scientists in developing countries has yielded new plant varieties that proved beneficial for American farmers. Among examples cited in the report were the introduction of a virus-resistant grass from South America that has restored pasture lands in the southeastern states, the adaptation of Nigerian beans of high nutritional quality by Wisconsin farmers and the discovery of two soybean varieties from China that promise to permit large-scale soybean farming in Southern states.

One of the major directions in which new food research should move, the panel said, is toward crops and farming methods that require little or no added resources to exploit. In the past, many of the new "green revelution" plant varieties required fertilizers or irrigation on both to perform their best. Such costly inputs excluded many poor farmers from the benefits.

New advances, the report said, should rely more on built-in plant capacities such as photosynthesis and the ability to convert atmospheric nitrogen gas into fertilizer.

Such advances would also benefit American farmers, many of whom are already pushing plant growth to the maximum possible with fertilizer. Also, since nitrogen fertilizer is made from fossil fuels, its supply is limited, and its price is certain to rise over the long run.

Among the promising new avenues of research that the panel said should be pursued were the following:

— Increasing the amount of atmospheric nitrogen converted by plants into nutrient.

— Increasing the efficiency with which plant leaves use sunlight to synthesize food.

— Identifying plants with resistance to disease, drought, acid soils, temperature extremes and other environmental stresses.

Parents reaching out with love

THE GERDISES, Michael and Katherine with their three children John, left, Becky and Paul, founded Thursday's Child as a way of coping with the problems of raising a handicapped child.

Monday's child is fair of face.
Tuesday's child is full of grace.
Wednesday's child is full of woe.
Thursday's child has far to go...

It's just a familiar aphorism, an ordinary nursery rhyme that has some truth to it.

Everyone knows that not all children are born complete with all of their fingers, toes, arms and legs, with sound hearts and gifted minds. Many are born with physical, mental or a combination of both handicaps.

Their problems make even an ordinary achievement something special. They are among Thursday's children.

And in the Long Beach-South Bay area, Thursday's Child is also a support group for the parents of handicapped children who find their roles as parents even more challenging and pressured than those of parents of "normal" children.

Devoid of doctors or other medical professionals, the group brings together parents trying to overcome their own fears and angers so that they can accept, help and love their imperfect children.

Much as Alanon works with the families of alcoholics, Thursday's Child deals with the stress placed on families because one or more members is handicapped. And they are the first to admit they are not therapists or experts on handicaps.

THEIR GOAL is to see and love their children as people first, and handicapped, second.

Started two years ago at Children's Hospital in Los Angeles, the organizaton now has chapters throughout the area. Although the Long Beach group presently is composed of only four couples, it is growing.

"We just see a need to help parents," say Michael and Katherine Gerdis of Long Beach. "Parents plan for a baby and expect a cute little Gerber baby. When something happens, it throws them."

At Thursday's Child meetings, couples share their individual problems in coping and caring for a child who has a mental or physical disorder. They role play, they educate themselves to increase their awareness, they bare their thoughts and feelings knowing that everyone there has been down the same painful path.

Founders Michael and Katherine Gerdis, for example, started the group because of the difficulties they encountered as parents.

Now the parents of two sons and a daughter, another daughter, Jennifer, was born five years ago with Down's Syndrome and congenital heart defects.

DOWN'S SYNDROME, also known as Mongolism, is mental retardation often accompanied by physical aberrations such as slanted eyes, a broad skull, large tongue and unusual creases on the palms of the hands.

Experts attribute the condition to the presence of an extra chromosome in the blood cells. Most Down's children never reach more than a 30-60 IQ. Normal children have 90-110.

A Lloyd's Bank branch manager, Michael Gerdis is a gaunt, restive man with fair features that contrast his wife Katherine's dark hair and full figure.

Their home in eastern Long Beach is a modest tract house almost swallowed up by the lush, leafy trees and flowering shrubs. Inside, the living room is sparsely furnished, but comfortable and pictures of their four children grace a shelf near the front door.

The wheat-colored carpeting pads the feet of toddlers Becky and John as they scurry about dressed in pajamas-with-feet. Ten-month-old baby Paul sleeps in a crib a few steps away.

Eventually, Becky and John are reluctantly led off to bed, but an occasional giggle or muffled sniffle can be heard from the other side of the hall door.

IT IS HERE that the Gerdises elected to bring their daughter, Jennifer, five years ago against the advice of their doctor.

In the past, most parents have been advised to place their children in an institution and go on with their lives. The Gerdises say Thursday's Child encourages parents to bring their children home first for a trial period and then make a decision.

Employer rates federal job program

By Linda Zink
Staff Writer

Cautious optimism might be the best way to describe Stan Wood's feelings about his involvement with an on-the-job training program for disadvantaged Long Beach residents made possible by federal funding through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Wood, president of Coin Meter-West in Long Beach, is cautious because in his opinion "a month is too soon to tell how things are really going to work."

At the same time, however, Wood is hopeful his experiment will be a success and says that thus far he has been "reasonably happy" with the employes referred to him through CETA.

"The fact is that it's tough to find people who are willing to take any initiative no matter where you get them," said Wood, who explained that high turnover among employes was one reason he decided to participate in the CETA program.

"So when I heard about the program, I thought 'Why not give it a try? It sounds like a pretty good deal.'"

WOOD, WHOSE COMPANY installs and maintains coin operated laundry equipment, said he first learned about the program through a radio spot announcement which promised pre-screening of applicants by a CETA contracting agency and federal funding of half a successful candidate's salary for the first two to six months of his or her employment.

For his part, Wood, as an employer, would guarantee training for the new employe and would supply the CETA contracting agency with a weekly report of the employe's progress.

Additionally, spokespersons for CETA said, jobs filled through a CETA contracting agency must be permanent positions which do not end when funding is discontinued and which require only minimal skills and little prior work experience.

"The jobs I had in mind aren't difficult jobs but it does take time to learn them," said Wood, whose contract with the Community and Human Resources Agency (CHARO) Career Center in Long Beach provides for 14 weeks of federal funding. "I'd say it takes a good six months of training before a man is really capable of being out on his own.

"When you consider the time it takes to train the person, plus the cost of uniforms, health insurance and other fringe benefits, you realize you've made a sizeable investment. Offsetting some of that expense was one of the reasons the CETA program appealed to me."

Wood's call to the CETA Intake Center, 222 E. Third St., led to a visit by a representative from the Long Beach CHARO Career Center, which is a regional branch of an East Los Angeles-based community action agency and one of three local groups with major contracts to develop on-the-job training positions with Southland employers.

IN THE INITIAL interview, Wood outlined his needs and the type of work that was involved. A short time later, six candidates referred by CHARO were interviewed for the jobs.

"To be perfectly honest with you, I wasn't impressed at all with a couple of them," said Wood. "They just weren't the type of people I had in mind.

"But at least two of them looked pretty good. And as I said, I haven't been too disappointed."

Wood acknowledged that while involvement with the CETA program has necessitated some additional paper work, he believes the requirements haven't been excessive.

"I guess having to deal with a lot of red tape is one of the reasons people have turned off on federal programs. But I haven't found that to be the case. All I've had to do is tell the two supervisors involved to fill out a brief work progress report every week."

As things look right now, Wood is optimistic that the two CETA-referred trainees will develop into productive, long-term employes. A while back, he explained, "I had some problems with one of them. But I think we've gotten things straightened out now and I think things are going to be OK."

Wood, whose firm has grown from four employes four years ago to 28 today, said the pre-screening offered by CETA contracting agencies can be a real plus for a small firm like his, which does not have the manpower to do recruiting and interviewing on a continuing basis.

He tends to think he might use the program again — and that he would probably recommend it to another employer.

"MY PERSONAL FEELING is that the best way to get a good employe is by word of mouth — you know, someone who works for me knows somebody who wants to work here.

"But you can't always fill a job that way. And I've had no success at all with advertising in the newspapers. So this is probably a pretty good deal."

Mike Froke, project manager of the the CHARO Career Center in Long Beach, said many employers cite the screening and referral aspect of the CETA program as a strong selling point. Froke added that COMIC Mel Brooks — he and Alfred Hitchcock have an understanding about his new film spoof.

AUTHOR Lillian Roth of "I'll Cry Tomorrow" — former actress not finding success in marriage.

Q: Is it true that Mel Brooks is doing a spoof of Alfred Hitchcock movies? If so, what does Hitchcock think about it?

A: "Hitchcock seems very pleased about my tribute," says Brooks of his film, "High Anxiety." "He realized that I'm not making fun of him or his films."

In the movie, Brooks will portray "a psychiatrist with a fear of heights who heads the Psycho-Neurotic Institute for the Very Very Nervous. A bellboy attacks me in the shower with a wet newspaper, and birds are always following me. They don't harm me, but they leave little greenish white messages all over me."

Q: Is it true that someone has invented a dripless ice cream cone?

A: Here's the scoop, and it's a double-dipper: Michigan State University researchers, by altering the emulsion content and the stabilizing system of ice cream, have slowed the melting rate from a maximum of 20 minutes to a maximum of 40 minutes. They are now seeking a patent for their product.

Q: I'm curious about Eva Gabor's new fashion line — did she really design the clothes herself?

A: Although Luis Estevez did the actual designing, the Hungarian star says she had a hand in the final product. "I suppose these tall skinny models are beautiful to look at," she says, "but most customers are not six-and-a-half feet tall, hipless and bosomless. Most women are just like me — size 8, with a bosom and a fanny, maybe a little too much around the hips — so the clothes were cut accordingly. My figure tells the world I'm a woman."

Q: I remember reading about some farmer who put vitamins in his chickens' drinking water to get bigger eggs. Was he successful?

A: One of his hens laid a $5\frac{1}{2}$-ounce egg but the Columbus, Ohio, farmer found people were rather chicken about buying giant eggs so he withdrew the vitamins. The hen which laid the super egg, incidentally, was unable to stand for several days after her extraordinary feat.

Q: I read recently that Glenn Ford had finally married his longtime girl friend — then read elsewhere that he hadn't. What gives?

A: The rumor about the marriage started in Europe, where Ford began introducing Cynthia Hayward as "my wife," and was later published as fact in many U.S. newspapers. Later, he admitted, "It was just for fun — and because we had less trouble registering in European hotels."

Ford, 61, and Cynthia, 29, have lived together for seven years and might have been married, except that Ford's mother and his son, Peter, are said to disapprove.

Q: Is the new California law limiting the amount of water in toilets going to save enough water to be worth the hassle?

A: Flushing a conventional toilet, invented in 1872 by Thomas Crapper, requires an average of 6 gallons of water, compared to 3½ gallons per flush in the new toilets. Californians flush away an estimated 27 billion gallons a year — enough to flood 840,000 football fields a foot deep.

Q: Whatever happened to Lillian Roth?

A: The tempestuous star of the 1930s who chronicled her battle with alcoholism in "I'll Cry Tomorrow," doesn't have too much to laugh about today. She was divorced from four husbands before marrying fellow AA member Burt McGuire in 1955. McGuire has since walked out on her, and she now lives in a small town outside New York with nine dogs. She is also writing another book, "And Now The Final Song."

TWOSOME, actor Glenn Ford and Cynthia Hayward — reports of their marriage grossly exaggerated.

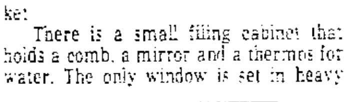
Q: Is it true that Rock Hudson has agreed to a $2 million out-of-court settlement because of an auto accident?

A: Although Hudson's former chef was behind the wheel of the actor's sports car when it missed a turn at 100 m.p.h. near Palm Springs, Hudson and his insurance company have reached a massive settlement with a 31-year-old schoolteacher who was permanently crippled when he was ejected from the passenger seat. Totally paralyzed, the teacher requires $5,000 a month for constant care.

ACTOR Rock Hudson — probably won't loan out his car to employes again.

ACTRESS Eva Gabor — uses own figure as model to create clothes for new design line.

Melina Mercouri is back working in Greece



ATHENS — Melina Mercouri is in jail. It's not what you think. No, she's not a prisoner. Only the jail is real. Melina is making a movie here, directed by her husband Jules Dassin, the first film they've made in Greece since the fall of the military dictatorship.

And here's the irony: they're making it in the fortress-like Koriadalos Prison, where the colonels who made their lives a living hell for eight years of exile are themselves behind bars. It's a final retribution, and the feeling is so eerie Melina is almost stoic with awe.

Melina is sitting on an iron cot in the concrete cell that once belonged to Patakos, the same colonel who took away her citizenship and forced from her those tearful words that have now become part of Greek history: "I am born Greek. I will die Greek. You were born a Fascist, you will die a Fascist!"

Across the hall, a tiny ray of light emerges from the door of another cell, where Papadopoulos, the dreaded leader of the junta, was jailed. Melina cannot rest until she sees that one, too. A jailer with a ring of iron keys unlocks the door and she peers inside. It's just like the other cell. She smiles wryly.

"It's like a third-class hotel room. Except for the bars on the windows. I don't think it's enough punishment for the colonels. I am very nervous here. For me, I could have been in one of these cells like a snap of the fingers."

MEMORIES flood the prison. Koridalos is in the heart of Piraeus, where Melina ran for a seat in Parliament in the Greek elections. It is the same prison where she attended the trials of the colonels on a journalist's pass after returning to Greece when her citizenship was restored with honor two years ago. The colonels have been moved to another prison across the street.

Now, the wing of cells where Melina is filming are empty, but in the distance you can hear the wails and moans of women prisoners. Some of them are Americans, arrested for dope smuggling. Nobody visits them except a priest from the American Embassy.

The woman who serves Melina coffee is a trustee, serving life imprisonment for bashing in her husband's head with a mortar and pestle until it was the size of a pin. She smiles warmly, then shuffles back down the empty corridor until her footsteps disappear inside the echoing halls of the prison.

Melina shudders. "Every day when I was in exile, I had the fear of going to prison. Then I learned from the others who stayed behind to be tortured that prison was a relief. It was the end of torture. The real terror was the military police.

"Now they are all out free. Only a few of the colonels, the leaders, remain behind bars. They have television. They will probably be paroled in a few months or a few years. And life goes on. It doesn't seem fair, somehow."

Melina shrugs, then returns to the first cell. It has a stand-up toilet, a sink on the wall, a shelf for a newspaper, and an iron cot covered with an army blanket.

There is a small filing cabinet that holds a comb, a mirror and a thermos for water. The only window is set in heavy steel casement, and the only color in the drab cell comes from religious pictures, crucifixes, icons and the Virgin Mary on the wall.

"ONCE YOU'RE locked in, you either blaspheme — or you pray!" says Melina. Through the bars of the cell, one sees only grim buildings the color of dirt. And in the distance, a guard with a rifle in the tower.

Beyond, the purple sweep of the Greek mountains. It looks a bit like the backlot of a Hollywood studio. "Let's lock the door and see if it opens again," says Melina, mischievously.

An electrician closes the door. We are flooded with darkness. The Virgin Mary's eyes seem to light up in the gloom. Then the door is opened again and the light comes in. "Ah, you see — I would survive!" She seems relieved.

Ellen Burstyn pokes her head in the door. "It doesn't seem as bad as the cells we see in American jails, but once they lock the door shut, you could get claustrophobia real fast." Burstyn is Melina's co-star.

When she arrived, she shocked the Greeks when her chauffeur pointed out the Parthenon and Ellen asked: "And where is the Acropolis?" It made the Greek newspapers. Now things are running smoothly. All is forgiven. The two co-stars get along like sisters. And if the rumors on the set come true, they could both get Oscar nominations for this one.

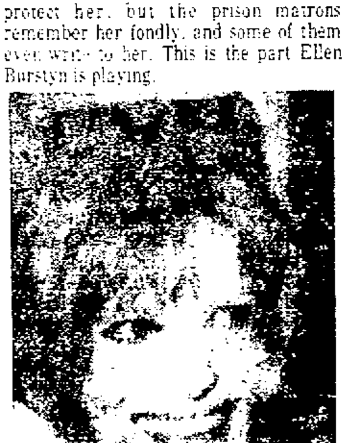
THE MOVIE IS tentatively called "Maya and Brenda." It's about a famous Greek actress who returns to her native country, after reaching international stardom, to play Medea on the stage.

As a publicity stunt, she is persuaded to visit an American woman who has been imprisoned for murdering her two children, Medea-style, as revenge against an unfaithful husband. The actress is at first compassionate, but then becomes obsessed by the other woman's personality, until the two persons intertwine with dramatic and tragic results.

If it sounds like Ingmar Bergman's "Persona," the resemblance is not entirely coincidental. Jules Dassin admires him greatly. "Bergman was born to make guys like me sorry we didn't take up plumbing," he says modestly. There's a small homage to Bergman in the film where footage from "Persona" is projected, and Dassin is even toying with dedicating the film to him.

But admiration is where the imitation ends and reality begins. The film is entirely original, based on a real case in which a real American killed her children and was imprisoned in Koridalos in 1969. She was kept four years, then released. Now she lives in America, where she's remarried and has two new children.

The names have been changed to protect her, but the prison matrons remember her fondly, and some of them even write to her. This is the part Ellen Burstyn is playing.



GREEK actress Melina Mercouri and her husband, producer Jules Dassin, are making first film in her homeland since her triumphant return after years of exile under the military dictatorship.

MELINA INSISTS she identifies more with the American prisoner than the Greek film star. "I understand how you can love something so completely that you kill for it. I loved Dassin and, ever more, I have loved Greece more than my own life — with an idealism that has become pathological," she says.

Ellen says she doesn't identify with any of that, but does "identify with the pain of being betrayed." She was in India attending a film festival in New Delhi when Jules Dassin contacted her by telegram. Then he called her at her hotel in Paris and discussed the role. Then he sent the script to her home in New York.

"I wanted to like the script because I was dying to go to Greece. Also, it's part of the new revolution that's going on in films. Here at last is a chance to make a movie about two women relating to each other. Melina is really the star.

"My role is small in comparison. I only have two weeks' work. But we should all be able to do big parts, small parts, not be locked into stardom. It's very limiting to do only big parts. I did a tiny part in 'Harry and Tonto' with Art Carney after I was nominated for two Oscars. I don't give a hoot about billing, money or percentages."

She closed in Chekov's "Three Sisters" in Brooklyn, and flew the next day to Athens. The noise from the American Express tours was too much for her in her plush hotel on Constitution Square, so she moved to a bungalow at the beach, an hour from the city.

After she finishes her big dramatic scenes, she travels to the Berlin Film Festival, where she'll be on the jury, then to the Moscow Film Festival, and then to the States, to begin the movie version of her Broadway hit, "Same Time Next Year" with Alan Alda.

Melina has no travel plans, except to bring her wildly successful "Medea" to America for a limited run. "Listen to me," she says soberly. "My life is in Greece now. Dassin was offered more than that to do a revival of 'Can-Can' in Hollywood. Why?

"IN ALL MY life, I have never done anything to prove my talent. For me, 'Never On Sunday' was a contribution because it brought Greece to the world. 'Phaedra' was a small contribution.

"But what else? The world has not seen my 'Medea,' which the critics said revolutionized the Greek theater. The world did not see my 'Streetcar Named Desire.' Only in Greece do they know how to appreciate me.

"Jules is 62. I am 51. At 51, I'm going to move to Hollywood? No. I AM Greece. We have not much money, but I don't want cars and houses and jewels. If I come to America, they want me to sing and dance and give up politics. I can't give up politics. I fear something will happen and — poof! — I will be away making a film and never see Greece again."

Dassin, who after 20-something years with this Greek fury has finally started taking Greek lessons just so he can understand what's going on in his own house, is returning to his old style of filmmaking on the cheap. He has no distributor yet, although the word is out that the film is a winner and he's already getting calls from film festivals.

"I didn't want to turn this film over to the executive auctioneers of Hollywood or the university-bred Scheherazades on Madison Ave. Agents and lawyers are running the business now. My last American film was 'Up Tight' in 1968. My last Hollywood film was 'Night and the City' with Gene Tierney and Richard Widmark in 1949. All those years when I was blacklisted, I learned to make better films for less money in Europe.

"THIS ONE is being made with Melina's money, my money and loans from two friends in France and Switzerland. I financed it in one night. The last film I wrote, about the Lockheed scandal, took me two weeks just to get Ryan O'Neal on the phone. It still has not been made.

"This one is strictly a family film. If the film makes money, our friends who are working on it will not be forgotten. If it fails, we lose everything, but we're all in it together."

It's a far cry from Hollywood moviemaking. Melina goes to the set in a yellow Fiat. An actor friend's BMW is used by Ellen Burstyn. Melina's longtime companion and makeup artist, Anna, is playing her maid in the film. Her best friend Despo is playing her arch-rival. The budget is modest. Melina calls it "Never on Sunday with inflation."

"Never On Sunday" was made for $120,000. The new one will cost $400,000. The production office is downstairs in the apartment building where the Dassins live. Every room in Melina's apartment is used as one of the different sets.

Dassin edits each day's footage on an antique Movieola in the basement. One hundred thousand dollars of the budget goes to Ellen Burstyn. Melina and Jules are working for nothing. The risks are high, but so are the rewards.

"We're doing this one for love," says Dassin.

"And," adds Melina triumphantly, "we're doing it for Greece!"

Training program helps unemployed find jobs

employers also cite the financial benefits as a reason for participating in the program.

"Now, some of the employers we have contracts with aren't interested at all in getting reimbursed for half the employe's wages," said Froke, who explained that assistance with affirmative action problems and the desire to do something positive for individuals and the community are two other reasons employers give for participating in the program. "But I'd have to say that most of them are."

According to Froke, contacts with employers are typically initiated by CETA-funded job developers from either the CHARO Career Center, the Employment Development Department or the United Auto Workers' Long Beach CETA On-The-Job Training Program Department. Experiences such as the one they had with Wood — where the employer made the contact first — are rare.

In most cases, Froke said, job developers "have to do a lot of ice breaking" before they can even arrange for a meeting with the employer.

"There's considerable mistrust of federal programs," Froke said. "Employers have either had bad experiences themselves or have heard about others who have had bad experiences. A lot of our time is spent just making contact."

EVEN SO, AGENCY spokespersons report they've had better-than-average success in developing contracts with employers. Of greater concern right now, in fact, is expanding the trainee referral list so they will be able to meet the needs of the employers with which they have contracts.

"It's really a two-way street," Froke said. "If we had more contracts — and hence more positions to fill — we'd probably have more success in filling them. And if we had more people to send out on interviews, we'd also have more success. It's really a matter of numbers."

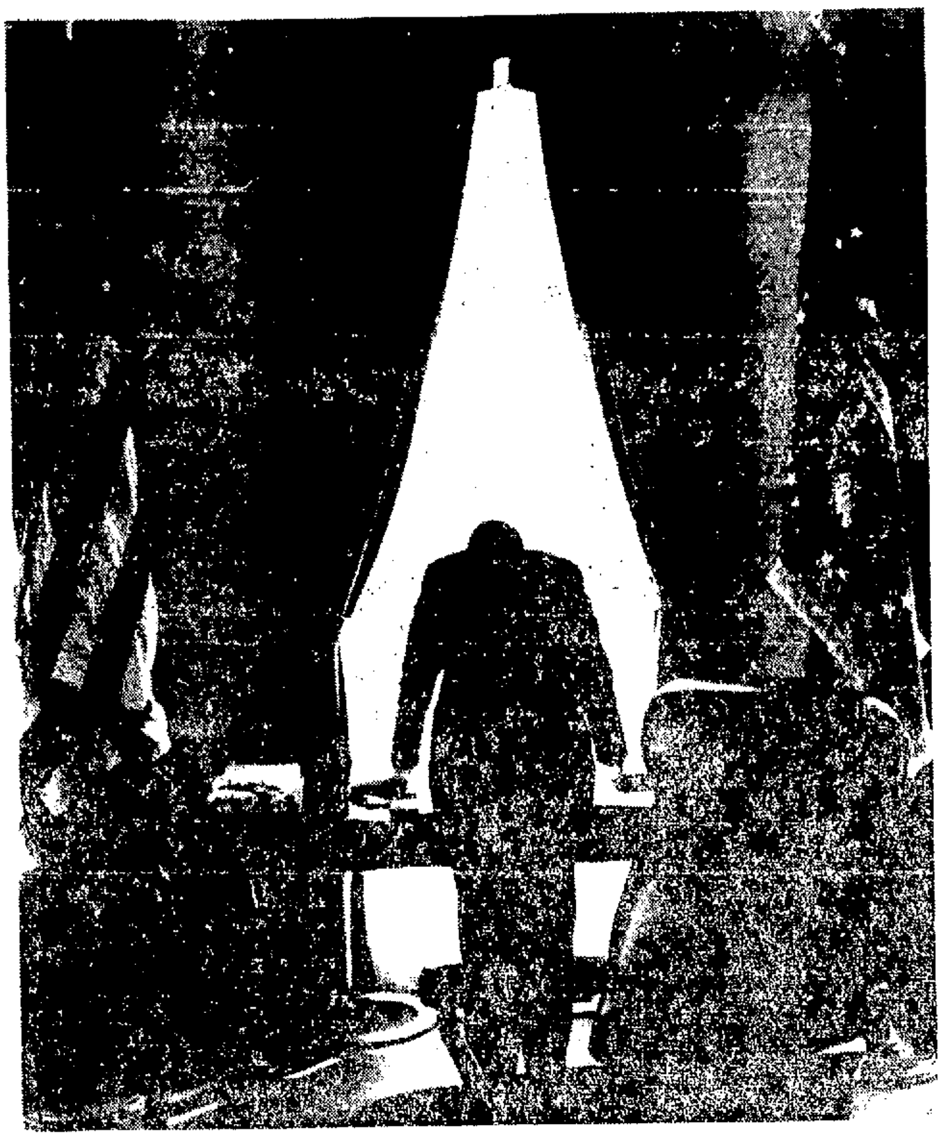
Spokespersons for the agencies agreed that a major problem seems to be that eligible Long Beach residents are not taking advantage of the CETA program.

They estimated that there are approximately 10,000 Long Beach residents who are at or below the poverty line but that only a small percentage — perhaps three per cent — have applied at the CETA Intake Center to participate in any of the several programs being offered.

"And not all of those who are screened at the CETA Intake Center are referred to us," Froke said. "And of those who are referred to us, there is a certain percentage who really don't want to work, can't deal with the transportation or child care problems that may be involved or would rather be enrolled in one of the classroom training programs offered and are just waiting for a place to open up."

One solution to the problem has been for agency representatives to go out in the field to "drum up business," Froke said. Visits to parks and neighborhood centers have proven moderately successful. Froke is optimistic that further effort will continue to pay off.

"In the meantime, on any given day, there might be a dozen or more good jobs open for which employers have agreed to consider our candidates," Froke said. "We know the people are out there who want work. It's a matter of reaching them."



At that moment

Alone at the top

The moment will come to symbolize what he is only beginning to learn now.

Thomas Jefferson called it "a splendid misery"; Harry Truman, "the big white jail"; William Howard Taft, "the loneliest place in the world."

Kidding about the presidency, John F. Kennedy said the job was good, the pay was fine, the working and living conditions were superb, and, besides, it involved only a small commute between home and office.

Not kidding, he said, after two years, "The problems are more difficult than I imagined them to be. The responsibilities placed on the United States are greater than I imagined them to be, and there are greater limitations upon our ability to bring about a favorable result than I had imagined them to be . . ."

On Feb. 10, 1961, Kennedy has been in the job only three weeks. On this day, which begins at 9 and ends at 8, he sees more than 100 people, singly or in groups, cabinet members, agency heads, diplomats, congressmen, staff assistants, a variety with a variety of purposes, ranging from the Mardi Gras queen to the director of the CIA.

At 5:01 p.m., awaiting the French ambassador, the President rises from his desk. Sitting in one place for more than 15 minutes makes him restless because of his back brace. He goes to the window overlooking Dwight Eisenhower's putting green and opens a newspaper to the editorial page . . .

George Tames, who is shooting a-day-in-the-life-of layout for the New York Times, moves in from an open doorway where he has been watching his prey. He is not thinking of the ages or the burdens of the presidency but only that here is a dramatic picture, the man silhouetted against the twilight and framed by the drapes and the flags.

He shoots three versions. The president looks up. "George," he asks, "where do you suppose this columnist gets all this junk?"

sion," says Katherine. "But it's necessary to take the child home and try the best you can. If it's not possible, then you have to place the child and let go.

"But at least the parents are the ones to make the decision and don't get pressured to do it right after birth."

In the case of her daughter, Katherine Gerdis says she never considered doing otherwise.

"I did mention it (placement in an institution) once for the record, but Michael knew I would never do it," she explains. "Jennifer was my child. We decided to take her home and that if it was too difficult, we would consider an institution."

The Gerdises are quick to explain, though, that not all children with handicaps can make it at home in the family situation.

MANY CHILDREN are so severely retarded and handicapped that their presence places too much of a strain on other family members. In addition, most families cannot give the kind of specialized care often needed.

The adjustments the Gerdises made to their infant daughter were mixed.

"Adjusting is hard," they agree. "At first, just the shock of it, that the baby you expected isn't perfect.

"It's like the whole world turns on end," adds Michael Gerdis wistfully. "You run the whole gamut of emotions."

"And immediately, you start thinking way into the future about the child's life. I know I did," says Katherine.

Mrs. Gerdis had an easier time accepting her daughter. Married eight years before she got pregnant, Katherine Gerdis says she was hungry for a child.

"We started with husband-coached childbirth and I had been to a La Leche League meeting," she explains. "It (breast feeding) was the one thing I could do for Jennifer. It is a good bonding for mother and child...and father."

(La Leche League is an organization which encourages mothers to breast feed their children to promote good mothering.)

ANOTHER ASPECT that helped, they say, was the intensive care nurseries at Children's Hospital where they were able to help care for their daughter during the month Jennifer was there.

"We were able to hold and touch her. I didn't hold her for the first time until she was six days old," says Mrs. Gerdis. "And until that time, she was just 'that' baby."

But even all of those elements couldn't help Michael Gerdis with the inner turmoil he felt. It was not until Jennifer was 18 months old, after the birth of their second daughter Becky, that Michael Gerdis says he finally accepted his daughter and her handicaps.

"It was eight years before Katherine became pregnant and by then I was quite comfortable and I wasn't overjoyed.

"Then I got excited during the pregnancy. But when Jennifer was born retarded, it just compounded everything."

Katherine Gerdis left the hospital the day after Jennifer's birth because she felt the atmosphere was too depressing. On the way home, she and her husband stopped at a library to find material on Down's Syndrome that might give them hope. Instead, they found the books badly outdated, featuring pictures of children so grossly deformed that they sunk into even deeper depression.

"For a long time after that Michael refused to read and educate himself about our child," says Katherine. "I wonder if we had had some positive input if he would have accepted Jennifer sooner. There was no group when she was born and it was several months before we talked to other couples."

What Katherine and Michael Gerdis went through was common for parents who have been told their son or daughter is handicapped.

THURSDAY'S Child terms it a "grieving process," a seven-stage emotional trauma ranging from the initial shock and confusion to anger, guilt and eventually, understanding. The time spent in each step varies from a few minutes to a few years.

"The key is to keep moving," says Katherine. "Not every step is taken."

During the grieving process, anger and guilt are normal. An aggressive partner usually vents the anger on the spouse or doctor while a passive partner turns the feelings inside as guilt.

Thursday's Child deals with these feelings offering parents sympathy, empathy and support. Although the group deals with parents whose children are beyond the newborn age, they try to provide positive input as early as possible to hopefully decrease the grieving time.

"It's important that the parent relate to the child," says Michael Gerdis. "For me, it was impossible to ignore the fact that Jennifer was retarded. Her retardedness always loomed up."

Eventually, by working out his feelings, Michael Gerdis says he learned to love his daughter and enjoy her life with the family.

"Jennifer was really a neat little girl," he says fondly. "And if Becky had been born retarded, I know I could have managed it.

"I hadn't really wanted children and when Katherine became pregnant with Becky nine months after Jennifer was born, I wasn't enthusiastic," he continues. "When John came, I was still upset. But by the time Paul came, I had found that children were a joy. I had come full circle."

THAT FULL circle brought the Gerdises and their family a deeper understanding of life, they say. They had felt that they had beaten the handicap and its limitations.

Then Jennifer Gerdis died in March 1976 after heart surgery.

When she died, the Gerdises found that despite their understanding, they were undergoing the grieving process again. Jennifer's death was unexpected and sudden.

"We've only had the one experience and since Jennifer's death, I've done a lot of reading," says Michael. "I had avoided death; it's not a popular subject and I didn't know what to do because it's not dealt with openly.

"We see death on TV all of the time, but it's not real. It doesn't have the same depth of emotion and I wasn't prepared for that."

Katherine says that following Jennifer's death she and her husband felt stress in their marriage. She wanted to talk about Jennifer, he couldn't. "We were in different places with our grief."

Finding that Thursday's Child wasn't enough to help them through their daughter's death, the Gerdises activated a second group, an extension of one they heard about in Detroit called First Sunday.

FIRST SUNDAY works with parents whose children are terminally ill or who have died.

"You know, parents never expect their children to die before them," says Katherine Gerdis. "If they do, it's a double loss. They grieve for the loss of the child and the loss of the expectations."

Now more than a year after Jennifer's death, the Gerdises are active in both Thursday's Child and First Sunday even though they no longer have handicapped children. They are helping other parents like themselves live fuller lives without remorse and anger.

They are hoping their groups gain more members and wider acceptance, especially with doctors who are wary of their intentions, says Michael. Thursday's Child can be contacted by writing P. O. Box 920, Cerritos 90701.

They also want to see a change in the image people have of the handicapped.

"Our society is geared to perfection," say the Gerdises. "The achieving daughter can marry a doctor. A son can become a lawyer. But when a child is handicapped, it's all wiped away. Everything is destroyed.

"THERE'S A great need for people to be concerned for other people. For awareness. We're a big society, all doing our own thing and no one really cares. If we could all be more concerned, particularly for handicapped children, we would not have that difficult a time."

The Gerdises say they have never regretted bringing their daughter home with them. Katherine Gerdis says she feels the experience has made her a better parent to her other three children.

Michael Gerdis says his only real fear is that one of the other children will die, but he's learning to cope.

In fact, they contend that dealing with Jennifer and her problems has made them more sensitive, understanding individuals.

"We learned to accept, love and care for people without qualifying or restricting our feelings," says Michael Gerdis. "I'm more comfortable with myself now than I was five years ago. Jennifer kicked us out of a rut and got us growing

"We still have our difficult moments, but these last five years have been really neat. Being open with Jennifer helped me be more open and caring with other people... and that's what life's all about."

Opening doors a matter of courtesy

It's odd that one of the biggest points of confusion in our lives is the lack of knowing how to go through doors and who should go first.

There are a lot of Me Firsters who have no doubt at all about who goes first. He or she goes first and let's go of the door right in the face of any oncoming person. As Me Firsters knock people aside in their relentless pursuit of entry, one may have fantasy hopes at times that they will plunge headlong into a pool of boiling water on the other side of the door.

According to protocol, a man opens the door for a lady and lets her go ahead of him. He then holds the door for anyone else in their party. A host and hostess wave their guests through the door into their dining room or into the restaurant.

When two women are at a door, the very much younger woman opens it and holds it for a very much older woman to pass through (but better watch those age differences — a slightly older woman might be insulted). Two women of about the same age would leave it to the one reaching the door first.

An employe waves his or her boss through the door first, regardless of age or sex. In other words, who opens the door for whom is a delicate matter of deference, something parents should teach their children from the time they are toddlers.

I'M ALL for following tradition when it makes sense. Anyone — man or woman, old or young — should hold the door for a very old person, a handicapped person, an adult with a baby or toddler, another person with packages or luggage.

In small towns or rural areas, a "thank you" for the opened door is an automatic response. Unfortunately, in most of our large metropolitan areas, the "thank you" is said often in a tone of surprise.

Saying "thank you" as you pass through the door someone else is holding open for you does not require any further conversation, but it is a pleasant, courteous reward to the person who has performed this small act of courtesy.

Of course, in our office world today where people are constantly going in and out of doors, whoever happens to get there first is supposed to open the door and hold it for others coming along. This may well be a woman.

And this woman may very well be the same one who wants her husband or escort to open all doors for her in their lives outside the office. That's all right, too.

Understanding death of child not easy

Dear Dr. Menninger:

I have just read your article on "How do you face death?" Well, I just wanted to let you know that I faced it a few weeks ago. My son would have been 17 this month.

I don't know how other parents face this. I am just going crazy. It is just awful to have a kid all those years, get him almost grown, and then lose him.

I feel sorry for anyone who has lost a child. Now I know how it is. I have talked to a Father, but that didn't help. Now I don't know what to do.

I can't sleep much. Or eat good either.

I have two other kids — one 14 and one 15½. And I can't have any more. I am 34 years old. I feel at this time that I will never be truly happy since I lost my child.

Can you please tell me what to do about all this. I don't know what to do next to keep my mind.

From a sad mother. — D.H.

DEAR D.H.:

A letter like yours always leaves me at a loss for words, because the pain resonates within me.

What can anyone say to relieve your pain? Not much, really. Any more than talking to someone who is badly hurt takes away their pain.

You have become a member in a special club — parents who have lost a child. My wife and I are members, though our loss was an infant son.

But we found in the time of our grief that there were many others around us who had a similar experience. And they shared how they gradually came to grips with the loss and again found happiness.

It is awful to lose a child after investing so much of yourself in raising him. To have him suddenly taken just as he is approaching adulthood seems grossly unfair. The pain may be increased because of the particular place your first-born has in your heart as the child who taught you how to be a parent.

Is it really better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all? You have to answer that question now.

And, I hope, you will be able to recall enough of thepleasures in your life and his that made the experience of raising him worth it.

DEPRESSION IS the result of feelings about a loss which cannot be easily expressed -- feelings of resentment and anger which are turned inwardly.

Thus you feel down in the dumps, discouraged, hopeless unhappy. And you have trouble sleeping and don't have any appetite.

What's to be done? First, accept the fact that you have been injured seriously, much the same as if you experienced an amputation. A part of you has been ripped away.

After such an injury, you must allow some time for healing. This, too, shall pass.

While you did not feel talking to the priest helped, you may yet find some help in talking to someone else especially helpful may be sharing your feelings with someone who has gone through the same experience, a fellow member of the "club." You can discover you are not so alone in this kind of experience.

Often it is helpful to get involved in some activity which keeps you busy. Clean the house from stem to stern. Physical activity and hard work can provide an outlet for angry feelings which may be bottled up by the depression.

Beware of ruminations of guilt or feelings that you somehow did not do all the things you should have done for your son.

If you have a religious commitment, you may find your faith is an important sustaining force. Death is never easy to deal with because it seems beyond any reason to explain.

Faith in a Higher Power overlooking our earthly lives can be reassuring.

Finally, keep your life in perspective. You have two other children. Give them the opportunity to help you find happiness again. While your nest may be suddenly "one-third" empty, it is still two-thirds full.

Medicine and You

Focus on tiny babies

One in every 13 babies born each year in the United States is born too soon, too small or both.

These tiny babies (less than five and a half pounds) are called low birth weight infants and account for 70 per cent of all deaths in the first year of life.

Low birth weight is a serious disadvantage, and these babies often have problems handling such vital life functions as breathing, metabolism, excretion and control of body temperatures.

A new pamphlet describes the problems these babies face and what measures physicians take to save them. Issued by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, it is entitled "Little Babies: Born Too Soon — Born Too Small."

Mothers at risk often:

—Are under 16 years old.

—Have previously given birth to a low birth weight infant.

—Are undernourished.

—Are suffering from a chronic condition (diabetes and certain infections).

—Smoke cigarettes.

—Are alcoholics or addicted to narcotics.

—Have not had regular prenatal care.

—Have certain genetic disorders.

Pregnancy test

All pregnant women past the age of 35 should be offered a test to determine whether their child will be normal, according to a research report.

The older mothers have an increased risk of giving birth to mongoloid infants, the report notes. The test should also be given to expectant mothers of all ages who are Rh-negative (a blood type), diabetic, have high blood pressure or have a family history of defective children.

The test, known as amniocentesis, is a highly accurate procedure and is safe for both the mother and the unborn child, says the report. A report on the topic was issued by the National Institute of Child and Human Development, Bethesda, Md.

Amniocentesis involves the extraction and analysis of fluid from the sac surrounding the fetus inside the pregnant woman. It can predict many potential abnormalities.

Teens uninformed

Many young persons, college students in particular, lack information about birth control, according to a study in Canada.

A survey in Montreal of 509 undergraduate students shows that 34 per cent had inadequate knowledge. Also, 20 per cent of sexually active females risked unwanted pregnancy in spite of adequate knowledge.

The report says a birth control clinic on campus should help improve student willingness to use contraception.

The report is in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Sweating controlled

Cold probe surgery is being used successfully to curb excessive sweating in the armpits, two doctors report in the British Medical Journal.

The first series of patients involved a probe 13 by nine millimeters. Eleven applications were required for each side, with treatment requiring 45 minutes. Later a circular 18 millimeter diameter probe was used, and only seven applications were required. This reduced treatment time to about 30 minutes.

Sweating has been reduced to below normal, and the final cosmetic effect is better than the excision approach, the doctors say.

Free clinic tests for glaucoma

By Ben Zinser
Medical-Science Editor

A free clinic to test for glaucoma, an eye disorder, continues to be held at Pacific Hospital of Long Beach.

The clinic has been held twice a month for the past 17 years.

About 1,000 persons a year are availing themselves of the clinic, according to hospital officials.

Glaucoma, medical observers say, is one of the main causes of blindness in the United States. An estimated 14 million persons suffer from the disease in this country.

One form of the disease causes no pain and results in a gradual loss of vision.

The glaucoma testing clinic at Pacific Hospital is operated as a public service by volunteer physicians and by members of the Pacific Hospital Guild.

THE CLINIC operates throughout the year — on the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Reservations are required.

Glaucoma is characterized by increased pressure inside the eye. The screening test shows whether intraocular pressure is higher than what one would expect.

The eye-pressure test is simple and painless. If this test should turn up suspicious results, the patient is then given a more complex testing procedure called tonography.

This test also is painless and is administered without charge.

Last year, 898 patients were screened in the clinic. Of these, 51 were referred for tonography, the advanced diagnostic procedure. This test ruled out 14 suspected cases of glaucoma. Eight persons were referred to their physicians without the tonography test, and 27 were sent to their doctors for further testing after tonography.

DURING most years, almost one-tenth of tested patients are diagnosed as having glaucoma or as persons who are candidates for the disease.

If the patient wishes it, a free test to determine blood pressure is given. This is done in an effort to find persons who have high blood pressure.

Groups who wish to be tested together are tested by special arrangement. Persons who wish a clinic appointment are asked to telephone Pacific Hospital and ask for "glaucoma clinic information."

One Guild member, Grace Stilgenbauer, has been with the clinic since it was started in 1959. Others participating include Mrs. Lucille Newhall, chairman; and Mmes. Marge Eckman, Dorothy Mandes, Virginia Herron, Dorothy Morton and Dorothy Buser.

ACS sets training sessions

Two training sessions geared for the health educator will be offered by local unit of the American Cancer Society.

A training session in breast self-examination will be given by Yolanda Broady, a volunteer, at 1:30 p. m. July 13 in the board room of the cancer society's Long Beach office at 936 Pine Ave.

Art Scoyni, volunteer, will give training in testicular self-examination at 1 p. m. on July 14, also in the board room.

The cancer society says one in every 13 women in the United States will develop breast cancer. Testicular cancer affects one in every 2,000 males.

Reservations may be made by calling the education department of the American Cancer Society in Long Beach.

Long Beach artists

Carry city's name afar

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

Long Beach artists have had their work accepted for exhibit in many areas. Art-A-Fair officials have announced names of artists they have chosen for their festival, one of Laguna Beach's three summer art events. This festival will open July 15 and continue through Aug. 31. It is located at a new and historic site at the corner of Laguna Canyon Road and Canyon Acres Drive. This is the home of Laguna Beach pioneer Harvey Hemenway and is one of the most photographed and painted of Laguna's landmarks.

The Long Beach artists who will be represented are Bernice Houser Patti Rock and Diana Troup.

Hours for Art-A-Fair, which specializes in traditional art, will be 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sundays through Thursdays and from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Admission is fifty cents for adults, children free

THOMAS LORIMER of Long Beach was invited by Gallery '85 in Billings, Mont., to create a piece of art commemorating the 100th anniversary of the "Retreat and Surrender of Chief Joseph and the Nez Perce." His painting, "Escape of the Nez Perce at Canyon Creek" is now on exhibit in the gallery.

Artists from 13 states are participating in Flags, Banners and Kites, an international exhibition sponsored by Allied Arts and the Allied Arts Foundation, which will be held July 10 through 24 at the Flag Plaza Pavilion of Seattle Center, in Seattle, Wash. Representing Long Beach are Victoria Mournean, who is displaying an untitled banner, and Edward W. Randell whose entries are "Grommet's Chinese," "Dale," and "Emperor Ming," all kites. Also participating are Claire Falkenstein of Venice and John Follis of Los Angeles.

Drawings in charcoal and conte and some watercolors and oils by Mari Abrams of Long Beach are on display for six weeks at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St. Most of her drawings are figure studies on paper, canvas and rice paper.

LONG BEACH ART ASSOCIATION will install officers and directors Tuesday at a dinner meeting in the Long Beach Gallery in the Recreation Department Building. Councilperson Renee Simon will speak

Mrs. Harry Brown will accept the office of president for a second term. Serving with her will be Walton McNulty, first vice president; Marian Bruce, second vice president; and Charlotte Robertson, Judith Barnes, Lucille Supple, Elynor Brown and Josephine Ronnau

THE MUSEUM ALLIANCE of Long Beach Museum of Art will hold its annual meeting today from 4 to 6 p.m. at the museum, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. There will be refreshments and entertainment and members will hear announcement of the fall exhibition schedule.

SINCE APRIL 15 when the "Treasures of Tutankhamun" exhibit opened at Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History, more than 590,000 persons have seen the great examples of Egyptian art.

This collection of 55 ancient treasures previously was visited by 825,000 visitors when it was shown in Washington, D.C. Chicago Field Museum officials expect more than 1.25 million persons to view the show before it closes Aug. 15. Then it will go to the New Orleans Museum of Art and will arrive in mid-February at Los Angeles Museum of Art. When it leaves there, it will go to the Seattle Art Museum and will conclude its United States tour at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The exhibit is outdrawing even the marvelous "Archeological Finds of the People's Republic of China" which toured this country in 1974-75.

THE MODERN AND CONTEMPORARY Art Council of Los Angeles County Museum of Art has named winners in its 1977 New Talent Awards 14th annual competition.

Painters James Hayward and Margit Omar of Venice and sculptor John Okulick of San Pedro each received $2,000 and will present a work of art to the museum during the next six years.

More than 80 Los Angeles County artists were visited by a committee of the Modern and Contemporary Art Council, which worked during the year in conjunction with the museum's department of modern art to select winners. The program was established in 1963 to provide support and encouragement to Los Angeles County artists under 36 years of age who show promise and have not yet achieved national acclaim.

MICKEY ROONEY, Butch Jenkins Jr. and Elizabeth Taylor starred in 'National Velvet' in 1944.

'Classic Films' will entertain young viewers

Last summer, Los Angeles County Museum of Art showed "Classic Films for Children." The response was tremendous so the museum's film department has organized a second series of 12 motion pictures especially suitable for young viewers. They will be shown on Sundays at 1 p.m. from July 10 through Sept. 25 in the museum's Leo S. Bing Theater, 5905 Wilshire Blvd. Each will be accompanied by a color cartoon and an episode from the 1941 serial "The Adventures of Captain Marvel."

Admission to each program is $1 for children, $2 for adults. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the museum or by mail, and may be bought one hour prior to each show time.

THE SCHEDULE IS: July 10, "Little Women" (1933) with Katharine Hepburn and Joan Bennett; July 17, "The Secret Garden" (1949), with Dean Stockwell and Margaret O'Brien; July 24, "King Kong" (1933) with Fay Wray and Robert Armstrong; July 31,"Son of Kong" (1933) with Helen Mack and Robert Armstrong.

Also, Aug. 7, "National Velvet" (1944) with Mickey Rooney and Elizabeth Taylor; Aug. 14, "Tarzan and the Mermaids" (1948) with Johnny Weissmuller and Brenda Joyce; Aug. 21, "Gunga Din" (1939) with Cary Grant and Douglas Fairbanks Jr.; Aug. 28, "Heidi" (1937) with Shirley Temple and Jean Hersholt; Sept. 4, "The Spanish Main" (1945) with Paul Henreid and Maureen O'Hara; Sept. 11, "The Thief of Bagdad" (1940) with Sabu and Conrad Vedit; Sept 18, "Mighty Joe Young" (1949) with Terry Moore and Robert Armstrong; and Sept 25, "The Yearling" (1946) with Gregory Peck and Jane Wyman.

Concerts in the Grove

Concerts in the Grove will be given July 3, July 30 and Aug. 13 at 8 p.m. in the Soroptimist House Patio on campus at Long Beach State University. Admission for each program is $5.

The opening concert will be by the Back Bay Jazz Band, a young group which plays traditional jazz. On July 30, Alfredo Rolando Ortiz, Paraguayan folk harpist, will perform and on Aug. 13, the El Toro Marine Third Aircraft Wing Band will play.

All programs are sponsored by the LBSU Alumni Association. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the alumni office in the Student Union, or may be bought at the gate.

LACLO shows on stage

Los Angeles Civic Light Opera currently has two shows playing at the Music Center, Los Angeles, and will open its final production of the season Aug. 30.

"The Wiz" is doing a repeat season at the Ahmanson Theater, having had a completely sold out run last summer. It will continue through Sept. 10.

"Annie Get Your Gun" opened Tuesday at the Pavilion where it will play through Aug. 6. Irving Berlin himself asked Debbie Reynolds to star in this version of his popular musical which is being revived as a tribute to his 89th birthday. Harve Presnell is Frank Butler, the sharpshooter whom Annie Oakley challenges. Also co-starring is Gavin MacLeod who portrays Murray on the Mary Tyler Moore Show. The new and different staging is by Gower Champion who directed and choreographed.

Bibi Osterwald, Art Lund, Manu Tupou, Don Potter and Peter Bruni are featured.

WHEN FIRST produced on Broadway 30 years ago, "Annie" had more song hits than any show which preceded it and ran nearly three years to become the second-longest running musical comedy of its time with 1,147 performances in New York. The songs include "The Girl That I Marry," "They Say That Falling in Love Is Wonderful," "Anything You Can Do I Can Do Better," "I Got Lost in His Arms," "Doin' What Comes Naturally" and "There's No Business Like Show Business."

The last LACLO musical of the season will open Aug. 30 in the Pavilion where it will run through Oct. 15. Starring Liza Minelli, the show originally was called "In Person" but has been renamed "Shine It On." Barry Nelson, recently seen in Los Angeles in "The Norman Conquests," has been signed by producers Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin to star opposite Miss Minnelli. The new title is the name of the song with which the show opens and closes.

Barry Nelson

NOW IN REHEARSAL under the direction of Martin Scorsese, "Shine It On" will open in Chicago July 5 and will come to Los Angeles after a six-week run in San Francisco. After it closes Oct. 15, it will move East to open in New York Oct. 23.

The musical was written especially for Miss Minelli by George Furth, author of "Company," with music and lyrics by John Kander and Fred Ebb who also wrote the score for "Cabaret." The show is described as "an incisive look at a critical 10 years in the life of a young performer with a compulsive drive for fame which she must reconcile with her private life, a conflict between ambition and love set against a musical background."

Shaw to conduct Bach at Bowl

As a pre-season Hollywood Bowl event, Robert Shaw, music director of the Atlanta Symphony, will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic in a three-program Bach Festival July 7, 8 and 9.

Special low prices will be in effect: the top price will be $4.50 July 7 and 8 and $6 July 9.

In addition to the orchestra, vocal and instrumental soloists and the USC National Workshop Chorale will perform a widely varied schedule of works by Bach.

AT THE BOWL, Shaw will lead the performers in nine compositions: four choral works, including the "St. Matthew Passion" sung in Shaw's own English translation, and the "Magnificat;" and five orchestral pieces including the Fourth Brandenburg Concerto, the Concerto for Two Violins, and the Harspichord Concerto No. 1 in D-minor.

RTD'S LOW-COST Park and Ride service again will be available for concert-goers. Patrons may park their cars free of charge in lots in or near their own neighborhoods, then ride a special non-stop RTD bus to and from the Bowl for 50 cents each way. Attendants will be on duty at each of the lots until cars have been picked up after the concert.

Lots in the Long Beach area are:

LONG BEACH (Line 567): Bank of America, 1840 Long Beach Blvd., corner of Long Beach Boulevard and Pacific Coast Highway. Departures at 6:30, 6:45 and 7 p.m.

TORRANCE (Line 557): Torrance County Courthouse, 825 Maple Ave. Departures at 6:30 and 7 p.m.

COMPTON-CARSON (Line 566): Dominguez Hills State College. Entrance at Victoria Street and Tamcliff Avenue, east of Avalon Boulevard. Turn right and enter the westernmost parking lot. Departure at 7 p.m.

DOWNEY (Line 561): Los Angeles County Administrative Center. Park at 9151 E Imperial Highway. Entrance is east of Clark Avenue. Departure at 7 p.m.

Kids invited to 'Open House'

Summer is filled with activities designed for youngsters. One that will begin its ninth season July 5 and will continue through Aug. 12 is "Open House at the Bowl," an admission-free, five-day-a-week festival for children.

In order to accommodate reservation requests beyond the capacity of the Bowl, this year Open House is holding a second season at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut. "Hollywood Bowl Open House East," sponsored by Mt. San Antonio College Community Services, will feature the same attractions that appear at the Bowl. There will be two performances each weekday morning from July 5 to 22.

The Children's Festival of Holidays 'Round the World, featuring entertainment and workshops in celebration of International Holidays, will expose young people to their rich cultural heritage.

EACH WEEKDAY Open House will offer (1) entertainment through hour-long performances by dance, instrumental music, theater, puppet ensembles and individual artists; (2) active involvement in music and related arts through participation in workshops: rhythm and musical instruments, kite and mask making taught by Ron Labyorteaux, dances from near and far with teachers from the Aman Institute, drama improvisations with actress Pavla Ustinov; (3) exposure to the Los Angeles Philharmonic — children are invited to attend the orchestra's rehearsals which take place weekday mornings except Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Performances at Hollywood Bowl will take place at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. with simultaneous performance and workshop activities on the Plaza Stage and in the Garden Stage Workshop. Performances at Mt. San Antonio College will take place at 9:15 and 10:15 a.m. For further information, call Joan Reynolds at the bowl or write to Open House, P.O. Box 1951, Hollywood 90028.

Advice to the Taxlorn

Form helps computer do job

DEAR MR. SMITH: Assume my tax for 1976 was $1,000. I paid three installments of an estimated tax of $250 each in April, June and September. But I did not pay an estimated tax on Jan. 15. Instead, I filed a final return by Jan. 31 and paid the tax due.

That is the way I have paid my income tax for years and years. But last year, my tax consultant said I also had to file a penalty Form 2210; which I did. But I did not have to pay a penalty. Again this year, I was told I had to file penalty Form 2210 even though I didn't have to pay a penalty. My question is: Is it really required that I file Form 2210? — J.J.

The IRS computer is almost human, but it would take some times for the dates and amounts of everyone's estimated payments to be matched with their 1040s, and they can't hold up the assembly line. Unless you have that 2210 attached, the IRS may conclude that you made four estimated tax payments of $187.50 each, instead of three of $250 which could easily incur a penalty. It would eventually get straightened out, but why not make things as easy as possible for the IRS? The fewer reasons IRS has for fiddling with your return the better for you.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I bought a new airplane three years ago and have had it leased continuously since then to air charter service. I have been using a seven-year (150 per cent) depreciation schedule and took a 10 per cent investment tax credit the first year. I am now going to terminate the lease agreement and go out of the leasing business. I will keep the airplane, however, and use it personally. If I do not sell the plane, will any of the investment tax credit or depreciation be recaptured? — R.K.

No recapture of depreciation is required when you convert investment property to personal use. But, yes, recapture of the investment tax credit is required on that same airplane. If the airplane will have been in business use for a full three years, only two-thirds of the 10 per cent credit is subject to recapture.

DEAR MR. SMITH: This year I purchased a new residence. I sold my old residence for $75,000, less sales charges. The adjusted sales price of the old house was $68,400. My new house cost me $59,750, and I have added approximately $7,000 for carpeting drapes, etc. How should I handle this transaction and what forms should I use?

Also, on the old residence, I received a $2,000 tax credit. I lived there less than three years. What do I do about that? — J.B

jacob smith

You should have sought tax advice before signing those papers, but perhaps all is not lost. If you are the first to occupy your new residence that saves you from having to pay back the $2,000 credit. Fill out Form 2119 to calculate how much gain is deferred because you acquired a new residence, and how much you can exclude if you are over 65.

I assume that you made no sale of a residence within 18 months prior to the 1976 sale. For purposes of deferring gain, if the tax basis or adjusted sales price of your old house or the cost of the new house, includes furniture or other personal property, you must eliminate those amounts in each case.

Tax deferral on buying and selling personal residences, apply on to land, building and improvements. Floor coverings and other personal property, can, in some cases, become realty improvement because of forming a special attachment to the building. Any gain from sale of other personal property is taxable without deferral.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My ex-husband has recently retired. According to the terms of our divorce agreement, upon his death or retirement I am to receive approximately one-half of his profit sharing plan account as of the date of our decree. My share will be about $50,000.

Must I declare this as ordinary income? Can I put all or part of it into an Individual Retirement Account in order to avoid income tax on the whole amount? Are there any other alternatives? — W.A.W.

If you and your former husband lived in a community property state while married — for example Arizona or California — and if you received the entire distribution during one calendar year, then you will have a lump-sum distribution which is first reduced by your ex-husband's contributions, if any. The remainder can be reported as long-term capital gain with regular income averaging, or as ordinary income subject to the special 10-year averaging provisions on federal Form 1972. Figure your tax both ways to be sure.

And remember, long-term capital gain is now partially subject to a separate federal preference tax of 15 per cent. Be guided by the material you (or your ex-husband) should be receiving from the pension plan administrator, and watch for Form 1099-R, which may come later on. And if you (or your ex-husband) receive shares of company stock, there are special rules covering the acquisition.

If you did not live in a community property state during marriage, there may be very little that is taxable other than earnings on the basic amount. Read, very carefully, the pertinent provisions of your property settlement agreement, and consider getting professional assistance.

I find nothing in the tax rules that would permit anyone but an employe to roll over into an Individual Retirement Account so as to defer income taxes. But you still have a good part of the year to decide about paying out maximum deductibles, taking stock losses, and trying to slow down other income until 1978. But first make sure you know the tax impact of your 1977 windfall.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081. Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

'My feet not only talk, they 'bark', during hot weather. How can I get a better 'under-standing'?'

Women are asking

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

Like to keep your feet "smiling" all summer long? Then, initiate a B.K.T.Y.F. plan. Translation: Be Kind To Your Feet!

"If you're going barefoot this summer, be sure it's on a soft, yielding surface — like grass or clean sand." This is the first suggestion from Dr. Ira Schwerin, nationally known podiatrist.

"Remember fungus forms fast in a dark, warm, moist area, like inside a closed shoe. That's why summer sandals can be a blessing. Just make certain the broad strap falls behind the bunion joint, and back strap goes around the heel.

"Naturally, any back strap may rub against the heel. Lotions, pumice stone, and podiatry care will help that situation.

"After a busy day, many find relaxing feet in a basin of mild soap and warm (never hot) water beneficial. If you let the water run over the feet, it stimulates and acts as a massage. Blot feet dry. Be careful not to rub roughly between the toes, for this could injure the skin.

"Now, sprinkle with foot powder. Some use cornstarch to dust feet. Whatever talc used, the powder keeps feet dry and helps avoid fungus."

WE HAD to ask what the Beverly Hills podiatrist thought about wearing platform shoes. "If the soles are no more than ½ inch thick, they'll act as a cushion for the feet. If too high, they can be dangerous.

"One of the most important things to remember in buying shoes is to see the ball of the foot is correctly fit. If the widest part of the foot fits the widest part of the shoe, the arch will be supported by the shank of the shoe. Then, you and your feet will have reason to smile!"

P.S. Like to wear a dress or suit size smaller? Check the famous four-day Hollywood Star diet. The average, healthy adult may lose four pounds. Send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba and Bonnie Churchill, "4-Day Diet for Figure Trimmers." c/o Indpendent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

The Formula

Leather gets soft treatment

norman stark

If improperly treated leather gets wet it can become stiff and uncomfortable, so it's advisable to keep boots well oiled to prevent this from occurring. Here's a formula for a product that I have used for years.

You'll need five tablespoons of NEAT'S FOOT OIL (from a boot and shoe store), one tablespoon TALLOW (from a meat market), and one and one-half tablespoons MINERAL OIL. Heat all three ingredients in top section of a double boiler (never over an open flame) until the piece of tallow is melted. Stir to assure a good mix. Transfer to glass, metal or plastic containers.

To use, first clean boots thoroughly and then rub in mixture to penetrate and soften the leather. Note: For more penetration, heat boots in a low temperature oven (about 100 degrees) before applying oil which should also be warmed.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Socially Speaking

This is one party which can be called unique

carolyn mcdowell

PARTIES COME in all sizes and shapes.

They range from inimate little dinners for four to intimate little dinners for four hundred.

They are given in celebrations of birthdays, weddings, anniversaries (once in a while we note a divorce celebration), holidays, picnics, TV-watching parties for all sports and Big Events like election night.

There are congratulatory parties, retirement parties, reunion parties, christening parties (both babies and boats), graduation parties, garden parties, new house-warming parties, farewell parties, welcome-back parties, grand opening parties, theater parties, fund-raising parties, bus trip parties, bridal and baby shower parties, bridge parties, pre-something parties, post-something parties, costume parties, wine-tasting parties, home movie parties and plain for-no-good-reason-parties.

We've covered them all, but Harold and Marilyn Nelson of Arbor Road in Lakewood gave a party that is a first for this column.

They invited neighbors for a mortgage burning party.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago, five young, growing families bought homes on Arbor Road in what was then a "beanfield patch."

Margaret Miller wrote and delivered an amusing history of the street, recapping her life with husband, Rue, and that of the families of Charles and Betty Miller (no relation), Karl and Faye Snyder and Ralph and Genny Choy. They also threw away those old and tattered payment books. Mayme Edwards also was eligible for the party, but she took a vacation to celebrate her "paid-for house."

Of course they didn't really burn their mortgages, using instead beribboned replicas of a dream come true. In this day and age of inflated .eal estate speculation, most people don't stay in a house long enough to pay it off — six families on the same street doing it is practically unheard of.

Witnesses were the Charles Millers' daughter, Joanne Fossum and husband, Bob, from Walnut Creek and their daughter-in-law, Cindy Miller. Husband and son, Mike, had to work so he missed the Big Fire.

Other youngsters, now all grown up, were Ed and Dorothy Choat, (Dorothy is the daughter of the Harold Nelsons) and Susan Halliday and husband, Randy, of San Bernardino. (Susan is the daughter of the Rue Millers.) Other witnesses were the Barney Edgells of Capistrano.

SAN FRANCISCO called and members of Signal Hill and Long Beach Rotary Clubs and their ladies answered.

The call was to attend the 68th Rotary International convention.

Signal Hill representatives included Veater and Shirley Barton, Keith and Marilyn Carey, Curt and Mickey Foster, Guy and June Hawkins, Bruce and Muriel May, Bob and Mary Porter and Dick and Mae Wilson.

Among those from the Long Beach club were Duane and Elva Nibbelink.

BILL AND MARION Schmedahe were honored at a reception on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary.

The party was co-hosted by their five children in the Fireside Room of Bethany Lutheran Church. Their son, 1st. Lt. John Schmedahe, USAF, came from Portland, Ore. to assist with the festivities. Another son, Jim, took time out from studies at UC Santa Barbara to join local sons, Don and Tom, and daughter, Mary Kay Esswein.

Special guests were the Rev. Nathan Toesch, pastor of the church, and Helen McEnulty, who was guest at the Schmedahes' wedding in Kansas City, Mo. 25 years ago.

IF YOU ARE in the mood for reading about upcoming reunions, you have turned to the right page.

We have a bunch of them.

Such as the 47th anniversary of the founding of Cumaean Club at Long Beach City College.

Dorothy Goodknight, the first sponsor of the female fraternity, tells me they have reserved Assistance League House for a luncheon.

The date is July 21.

Contact Dorothy at 1065 E. Third St., Long Beach, 90802. Or Jeannette Reichner at 3630 E. Second St., Long Beach, 90803.

The last time the group got together was in 1955 for their silver jubilee so they are in need of all of the up-to-date addresses of "lost" members.

WERE ANY of you out there ever Seabees?

If I have to explain the name to you, then you weren't and you may pass this one without a penalty.

Anyhow the 16th Seabees (unit) have scheduled a silver anniversary of the association at the Sacramento Inn in Sacramento.

The reminiscing and story swapping is scheduled Aug. 11 through 14. If you are eligible contact chairman, Floyd Hall, 7869 La Riviera Drive, Sacramento, 95826.

HOW ABOUT a picnic?

Some members of the class of 1937 of Narbonne High School are planning a potluck picnic for members, teachers and other alums from the good old days.

Sunday, July 24 is the date. Picnickers will gather at 4 p.m. (or maybe earlier says committee member Nellie Billaud Dillon) on the Southwest corner of Averill Park in San Pedro.

To get your name in the pot write to Bernice Fish Jessop, 1332 S. Leland St., San Pedro, 90731.

Other committee members are Matsuye "Alice" Okada Matsui, Dick Kastrup and Charles Likens.

EXCELSIOR UNION High School's Class of 1927 is having a classy reunion.

Members have reserved the Tiffany Room at the Long Beach Elks Club for a golden anniversary banquet on Thursday.

Teachers and alums from other years are also invited to attend. One invitation has been sent to a distinguished alumna, Pat Nixon.

Committee chairlady is Julia Rundell.

Send your reservations to Dr. Eugene Haskell (he was senior class president) P.O. Box 506, Artesia, 90701.

With the entire nation tightening its energy belt, there has never been a better time to add these attractive and simple-to-build awnings to your home.

Not only can awnings effectively reduce indoor temperatures up to 20 degrees (by shielding the windows from the sun's glare), but they provide a finishing touch to any style exterior. And with our exclusive design, you can complete the job at a fraction of what it would cost in a store (if you could even find durable wood awnings!).

Both the window and door units may be expanded to fit any width opening, and may be constructed from redwood or exterior grade plywood. We painted these in alternate stripes so you could see the simplicity of the structure, but they can be painted to match any decor. The full-size pattern includes traceable parts, step-by-step photos and instructions, plus a complete materials list to remove all the guesswork.

To obtain the full-size awning pattern #259324 (via first class mail), send $2. Or you can order our #C-24 packet (nine different lawn and garden projects including the awnings) all for only $6.

Energy Bonus! Our attractive cupola, #348, designed to ventilate attics and reduce total house temperature, $1.50. Send all checks or money orders to Steve Ellingson, c/o Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram Pattern Dept. P.O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Calif. 91409

ira corn

Dear Mr. Corn:

I bid one diamond over my opponent's opening of one spade. He bid in a low voice, and there were some distractions and I didn't hear him. What was the proper penalty at rubber bridge? — Low Batteries, San Francisco.

Answer:

"If the opponents call attention to the insufficient bid, it must be corrected. Either a sufficient bid or a pass may be substituted; doubles or redoubles are out. In your case, if you had bid two diamonds, there would be no further penalty.

"Any other sufficient bid would have barred partner from the auction and a pass would have subjected partner to lead penalties if he were to make the opening lead.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Are the terms "negative pass" and "penalty pass" synonymous? — No Communication, Birmingham, Ala.

Answer: No. The penalty pass is a pass to partner's takeout or optional double. With an exceptionally strong holding in the opponent's trump suit one might pass a takeout double and thereby convert it for penalties. The negative pass is a nebulous term. I imagine that it refers to a pass of one of partner's non-forcing bids because of insufficient strength.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I opened two no trump with a maximum count of 24. My partner jumped to five diamonds. I had the A-J-10 of diamonds so I continued on to six. Partner had little in high cards and much distribution we went down. Who gets the blame? — Inflated Values, Jamaica, N.Y..

Answer: You do. When you opened two no trump you had told your story — 22-24 high card points and all suits stopped. A responder's direct jump to game might be a gambling bid and in this instance, is one of the few true close-out bids.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner doubled an opening preempt of four diamonds. We were vulnerable and this was my hand. What should I have bid?

♥ 10 3
♦ J 10 9 8
♣ Q 7 5 3

Doggy Bagged, Indianapolis.

Answer: I might not like it, but I would pass and hope for the best. Surely, the cinch diamond trick should help defeat four diamonds while any contract played by your side should have scant hopes of success.

However, rarely are there any sure things after a high level preempt and there's always a possibility that a pass might bring regrets.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened a game demand of two hearts. What was my proper response with this hand:

♠ Q 7 4 2
♥ 10 9 8 6
♦ J 4
♣ J 7 5

— Trump Support, Torrance, Calif.

Answer: Bid four hearts. A direct jump to game after a major suit demand describes a hand with four or more trumps but with no aces, kings or singletons.

Question of what to take and what to leave behind

erma bombeck

Boy, the Egyptians had the right idea. When they went they took it all with them, right to the tomb.

A few have tried to revive the custom. There was a woman in New Jersey who was buried with her telephone. (Talk about cruel! Her husband included a 75-foot extension cord!) There was a golfer in Florida who requested he be buried with his clubs on the first green. His will said he always wanted a permanent "hole in one." A couple of months ago in California, a woman requested she be buried in her lace nightgown at the wheel of her Ferrari "with the seat slanted comfortably."

IT GOT me to thinking, why should I leave my untold wealth to a second wife? Let her amass her own fortune like I did. That is why I am insisting that the following items go with me when I go.

My book of sitters' telephone numbers: This is a first edition that I wear at all times taped to my bra. I have kids in there who will work for 50 cents an hour and all the food that doesn't attack them first. Also, a sweet, little elderly woman who cleans the oven when I'm gone and one woman who believes, "There is no such thing as a rotten kid. He just needs a laxative."

A letter from the book club telling me of my cancellation: You can't buy letters like this and it took me four years of correspondence, plus the purchase of a Xerox machine to get it. Besides, I don't want to take any chances. If they keep sending me books, I've got proof.

The television warranty: Let her go crazy trying to explain she knows there is still a year or so to go on the picture tube, but she just can't find the serial number, and it sounds crazy, but the first wife took it with her.

An 1801 antique hatpin: This little antique is unequaled in value and hard to replace. It's the only thing that unlocks the bathroom door from the outside when one of the kids has been in there a day and a half.

ONE HALF of a Master's Degree: My husband earned it, but half of it is mine under community poperty. It represented our trip to Europe, a new sofa, screen on the back porch, a sailboat and a garbage compressor.

Page from the sewing machine manual on how to thread the bobbin of my old machine. After all, he didn't promise her a rose garden and if she's everything she told him she is, she'll figure it out -- in a year or two.

Eighteen books of green stamps: I didn't buy "specials on day-old fish" and survive 180 Double Stamp Days of combat just to have the second wife get the ping-pong table. If I can't feel the exhilaration of turning in all those books at the redemption center, no one else will.

The rest she can have ... the kids who eat every three hours, the husband who, if she cooks Dinosaur Hocks with green beans for dinner, had it for lunch ... the lemon-scented house in the suburbs ... she can even have my car.

Of course, I'll take along the only set of keys for it.

MARGUERITE THOMPSON
Bill's wife gets proper recognition

I HAVE BEEN reprimanded for my negligence. In the past, my columns about Kelly's restaurant mentioned Marguerite Thompson, but may not have given her proper credit.

For some time, I have omitted Marguerite's name by accident. So I deserved the rebuke which came in a letter from Virginia Mathews, one of Kelly's many devotees. She deftly put co-owner Bill Thompson down a bit by omitting his first name. She wrote:

"I would be remiss to let Kelly's super-host Thompson receive all the many kudos he has in the last few months without protest! The other half of the Thompson team, Marguerite, has to be one of the most special people in the restaurant business in Long Beach. If you don't believe this, come to Kelly's some night when she's keeping the show going. . .Many customers look forward to her nights on duty. I hope failing to mention Marguerite is just an oversight on your part. P.S. — Others who make Kelly's an especially warm friendly place to meet your friends are Jerry, Bruce and Cecil."

Virginia, please accept my sincere thanks for your reminder. Kelly's (spelled with a backward K, just to be different) is at 5716 E. Second St. in the Long Beach suburb of Naples. It is open every night for dinner, except Mondays. It is an exceptional restaurant — one of Southern California's very finest and Long Beach is lucky to have it. Kelly's is so popular that Marguerite, on duty as hostess nearly every night, has a pressure-packed job which she handles with finesse and charm.

Kelly's doesn't serve luncheon. It doesn't offer entertainment. It concentrates completely on being a fine dinner house. The chefs are a pair of artists who turn out wonderful steaks, lamb chops, prime rib au jus, sea delicacies, chicken livers sauteed with mushrooms, sweetbreads and two splendid Italian entrees. The chefs are Milena Hladikova, who's been there 19 years, and Chuck Harris, who replaced the late, beloved Frank Rossi. Chuck formerly worked at the Apple Valley Steak House, Petroleum Club and Elks Club.

The three fellows Virginia mentioned are Kelly's bartenders. Others who rate praise are Kelly's waiters who really care — Bob, Walter, Shane, George and Roy. (Roy is Roy Ghere, formerly at the Manhattan.) The dinners, $4.75 to over $8, include bountiful tray of appetizers, superb soup and salad, potatoes and hot bread. One of the popular after dinner drinks is Coffee Robeson, similar to Irish Coffee, named in honor of columnist George Robeson.

IT'S CALLED A chimichanga. It's new on the menu at El Patio Mexican Restaurant and another example of the imaginative dining ideas that bring this restaurant so many compliments.

Chimichanga is a creation that originated in Arizona. It's a la carte, $2.50, and quite different from the traditional dishes of old Mexico. It consists of a rolled-up tortilla filled with pork, green chili and jack cheese. After being lightly fried, it is served with salsa, a sauce made with tomatoes, onion and chili. The chimichanga is topped with sour cream and guacamole, made with crushed avocado.

El Patio is a spacious restaurant at 3503 Atlantic Ave. just north of Wardlow Road, open every day from 11:30 a.m. to midnight, serving luncheon, dinner, cocktails and banquets. It is owned by Tony and Triny Guillen. Their son, Bud, is assistant manager. The kitchen and dining room staffs are large to help El Patio give the best possible service.

Most of the guests visit El Patio for its 11 combination platters, its six special dinners and four varieties of steaks. Others come for the specialities which are a la carte and aren't usually found in most Southern California Mexican restaurants. Unusually popular are the sopapillas, a kind of hot popover served with honey. They are three for 50 cents, a delectable substitute for bread or tortillas.

Long before other restaurants thought of the idea, El Patio was featuring langostino tacos and enchiladas. Langostinos are baby lobsters. Seafoods and light Mexican sauces are a perfect combination. The enchilada, $1.45, comes with sauce, tomatoes, lettuce and an olive. The taco is $1.15.

It is the freshness of the food as well as the sparkling flavors which set El Patio apart from other restaurants. Mexican food must be served at the very peak of its freshness and delivered on sizzling hot platters to keep everything warm while being eaten. El Patio uses enormous 3½-pound platters for many of its specialities. They are so large they stay hot for a long time.

One of El Patio's big beauties is the chicken combination, $4.35. It consists of green salad with choice of dressing followed by a platter loaded with chicken enchilada, chicken taco, chicken tamale, beans and Spanish rice. Another feature is the meatless combination, $3.40, of enchilada, tostado, chili relleno and rice or beans. The combinations start at $2.80 for enchilada, taco and beans with salad. The special dinners, $3.50 to $4.35, include soup or salad, entree, beans, rice, tortillas, dessert and coffee or tea.

CIA is 'necessary, but overused'

By Dianne Smith
Staff Writer

The CIA has been maligned and exposed by former employes in several books and articles of late, but there is one ex-employe who wants to set the record straight on just what the CIA does and doesn't do.

He's Harry Rositzke, a former professor of Germanic studies who spent 25 years with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). He joined at its formation following World War II. His last assignment before retirement in 1970 was in Washington doing domestic intelligence operations against the Soviets and East Germans.

He served as station chief in New Delhi, India, from 1957 to 1962, where his principal responsibility was working against Soviet and Chinese intelligence targets there.

Espionage and counterespionage are the main business of the CIA, explained Rositzke during a late afternoon interview in Hollywood. "Domestic spying on our citizens is not under our jurisdiction. In fact, it's against the CIA charter."

His book, "The CIA's Secret Operations," (Reader's Digest Press) covers what he calls the threefold role of the intelligence service: "Espionage (gaining information from the other side), counterespionage (trying to prevent the other side from gaining access to U.S. secrets) and covert action (the secret support of radio, newspapers, political parties and labor unions to influence events in other countries through guerrilla operations, armed invasions and secret wars.)"

HE BLAMED the failure of the covert actions, which have been highly publicized and have tarnished the image of the CIA, on the White House. He also blamed the failure of the containment policy adopted during the Cold War (whereby the U.S. sought to curb the expansion of Soviet power and influence) on White House control of activities.

The intrusion of politics into the CIA operations is the "worst thing that can happen. The agency has been able to function, but morale is bad and foreign agents' confidence in the CIA's ability to protect them was hit hard. It will take two or three years to regain that trust."

He claims the CIA has been "misused and overused and accepted a lot of jobs it should not have undertaken."

In light of these problems, would he join the intelligence service today? "Definitely. The world is more complicated and the need for secret information is greater than ever before. The gathering of intelligence is a profession. There's little of the cloak and dagger stuff in real life.

"The guts of most secret operations are two men — the agent and his case officer — meeting in private to transact their business. Each has his foibles and strengths, and it is this human element that has attracted me throughout my career. At its best, espionage, like politics, is a humanist profession."

IN LINE with this comment from the introduction to his book, he said it is important to understand the difference between the word "agent," who is the foreigner recruited by the CIA to provide information, and the case officer, intelligence officer or operations officer, who is the staff member of the CIA.

"The CIA man is NOT the agent. He is the agent handler. The confidentiality of agents is of the utmost importance to the workings of the intelligence gathering.

"That's where the professionalism comes in — never to lead the opposition to one of our agents.

"The CIA officers assigned abroad use diplomatic cover, in other words they become part of an embassy's or consulate's staff. This means if they're caught, they can be kicked out of the country, but they can't go to jail. The same is true of KGB (Russian) officers in this country."

The main job of an intelligence officer, according to Rositzke, is to be inconspicuous and to carry out his job. "Of course, we know all the names of the KGB officers in this country, most attached to the United Nations mission, and they know ours. There were 350 in New York City alone several years ago. Today, I'm sure the number is closer to 475.

"That isn't really the issue. The issue is that the KGB has to meet its agents in such a way that we can't detect them. And, the KGB has recruited more American citizens as agents than we have Russian citizens. It's a matter of access. There's more freedom of movement and ability to meet and socialize with people here.

"It's a field day for the KGB. All they have to do is keep looking and they're bound to find somebody who needs money or who doesn't really have much faith in the system, and put them on the payroll. Without access, there are no secrets to worry about getting.

ASKED IF there were many women in the CIA, Rositzke replied, "There are a lot of women in the CIA, but there are very few women case officers.

"In most countries, a woman, let's say under diplomatic cover, cannot really carry out the job of meeting, assessing and recruiting a foreign male. The clandestine meetings required in such cases would lead to talk of an affair and be far from inconspicuous."

Does the CIA recruit women agents? The answer was "No."

"In most countries — Arab states, Southeast Asia, Africa — women aren't even secretaries in a foreign office. In other words, if the status of women is such in a country that the men almost completely disregard them in terms of their business, professional or governmental lives, then a woman — just because she's an American, it doesn't matter — would never get to have their respect, trust or confidence."

However, he added, "Where women are best is as counterespionage analysts. Here, women are indispensable because they have keener minds, more patience for handling details. I know of women who have spent 20 to 25 years working on different aspects of foreign intelligence. This work is vital to the operation."

He said it wouldn't have occurred to him to write a book about his old profession up to three years after he retired, but with the sensationalism of some of the CIA exposes, he wanted to tell it like it was, so to speak.

"I try to offer a behind-the-scenes look at our intelligence operations, the need for such operations and to point out successes, as well as failures. This is not a whitewash, because the best interests of the country would not be served by such an attempt. What I've tried to do is separate the fact from he fiction."

THE FACT IS, he pointed out, that being in intelligence work is not like it is in the James Bond movies. "My life, to my regret, wasn't like James Bond's.

"There were very few beautiful women and no sports cars. Most of what he (Bond) did, any way, wasn't intelligence, but criminal investigations.

"Intelligence work isn't really a glamorous business, but it's an important and necessary one if America is to retain her position of power in the world. She must be aware of the inner workings of other nations."

As Arthur Schlesigner Jr writes in his forward to the book, "What the Cold War did was to give intelligence operations a magnitude and an immunity that transformed the character of the problem. But the excesses of recent years illustrate a danger, they do not eliminate a need. The future of the intelligence community remains a vital issue for Congress and the people. The problem is to insure restraint and accountability."

Toward this end, Rositzke offers some suggestions. He believes the CIA has become "too big, too overcome by bureaucracy." He thinks its size should be contracted, its priorities changed and its mission restricted.

To do this, he suggests reducing the intelligence budget because then there would be less money to "indulge in operation fantasies."

He also recommends the creation of a counterintelligence ombudsman, appointed by and responsible to a joint congressional committee, to which any federal employe with reason can blow the whistle if he suspects his agency is carrying on unauthorized activities."

Dear Abby

Beauty isn't always asset in marriage

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that most "plain" women seem to have the best marriages, and most outstanding beauties are divorced, married again, divorced again, and can't make a success of a marriage? Even with the advantage of having been born beautiful they can't seem to find happiness. Why is that? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Believe it or not, natural beauty can be something of a handicap. Some beauties rely entirely on their "looks" to get them everything they want, and they neglect to develop the more durable and important qualities.

A girl may be able to "capture" a man with her beauty. Indeed she can capture more than one, if she so desires. But unless she knows how to give him more than the pleasure of just looking at her, she won't keep him long.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend (I'll call her "Thelma") met a very handsome dealer in Las Vegas two years ago. (I'll call him "Ken.") Well, Thelma and Ken flipped for each other and have been practically living together ever since. Ken told Thelma from the start that he and his wife had been separated for about 10 years, but that she was Catholic and would never give him a divorce.

Thelma gave up all her friends and devoted all her time and attention to Ken, who gave her this big story about how he had to devote two nights a week to "an old girl friend" he had known for years.

Thelma is all torn up because she no longer wants to share Ken with this old friend. Is there a solution? — PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I am puzzled as to why you are trying to help Thelma work out an adulterous dilemma with a two-timing dude like Ken. As I see it, all Ken loves is his appetite for variety. So tell Thelma that she can't win in this game, because Ken is holding all the aces, plus two queens. He's probably got the deck stacked and is dealing from the bottom, to boot.

DEAR ABBY: When I married my wife 10 years ago I had a moustache. I kept it for two years, and she never complained about it. Then I shaved it off, and she told me to please leave it off because she never liked it. Okay, so I left it off, but here's the problem:

Every year for the last six years we have a celebration in town called "Frontier Days," which lasts for a whole month. Nearly every man in town grows a beard, moustache or goatee just to get into the spirit of the celebration.

Every year I go through the same thing. It takes me three weeks to get my moustache grown out, and I wear it for a month because I want to be one of the guys and I enjoy it.

As soon as I start growing the moustache, my wife refuses to kiss me, love me or have anything to do with me at bedtime.

Well, seven weeks is a long time for a fun-loving healthy guy like me to go without a kiss. Any suggestions? — MISSING SOMETHING

DEAR MISSING: Get a false moustache that can be glued on and removed easily. That way you can participate in "Frontier Days" without missing anything at night.

DEAR ABBY: Our dear and saintly minister preaches a beautiful sermon every Sunday morning, and at the conclusion of each service he goes to the rear of the church to shake hands with all the members of the congregation as they go out the door.

The problem is that he grasps each hand and squeezes it as though he were cracking nuts!

My poor mother, with her hands gnarled by arthritis, waits in line as though she were going to her execution!

I'm sure our minister reads your column, Abby, so if you print my letter, he may recognize himself and take the hint. Thank you. — W.

DEAR W.: Your mother — and all the rest of you out there for whom an enthusiastic handshake is painful — should not hesitate to say, when extending a hand in greeting, "Gently, please — arthritis!"

Designer Pattern

Camisole tops flounced skirt

It's fashion's prettiest look — a bare, brief, camisole topping a flirt of a flounced, drawstring skirt. Christine Albers adds a delicate touch of tucking to the camisole and buttons it down the back.

The skirt is light as a breeze whether you choose the eyelet flounced version or self fabric. As a matter of fact, Printed Pattern A506 is totally simple to sew. And a delight to wear in cotton or silk for day, dancing, vacation fun.

Printed Pattern A506 is available in Misses' Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) camisole and skirt (with purchased ruffling) require 3 yards 45-inch fabric.

Please send $1.50 for Printed Pattern A506 to Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Department, P. O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 35 cents for each pattern for First Class Airmail and Special handling.) Print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

NEW! All the clothes you want most now are in our new 1977 Prominent Designer Book! See them, sew them — jumpsuits, tunics, day-dinner dresses, tops, pants, skirts, total wardrobes by America's top creators. Use the 50 cents free coupon to apply to any pattern of your choice. Send 75 cents for Book 32 now.

Sew-Knit Book includes basic tissue pattern adjustable for sizes 10-20; 40, 42. Sew dresses, gowns, blouses, skirts, jackets, more. Then, knit another complete wardrobe. Send $1.25 now.

Surprising Hamburg, Germany's second city

By Herb Shannon
I.P-T Travel Editor

HAMBURG, Germany — Historians might still be puzzling over connotations of the late John F. Kennedy's inspirational line, "I am a Berliner!" if the speech had been delivered here. Citizens of this second largest city of the German Federal Republic proudly call themselves Hamburgers for a logical reason, which has nothing to do with the principal product of McDonald's ubiquituous fast food chain.

Although you can spot the sign of the Golden Arches while sightseeing in Hamburg if you keep your eyes peeled, the city has no more connection with its edible namesake than Frankfurt with the hot dog, or the description of Munich's leberkase with its contents, which is neither liver nor cheese in spite of the literal translation.

In Frankfurt, rindwurst is the long, thin, red sausage that tastes like a frankfurter should. In Munich, the worst that can happen is that you will learn to like the so-called liver cheese, a baked beef and pork loaf which has only a regal nodding acquaintance with a direct descendant once known to U. S. Army cooks as Spam.

HAMBURG'S CIVIC CENTER BOAT LANDING

IN HAMBURG, Germany's largest seaport, the specialty is sea food. The only gastronomic reference to the city's name on any menu encountered on this three-day visit was Aalsuppe Hamburger, or eel soup, Hamburg style. Not a scrap of ground beef in it, but surprisingly, there were round, prickly bones in the bottom of the bowl. For some reason I always have thought of eels as boneless, like bananas.

Another surprise for the first-time visitor is the harmonious way this great industrial city has been imposed on an advantageous setting. Hamburg's greatest natural assets are the freshwater Lake Alster in the center of the city and the meandering River Elbe which feeds it before flowing onward to the harbor at the head of its estuary leading to the North Sea.

Lining the lake on both sides are continuous landscaped parks with occasional benches at view points and separate walking and bicycle paths. Numerous small boat marinas dot the shores, with sailing vessels outumbering powered craft by about 100 to one in a casual survey. Sculling crews, circling regattas and ferry launches have no problem avoiding each other on the broad reaches of the waterway.

BOULEVARDS set back from the green belts rimming the lake prevent the stately mansions, office buildings and older hotels from encroaching on the water. Some of the new high-rise hotels, like the Intercontinental, are farther removed from the scene by small parks on their own grounds, and screened from view at ground level by plantings. The drive to the hotel from the Lufthansa German Airlines terminal at Hamburg Airport on the outskirts of the city is a continuous scenic delight.

The panorama of the city from the Intercontinental's rooftop Fontenay Salon shows few signs of the industrial might which made Hamburg a city of nearly two million population. The waterways, the greenery and the ornate spires of a dozen or more historic churches needling the sky give a strong impression of Copenhagen, long recognized as one of the most beautiful capitals of Europe. Hamburgers contend their favorite city is neck and neck with Munich for first place in Germany's City Beautiful sweepstakes, but they may be overly generous to the Bavarians by at least a nose.

THERE IS a seamy side of the city. Raunchy is a more accurate word for the infamous Reeperbahn and its side streets in the St. Pauli dockside district. Hamburg's Sin City features the most concentrated collection of nudie bars, skin flick houses, sex shops and red light establishments in Europe. Most of the city's 2,500 registred prostitutes work the streets and a network of covered alleys leading to a cavelike central rendezvous where scantily clad damsels display their charms under dim lights.

Even here there are efforts to clean up at least the outward appearance. Pimps and their professionals are restricted to clearly defined areas and the hours between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. Sidewalk shills who shanghai patrons off the street face hefty fines. Following construction of a subway extension line under the Reeperbahn, officials plan a landscaped divider for the street, much to the dismay of businessmen who fear the trees will screen their gaudy neon marquees.

travel

It is not necessary to visit the Reeperbahn for live entertainment in Hamburg. The Hansa Theater, a supper club in a 19th century concert hall, provides a full orchestra for a 2½-hour variety show in the best tradition of vaudeville, along with a choice of a set cold plate meal or dinners from the menu. Waiters respond with drinks to the touch of a button at every table. Multilingual acts from Europe's music hall circuit round out a very enjoyable evening.

Irish flying boat

"The Southern Cross," one of two giant Sandringham flying boats which ended an aviation era in Long Beach with the last trans-Pacific seaplane flights in 1974, will fly the Irish flag this summer.

Capt. Charles Blair and his wife, actress Maureen O'Hara, will operate the four-engine, 42-passenger craft on sightseeing tours from the Irish mainland to the Aran Islands in Galway Bay. The service was inaugurated Saturday under an agreement with Aer Arann, the Irish domestic airline.

herb shannon

Blair piloted both of the S-25 flying boats on successive Pacific crossings from Australia in October and December of 1974, stopping in Long Beach for maintenance and service. His auburn-haired wife served as stewardess and official photographer on both flights.

The aircraft, the last of their type in service anywhere in the world, were purchased in Australia for the Blairs' Antilles Air Boat Service in the Caribbean. This year and last, the couple used one of the flying boats to commute to their summer home on Bantry Bay in Ireland.

The summer service under the Aer Arann banner will take passengers on one-day tours from Killaloe on the Shannon River to the Aran Island village of Inishmore. After the island visit, the seaplane will return passengers to the mainland, putting down on the lake at Cong for lunch at Ashford Castle, a magnificent hotel on the site of a 13th century estate. The third flight of the day returns to Killaloe.

The best news about the only flying boat service in Europe is the cost of the outing. The $60 per person fare includes the round trip to Inishmore and Cong, all sightseeing and lunch at Ashford.

Full information on the flying boat tour and other Aer Arann services is available from the Irish Tourist Board, 510 W. Sixth St., Room 317, Los Angeles, Calif. 90014.

Aix Les Bains fixes your aches and pains

By Linda Goldston
Ridder News Service

AIX-LES-BAINS, France — The frivolous notion of a vacation was not invented in this lakeside resort, but it might well have been.

All the pleasures of water and the sun are here for the asking, making it hard to stay inside. Very hard.

The only "indoors" interludes recommended are for the necessity of sleeping and the luxury of basking in a major European spa.

Even if your rhematism isn't acting up, a thorough soaking in the 90-degree water at the Roman baths of the hot springs will rejuvenate that tired body and prepare it for the activities to come.

The accent is on feeling good Body and mind.

Nestled on Lake Bourget in the French Alps, Aix-Les-Bains is one of those places the weary traveler wishes he'd come to first.

The site originally was a Roman spa and continues to soothe the aches and pains of 5,000 persons daily. About 400 to 500 Americans visit the area yearly, usually in transit.

FORMERLY shut off to most tourists, the area is now becoming more of a crossroads with a new airport and new highways.

As the popularity spreads, so do the facilities. A new thermal bath complex catering to the international clientele is expected to open soon and will be situated in a lush park-like area on a hillside.

A convention center that accommodates 1,200 persons also is available. The Royal Hotel overlooks the city and provides four star accommodations.

Lake Bourget, largest natural lake in France, is your ticket to fishing, swimming, sailing, water skiing, rowing and skin diving.

The lake originates from springs and is most bountiful to fishermen with perch and pike. Several local restaurants feature fresh perch from the lake as their specialty.

If you feel steadier with ground at your feet, there's tennis, golf on an 18-hole course, skeet shooting, horse racing, car rallies and tandem bike rides around the lake.

AND THE fun continues long after the sun has faded behind nearby Mt. Revard.

The Grand Casino beckons the lake luck challengers and is the scene of frequent concerts. Some 14 nightclubs provide quite a choice in this city of 25,000.

The big "white palace" housing the privately run casino was built in 1899. The concert hall at the casino features a 120-musician orchestra and seating for 900 persons.

The town square has a perpetual holiday air with its lush landscaping and frequent outdoor concepts. Each day's activities are announced over a loudspeaker.

The city hall was built in an old Roman church in the 16th century and has a free open-air museum.

Lake Bourget tempers the climate so that Mediterranean vegatation can grow, although at nearby Mount Revard there is a winter sports resort. Many lifts, a ski school and numerous well-marked ski runs thread through the surrounding forests and slopes.

WITHIN a few hours driving distance from Lyon and Renoble, Aix-Les-Bains also is near the monastery of The Grande Chartreuse, where 40 members of the Carthusian Order pursue their historic life of silence and solitude.

A tiny, winding road will take you farther and farther back into virtually untouched countryside to the imposing monastery. Tourists may visit the adjacent correrie where a representation of the contemplative life is shown.

In Lower Voirons is the distillery where Chartreuse liquers are made. Visitors are shown through all but the secret chamber where the monks mix and add their herbs to the liquers. The exact combination of herbs for the liqueurs has remained a secret for centuries.

Ahoy there, picky people

Penny-wise Traveler

Is it possible to be a bad picker of cruise ships even after you've carefully compared prices, ports and cabin size and location?

It is, but no law says you have to be.

In fact, anyone with the $75 to $105 a day that it's likely to cost you to socialize at sea these days should also have smarts enough to grasp the necessity for becoming a pickier person. The fact that all cruise ships float does not mean they are identical.

There are big and little differences. If your goal is to become the world's foremost authority on mistakes and how to make them, the thing to do is ignore the differences. For instance

When faced with a choice of several ships of varying sizes, do not ask if size matters. If it means, as it occasionally does, that the big ships can't park at a port's dock, and therefore costs you precious shore time being ferried back and forth, terrific! You can grouse about this for years.

Never check cruise dates to see if they correspond to school vacation times. That way, if you're allergic to children, you stand a much better chance of determining if the presence of small persons can really ruin a trip or only give you gas pains.

When deciding among several ships, don't ask to see sample menus. You might find that the style and range of one ship's cooking has more appeal than the others and be tempted to go where the goodies are.

PICKY PEOPLE of course become happy people by reversing this route. Easier ways to go include the following:

1. If you have to fly to and from a port to take your cruise, by all means ask about air-sea excursion fares or any other discounts, hardly the worst news to hear.

2. Don't take it for granted that all ships have both indoor and outdoor swimming pools, full gymnasiums, elevators and individual control of cabin air conditioning. Even very good ships can lack one or all of these things.

3. Don't ignore the fact that "suggested tipping" and bar prices are not uniform from ship to ship. The ship line will gladly tell its policies or recommendations in advance.

4. Read the advertising. What it emphasizes can clue you as to whether you're buying a ride on a floating nightclub or the last bastion of formal living. Anyone who is a hater of big bands, discos, neckties and a host of other things has a golden opportunity to be a showboat's Lonesome George or Georgia.

5. For the same reason, look for a travel agent who specializes in cruises in order to ask about a ship's reputation for "style" and the type of passengers it caters to. There's a lot to be said for trying to travel with people you like and have something in common with.

Maui magic still charms

Gal-Ivanting

MAUI, Hawaii — With balmy air bouncing fluffy clouds in the blue skies overhead, we sped in our rental car along the seashore highway. Misty isles rose from the bay to our right. A windswept sea of sugar cane rolled to our left. We were off for another day of exploring the island.

I have watched this lovely stretch of beach and its seaport town grow from a quiet tropical retreat reminiscent of old Waikiki to a crowded checkerboard of condominiums and hotels.

choral pepper

A sign announcing Jesus Coming Soon marked our arrival in Lahaina town. Like the beach, the village has learned to accommodate lifestyles that would spin its 19th century missionaries in their graves.

We tried to shop for picnic supplies, but after sidestepping throngs of ice-cream-cone-licking tourists who crowded the sidewalks, we retrieved our car and continued on our way.

THE PREVIOUS day we had driven north of the Royal Lahaina hotel while my companion reminisced nostalgically about hidden coves with sandy beaches where he had picnicked and snorkeled in years gone by. To his disappointment, they now are crowded like the town. Near some, autos were lined up along the highway's shoulders for miles in all directions. Others have been developed into condominium projects.

This day we set off in the opposite direction, determined to find a place of solitude for a picnic in Iao Valley. Since the route led through Wailuku, a charming old town of narrow hilly streets, we stopped there for picnic supplies in a quaint little store that featured strange Japanese foods along with the usual cheese, pickles and beer.

Iao Valley is one of the loveliest spots of the island. Serene and hushed, it belies the violence of its history. Prior to World War II, its streams were the main source of Maui's water supply. After the bombing of Pearl Harbor, there were fears that the Japanese had poisoned the water.

THE RUMOR proved untrue or a legendary incident of old Hawaii might have been reenacted. This occurred in 1790 when King Kamehameha I defeated the forces of the king of Maui so decisively that their warriors bodies choked the stream and gave the park its name — Kepaniwai — which means "damming of the waters."

As we ascended the valley, mountain ridges appeared to hang in green shrouds from the sky. Below, masses of red tulip tree blossoms, frangi-pangi and blue morning glory banked along the ground. In occasional open areas, gigantic banyan trees dropped fringes of roots partitioned into mysterious chambers.

At the top, Iao Valley State Park, dominated by the 2250-foot-high Iao Needle, rose before us. After hiking a short distance uphill, we decided to settle for a picnic by the stream and chose another trail leading down into the canyon.

The Park Department here has done a good job. Trails are marked with unobtrusive signs identifying broad-leafed birdnest ferns, screw pines with multitudinous roots, candlenut trees, fishtail fern and other rare plants that grow in this clime.

DOWN BY the stream we climbed atop a sun-warmed boulder to enjoy our picnic fare. Water splashed against the rocks as it raced down-stream, creating a sensual medley with verdant jungle smells and lush tropical growth. We felt centuries removed from Lahaina's busy tourists racing from one activity to another.

Maui's enchantment is that it provides space for all kinds of people — those who seek fulfillment in nature and those who get their kicks in crowds. Next to Oahu, there is more going on here than on other islands of the Hawaiian group.

Good reason for Maui's popularity is its wealth of sandy beaches, golf courses, tennis courts and luxury accommodations. The Royal Lahaina hotel, where we stayed, has them all, in addition to sailing lessons, hula classes and lei-making sessions for guests.

Evening entertainment is available at most of the hotels lined up along Lahaina Beach. The most elegant room for dinner dancing is the Royal Lahaina's Crown Room where paradoxical portraits of Hawaii's historic nobility line the walls. Because of a fawning regard for European nobility, they had commissioned artists to make them resemble the Portuguese in feature and dress.

Our finest dining was at the new Royal Lahaina Country Club overlooking the golf course and sea. It is open to the public. Service as well as cuisine here is superb. Be sure to order the deep dish apple pie served piping hot in iron pots.

Keeping cool in Singapore

Singapore

Caught Cathay Pacific's dinner flight from Hong Kong down to Singapore where the night temperature was a steamy 80 degrees. Got an air-conditioned room in the Marco Polo (related to Hong Kong's grand Peninsula) and went downstairs to audition the famous Singapore Sling.

The "Sling" was the cooler before air-conditioning. It was sloshed by British bounders and blackguards. By exiled ne'er-do-well nephews. And by writers like Kipling and Maugham.

The locale was "Cads' Alley". The watering hole: The Long Bar — still going.

Here's the original formula from year 1915:

"⅔ Tanqueray gin; ¼ Heering Cherry brandy; few drops of Benedictine, Cointreau and Angostura bitters. Add ¼ mixed orange, pineapple and lime juice. Pour in a glass of ice. Stir."

At 85 degrees north of equator, Singapura — "the Lion City" — is always an AVERAGE 80 degrees. It's the cleanest city in Asia.

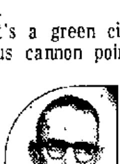
Lee Kuan Yew, the strongman premier, did not make speeches about "Keep Our City Clean."

HE PASSED a law: Drop a cigaret butt, a gum wrapper or even spit on the street. Fine $500. (U.S. $209.)

Another $500 fine if you smoke in an elevator, a bus or a theater.

A foreigner caught with marijuana is booted out of the country. A Singapuran pushing heroin is executed.

It's a green city by a blue bay. (Where the famous cannon pointed while the Japanese Army marched in by the back causeway. "Impossible," said the British whose cemented guns pointed firmly out to sea.)



stan delaplane

Population 2.3 million. Three of four are Chinese. The slummy alleys of 20 years ago have been ripped out. They've built low-cost high-rises. Lawns are green and barbered with stands of palms.

A good shopping city — Singapore has always been a rival of Hong Kong. Chinese tailors. Ivory and jade. Japanese cameras and steros at free port prices.

"FREE PORT" doesn't necessarily mean "cheap."

An American businessman who flies the Orient several times a year said:

"These towns are being priced out by inflation. Plus the drop in the U.S. dollar. Take Hong Kong: The U.S. dollar used to exchange for Hong Kong dollars $5 or $6. Now you only get $4.53 HK.

"Inflation is bad. People who own real estate squeeze the shopowner like an orange.

"I priced some tailor-made shirts in Hong Kong: $25 U.S. I can have them tailor-made in San Francisco for $28. And if they put in poor thread or buttons, I can go back and raise hell."

Traveling businessmen (Cathay Pacific flies most of them and has a back-of-the-seat magazine with latest prices) say Korea is the lowest on tailored suits now.

Hong Kong and Tokyo airport "duty-free" shops MUCH higher than in town. Pick up business mainly from bored passengers between flights.

CAMERA buff told me: "I bought a Japanese accessory in Singapore for $72. Saw it in the Tokyo airport duty-free shop, $90.

"A Japanese camera in 'duty-free' Hong Kong was about $600. I figured by the time I brought it home and paid duty, I could have bought it in New York for $8 less."

"Glutton Square". It's a parking lot by day. At night Singapore cars are gone and the street restaurants roll in. Little lighted, portable restaurants — you put them together like a toy model.

There are tables in the square. You shop the stands. Satay — spiced meat on a skewer at one. Indian curry from another. Bottled beer at a third.

You set up your own dinner at a table.

Seems safe to me. The night we had dinner, the chairman of the board of Singapore Airlines was eating at the next table.

Here's the picture that's supposed to make everyone run off to the South Pacific. It works every time.

Anticipating the response, we've got some tours to make the trip as pleasant as the picture.

Tahiti, 10 days, $729.

You'll spend 5 nights in Tahiti and 6 nights in Moorea. (That's where Tahitians go for vacation.) And we include air fare, hotels, and transportation by motor yacht between Tahiti and Moorea in the price of the tour. We also include a circle-the-island tour of Tahiti. And in Moorea, the use of outrigger canoes, snorkel equipment, and glass-bottom paddle boats. Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's Tahitian Escape, PAH 540. Or send in the coupon below.

Australia Fly/Drive, 14 nights, $1,048.

The continent of Australia is as big as the United States, with a culture that ranges from aboriginal tribes to the sophistication of the opera house in Sydney. To see as much of Australia as you can, we'll give you a car with the first 1,000 kilometers free. Tour price includes accommodations for the first night at the TraveLodge in Sydney. For the balance of your vacation we include accommodations at a country hotel in West Wyalong.

New Zealand Fly/Drive, 14 nights, $993.

If you don't think of New Zealand as the perfect South Pacific retreat, a drive through it will change your mind. In fact, we give you a car with the first 1,000 kilometers free. Tour price includes accommodations for the first night at the TraveLodge in Auckland. For the balance of your vacation we include accommodations at a quaint country hotel in Awanui.

Besides the car, our Fly/Drive vacations include round trip fare, and your hotels for the length of your stay. Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's Australia/New Zealand Fly/Drive vacations, PAH 055. Or send in the coupon below.

We also offer tours to some equally exotic, far-off places. Like Pago Pago, Nadi, and Samoa.

The prices of our tours are based on round trip GIT economy air fare, for groups of 10 or more, and are available on selected departure dates. If a group is not formed we'll try to arrange an alternate date. Hotels are based on double occupancy.

In our Australia/New Zealand Fly/Drive vacations, car rentals are based on 2 people sharing. You pay only for gasoline, insurance, and local taxes. Tickets must be purchased at least 21 days in advance. For our Tahiti vacation you purchase your tickets at least 3 days in advance.

For more information on how to run off to the South Pacific, call your travel agent. Or just run off to your mailbox and send in the coupon below.

Collectors keep track of Toonerville Trolleys

Q. "Our wind-up Toonerville Trolley toy is in perfect working condition." — Mr. and Mrs. E. L., Macon, Mo.

A: Fontaine Fox was the creator of the beloved Toonerville Trolley comic strip starring an unforgettable cast of characters and one dilapidated trolley. The Skipper-operated, tin, windup, Trolley toy marketed by Nifty in 1922 wholesaled for $8 per dozen. Nowadays it is difficult to track one down even with prices hovering around $300.

Several variations were also offered along with other Toonerville Trolley toys featuring Powerful Katrinka and Aunt Eppie Hogg. So if you have to miss a trolley, please be certain it isn't a Toonerville Trolley!

Q. "In an old trinket box I discovered a coral brooch." — Helen, Drunkirk, N.Y.

A. Jewelry designers active during the 19th century created breathtakingly beautiful bracelets, brooches, rings and even tiaras, combining coral with other precious stones. The colors ranged from pure white through shades of pink to red. Sometimes the palest varieties were skillfully crafted into flower petals for botanical jewelry.

Because coral supposedly had the power to ward off evil spirits, pieces were often presented to children, even by the skeptics! Value guide: brooch, branch coral, 14k gold mounting, circa 1870, $50.

Q. "When did the Rookwood Pottery adopt its 'RP' monogram trademark?" — Faith, Knightstown, Ind.

A. The famed Rookwood Pottery of Cincinnati, Ohio, founded by Maria Longworth Storer in 1880, introduced its familiar RP monogram mark in 1886. Each year thereafter, one flame mark was added above the monogram, until 14 flames appeared in 1900.

Thereafter, a Roman numeral under the symbol provided the year of manufacture. Many pieces also bear shape marks, process marks, clay marks or decorator marks to further unravel the mystery of a Rockwood find! Value guide: vase, orange nasturtiums, 4¾ inches tall, circa 1898, $175.

Q. "We're about to dispose of a collection of shaving mugs and require pricing data." — Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Youngstown, Ohio.

A. A shaving mug mania swept through town and country in the late 1800s, when mugs of china, glass, silver and other materials could be viewed at the local tonsorial parlor. The occupational types are noteworthy acquisitions.

Because shaving mugs are fast movers whenever dealers acquire them, they generally prepare for a "sellebration." Value guide: B. P. O. E., $35; Gibson Girl, $40; R. S. Prussia, florals, $90; occupational mugs; baggage master, $110; coal miner, $120; jockey, $150; photographer, $165; silverplated type, initialed, $35.

Appraise your antiques with Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide, "The ABC's of Victorian Antiques," Dodd, Mead and Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Crown Syndicate, Inc., No. 5 Crown Road, Weatherford, Tex. 76086. Please include a check or money order.

Please note: Prices may vary depending on condition and geographic location.

Dan D'Imperio welcomes your questions about antiques and collectibles and will answer as many as possible in this column. However, volume of mail precludes personal reply. Write to him in care of Independent, Press-Telegram or to P.O. Box 681, Weatherford, Tex. 76086.

Volunteers sought by meal program

The Long Beach Community Concert Orchestra will perform at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday in the Hawaiian Gardens Community Center, 12123 E. 219th St., following the serving of the MORE (Meals Outreach Referral and Education) Nutritional Meal for senior citizens.

The program, which is sponsored by Long Beach City College and the Long Beach Recreation Department, and the dinner are open to senior citizens over age 60. Fee ranges from 75 cents to $1, however, those unable to pay will not be turned away.

The MORE Nutritional Meal program is ordinarily geared to serving noonday meals to senior citizens at community centers. In addition, the program also uses volunteers to deliver meals to older Seal Beach residents confined to their homes.

Meals are picked up at the North Seal Beach Community Center, 3333 St. McCloud Ave., and after July 5 will be picked up from the First United Methodist Church at Central and 10th Avenues.

The MORE office, now seeking volunteers, reimburses volunteers at 15 cents per mile. Those interested may contact Social Service Coordinator Marylou Reed or Project Director Maureen Kusske.

Registration deadline nears for NOW confab

Women's legal rights and the history of American women are among the workshops that have been scheduled as part of the Long Beach chapter of the National Organization for Women's "Seminar in Contemporary Womes Issues" July 9 at the Unitarian Church, 5450 Atherton St.

The all-day program, which will begin at 8 a.m. with registration and coffee, will feature a luncheon address by Long Beach City Council member Renee Simon.

Other workshop topics will be self-defense, affirmative action and assertiveness training.

Registration fee, which includes lunch, is $10 before July 1. For those registering after July 1, the fee is $12.50.

Further information may be obtained from the Long Beach chapter of NOW, P.O. Box 15306, Long Beach, 90815.

No Dick Young letters in Seaver's fan mail

CINCINNATI—A writer walked past Tom Seaver's cubicle in the Cincinnati clubhouse.

"The answers are no, no, yes, and yes," said Tom Terrific. "Just fill in the questions."

Tom Seaver is surprisingly relaxed, considering the circumstances under which he left the New Yorc Mets on June 15 and the pressure placed upon him when he stepped into a Cincinnati uniform.

Despite the Dodgers' commanding lead in the National League West, Cincinnati fans were convinced Seaver was the answer to the blahs the Reds had been experiencing.

"One guy can't do it," said Seaver as though he were attempting to temper the expectations of fans in baseball-conscious Cincinnati. "I'm definitely going to help the ball club. Quite a bit, in fact.

"But I think it's wrong to assume we're going to overtake the Dodgers just because I'm here now."

Seaver lost a 3-2 decision to Tommy John and the Dodgers Friday night in his first Riverfront Stadium appearance in a Cincinnati uniform.

"If I can go out and hold the opposition to three runs a game, the numbers (victories) will be there at the end of he season. Consistency is what I can contribute."

"With this ball club, three runs isn't much. We'll win a major share of those games."

Seaver reached into a cardboard box filled with letters.

"I had 500 of 'em yesterday," said Seaver. "Most of them—about 90 per cent—are from people in New York. They're really pretty sweet letters and cards.

"The people are writing to say thanks for the things I did when I was with the Mets. I'm going to send autographed pictures to most of them."

Seaver sighed. "I have some great memories from my years in New York."

Someone asked whether any of the letters were from Dick Young, a columnist for the New York Daily News.

Seaver grinned, although it was strained. "No, but I understand he's getting letters himself, and some of them aren't very friendly."

Young had written on the morning of June 15, baseball's trading deadline, that Seaver's wife, Nancy, was jealous because their good friend, Nolan Ryan of the Angels, had a better contract than Tom Terrific.

Stories surfaced that this was the breaking point for Seaver and that he demanded to be traded "because they're dragging my wife into this."

Seaver said the story was inaccurate.

"Actually, it goes back a year and a half," he said of his celebrated feud with the Mets. "It was a combination of things. I'd rather not talk about it."

Then he proceeded to talk about it, albeit guardedly.

"The Young column on June 15 didn't convince me I should demand a trade," he said. "Other factors were involved."

Such as?

"I'd rather not discuss it."

But Young...well, that was something else.

"I haven't talked to him since spring training of 1976," said Seaver.

The implication was clear. Either Young had been manufacturing stories or he was being spoofed by the Mets management.

"He was getting his information straight from M. Donald Grant (president of the Mets)," said Seaver, measuring each word.

Seaver was asked what had triggered his war of words with Young, whose stock in trade is a smoking typewriter.

"I don't really know," he replied. "He's been on my case for a year and a half. To tell you the truth, I think the guy is sick."

A writer interjected that Young had been the recipient of a death threat on Friday.

"Damn," he said in mock anger. I told my wife not to call him."

Seaver led the laughter, but he quickly added: "Actually, I think something like that is terrible. They did it to Hubie Green in the U.S. Open, too. That's sick."

As sick as Dick Young?

There are times when discretion is the wisest course.

Tom Seaver, Ol' 41 in a new Cincinnati uniform, turned and headed for the ramp leading to the field.

Terrific.

Reds nip Dodgers, 7-6

'Not out of it' asserts Sparky

CINCINNATI — The post-game talk was mostly about the Cincinnati Reds' muscle, how they blasted three home runs — two of them by Johnny Bench — and four doubles.

But Saturday's 7-6 victory over the Dodgers was as much a result of their defense as anything else.

A Riverfront Stadium throng of 50,062, as well as a national television audience, marveled at three defensive plays by Joe Morgan, Dave Concepcion and Cesar Geronimo, which became all the more vital when the Dodgers followed with an assortment of hits.

The loss cut the Dodgers' lead over the Reds to 8½ games. But, more important, prevented them sweeping the four-game series.

"There's no way we could afford to be 12½ back," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson. "Being 8½ back is still tough, but we're not out of it."

Bench, who hammered his 15th and 16th homers off loser Don Sutton, figures the only way for the Reds to get rolling is by sweeping today's doubleheader.

"A split in the series is to the Dodgers' advantage," he said, wiping his hands across his soaked T-shirt, emblazoned with the words, "Big Red Machine."

"We've got to win, that's all there is to it. If we split the series all that means is they've wiped four games off the schedule."

The irony is that the Dodgers beat the Reds' best in Tom Seaver Friday night, while Cincinnati got even by decisioning the Dodgers' best, Sutton.

THE REDS did it with their gloves, too, three times thrwarting promising innings with big plays.

"No question, our defense won this one," said Anderson. "I still

Bonds packs burden, the entire Angel team

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

Bobby Bonds may be the next Angel on the disabled list.

He has been carrying 4,560 pounds — the combined weight of the Angel roster — on his back so long it must be getting sore.

The rightfielder, the lone bit of offensive consistency the Angels have possessed in the past 42 games, was a hero again Saturday afternoon.

He homered to lead off the fifth inning, his 15th of the year, and singled to drive in Dave Chalk with the tying run in the ninth as the Angels rallied for a 3-2 win over Texas.

"If Bobby hadn't been swinging the bat as well as he has we would really be in trouble," said manager Norm Sherry, whose team returned to .500 at 33-33 and pulled within four games of first place Chicago in the American League West.

During the last 42 games, Bonds has 52 hits in 152 at bats. He has driven in 32 runs and scored 34, making him responsible for 66 of the 181 runs the Angels have scored during that period.

"He has had game-winning hits, started rallies and continued rallies for us," said Sherry of the man who has 11 home runs, 13 doubles and six triples during his spree. "That is a lot of production for one person. He has done a hell of a job."

The big guns are still firing at Wimbledon

By Neil Amdur
New York Times Service

WIMBLEDON — The big guns are still firing in the men's quarterfinals at Wimbledon.

Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg, Ilie Nastase and Vitas Gerulaitis. But so is John McEnroe. Yes, John McEnroe.

In another historical first for this centennial tennis championship, the 18-year-old McEnroe slipped past Sandy Mayer of Wayne, N.J., 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, Saturday with as much obscurity as his earlier singles victories, buried on a backfield court but serving and volleying better than ever.

"I hope they keep me back here all the time," the Douglaston, N.Y., lefthander said of the cozy setting that contrasts with the stately atmosphere of center court.

It was the seventh victory of the tournament for McEnroe. To earn a spot in the 128-player men's draw, he had to win three matches in the official qualifying tournament. No player had reached the quarterfinals of the championship draw as a qualifier since that form of play began in 1925.

McEnroe's quarter-final round opponent will be 13th-seeded Phil Dent of Australia, who escaped with a scare from Tim Gullikson, the 25-year-old American, before winning, 6-3, 3-6, 9-8, 1-6, 9-7.

A fourth American, unseeded Billy Martin, joined the top-seeded Connors, the eighth-seeded Gerulaitis and McEnroe in the last eight by coming from 2-5 in the fifth set and beating Mark Cox, of Britain, the No. 14 seed, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 0-6, 9-7, in a frustrating 2-hour, 41-minute battle.

Rated second-class, U.S. trackmen lead

GELSENKIRCHEN, West Germany (AP) — Houston McTear, one of several U.S. starters running as unofficial entrants, took the 100-meter dash in 10.26 seconds, and the American men moved to a 49-46 lead Saturday over West Germany in a two-day track and field meet.

The American women trailed the Germans 52-42 after the first day of the meet.

The U.S. team, rated only second class in German press previews, took the lead in the last of nine events, despite not having many of its stars' results count toward its point totals.

Also competing unofficially was Kate Schmidt, who won the women's javelin with a toss of 204 feet, 7 inches and Joni Huntley of Long Beach State, who won thhe high jump 6-0⅞.

Edwin Moses, America's 400-meter hurdles champion, was scheduled to run outside competition but could not start because of an injury during warmup. U.S. coach Tom Telliz said: "We tried to get him back into shape but time was just too short."

Evelyn Ashford, an official entrant, anchored the U.S. women's 400-meter relay team which won in 39.34. Miss Ashford overtook Birgit Wilkes in the last few meters as the German girls clocked 39.60.

German gold medalist Annegret Richter ran this year's best 100 meters, despite a slow start, clocking 11.03, just two one-hundredths of a second over her own world record.

American Stan Vincent took the 400 meters in 46.60 with a powerful burst on the final meters of Gelsenkirchen's Park Stadium to edge out West German Lothar Krieg by a hundredth of a second. Krieg's time was 46.61.

The American team included nine national AAU champions. The German men were unable to match their performances. In nine previous track and field meets between American and German men, U.S. athletes won all events. The women met seven times with the American girls losing only once.

Hubert's 7-2 Mack winner over Harbor

Bill Bryant drove a two-run single in the top of the first to lead Hubert's Cafeteria to a 7-2 Connie Mack League victory over the Harbor Bruins, Saturday night.

Keith Johnson chipped in with three singles and scored three runs to propel the attack.

In the second game, the Long Beach Cardinals shaded Mary Star 2-1 behind Andy Bisnar. With two outs in the fourth, Jim Estes singled home the deciding runs.

Cervantes wins vacant crown

Shua blanks error-prone Atlantis

The Shua Rams obviously did a lot of things right during their 7-0 American Legion victory over Atlantis Realty Saturday at Blair Field. But more important to the game were the things that Atlantis did wrong.

Atlantis Realty committed a whopping 10 errors during the contest and at the plate were handcuffed by Shua's Frank Followell and Steve Nabry. Designated hitter Carlos Caldarella drove in two runs with a pair of hits for Shua.

Also at Blair Field, Brian Babcock and Dwayne Elder combined to shut out Alamitos Bay as Motor Patrol won a 9-0 decision.

At San Pedro, John Fox went 2-for-3, slugging a homer and driving in three runs to lead Peterson Post to a 4-2 victory over San Pedro.

In the day's other game, Tom Tereschuk and Mark Thompson blanked Carson on three hits and Bill Bryant contributed a two-run single in the fifth inning during a 4-0 triumph by Lakewood.

TENNIS—

The much awaited women's quarterfinal match between top-seeded Chris Evert and fifth-seeded Billie Jean King was assured Saturday, but not without some anxious moments for both players.

The 22-year-old Miss Evert, perhap still drained mentally after her victory over 14-year-old Tracy Austin Friday, trailed 2-5 in the opening set to Greer Stevens but the 20-year-old South African drove two backhands wide on set points, lost her serve, and Miss Evert was away and running 8-6, 6-4.

Billie Jean dropped a set to another young South African, Marise Kruger, before settling down and sweeping the last two sets. She won, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Miss Evert, who had lost only seven games in three previous rounds, found herself struggling in cold, threatening weather. In the early stages, Miss Stevens took a series of points by hitting in front of Miss Evert, who seemed uncomfortable at the net.

But Miss Evert finally showed the form that has made her the No. 1 female in the world, getting out of trouble by saving two set points at 1-5, taking the lead at 7-6 and taking the first set.

Miss Stevens immediately broke Miss Evert in the second set for a 2-0 lead, but the champion tied it with a break of her own. Miss Evert finished the 10th game with a backspin forehand that just cleared the net and dropped dead.

Ms. King, making her major tournament comeback at Wimbledon, recovered quickly after losing the first set to Miss Kruger. Back in winning form, Billie Jean lost only one game in the final two sets.

The most interesting fourth-round pairing had Connors against Stan Smith in a rematch from last year. The outcome was the same, with Connors on top, 7-9, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

But this was a different Smith from the tentative, sore-armed competitor who managed only eight games in three sets a year ago.

Stan was close enough to sense victory, his serve was strong and penetrating as ever, his volleys crisp and his anticipation at the net smothering the best that Connors could muster.

Smith was ahead by two sets to one and needed two points for 4-all in the fourth set. But Connors gave no ground and intensified the pressure on the lanky Californian with punishing service returns.

The returns were the difference in the match, as Connors broke in the opening game of the fifth set and again for 4-3 when he hammered consecutive forehand return winners down the line.

JIMMY will meet unseeded Byron Bertram of South Africa in the quarterfinals, a match he should win. His right thumb is still in an orthopedic splint and heavily taped, but he was swinging all-out and appeared headed for a spot in next Saturday's final.

The second seeded Borg, defending champion, cruised through his fourth-round match, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2, against Wojtek Fibak of Poland to set up another meeting with Nastase, whom he beat for the title here last year and later in the semifinals of the United States Open.

The 30-year-old Nastase has settled down and played consistently well since his tumultuous second-round match against Andrew Pattison. He handled an old nemesis, Tom Okker of the Netherlands, 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, on the center court Saturday and could be a factor in the final if he maintains his concentration and commitment.

The eighth-seeded Gerulaitis could be the sleeper of the tournament. His 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 triumph over ninth-seeded Dick Stockton confirmed his confident state of mind. Vitas lost to Stockton in the semifinals of the World Championship Tennis in Dallas last month, the victim of cramps. But in preparing for Wimbledon, the 22-year-old New Yorker said, he practiced with Borg, a player "who practices the way he plays in a match."

VITAS also became a trifle inspired, he said, after listening to a radio broadcast Friday night on the way back to his hotel that made him the only unanimous choice to lose in Saturday's round of 16.

MENS SINGLES

Mikles wins state golf

PEBBLE BEACH (AP) — Lee Mikles of Camarillo came from behind by winning three consecutive holes late in the match Saturday and beat Ted Lyford of Redlands 2 and 1 to win the 66th California Amateur Golf Championship.

The new champion, a 21-year-old college all-America at Arizona State, won despite playing his worst golf in the week-long event. He took four double bogeys, including one which left him 2 down with eight holes remaining in the match scheduled for 36 holes on the 6,815-yard Pebble Beach course.

Mikles, who plans to turn pro in September, was the runnerup to Southern California's Scott Simpson in the NCAA tournament earlier this month. Simpson was eliminated from the State Am in Friday's quarterfinals.

DeJesus retains lightweight title

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Esteban DeJesus of Puerto Rico landed a vicious left-hook to the jaw in the 11th round to knock out Vicente Mijares Saldivar of Mexico Saturday night and retain his World Boxing Council lightweight title.

DeJesus had built up a big advantage entering the last round.

In the 11th round, DeJesus pounded Saldivar almost at will, before landing the knock out punch. The challenger went down on his back for good and was counted out by as French referee Raymond Baldeyrou.

It was the third succesful title defense for DeJesus, who won the title on a lopsided decision over Intshimatsu Susuki in May 1976.

Before the fight, promoter Don King announced that the winner would meet Roberto Duran, of Panama, holder of the World Boxing Association title in September or October. It has been unoficially said that both fighters will receive $250,000.

DeJesus and Saldivar both weighed 135 pounds.

Race horse wears falsies—on ankles

OMAHA (AP) — Summertime Promise wears falsies to protect her while she runs.

The 5-year-old race horse wears size B foam-rubber brassiere cups on her hind ankles to prevent leg injury.

Normally, horses get such protection from a patch of sheepskin. But Summertime Promise "needs something with more cushion, because she pounds" so hard when running, said Kenny Danna, assistant trainer. "If there's nothing there, she'll scrape and bleed."

Trainer Jack Van Berg came up with the idea of taping the falsies to the horse's ankles and covering them with wrapping.

The mare, owned by Kenneth Opstein of South Sioux City, Neb., has won $69,382 this year and has a total bankroll of $338,875 in 3½ years of racing.

Fans unhappy with Vin's part-time status

If you don't like Scully, you don't like baseball

By Kris Sherman
Staff Writer

Tommy Lasorda may not realize it, but the Dodgers have been playing most of their road games minus one of their most popular and effective team members.

And the fact that the team is leading the National League West by a comfortable 8½ games is of little consolation to the legions of Vin Scully fans, who miss his voice on road game radio broadcasts as much as Lasorda might miss Steve Garvey's bat in the lineup.

The 49-year-old Scully, a veteran of 27 seasons as the Voice of the Los Angeles Dodgers, has limited his baseball duties to the broadcasting of home games and televised road games this year.

> "I didn't do it for the money or the network exposure. I made the change only for my family."

Between games, he will describe a variety of sports action on television for CBS, his part-time employer for two years

For Scully, the decision . tennis and golf for CBS "was agonizing."

"I didn't do it for the money or for the network exposure." Scully explained during an interview in the Dodger Stadium press box. "I made the change only for my family."

SCULLY and his wife, Sandra, have six children ranging in age from 17½ to 2½. Three are his from a previous marriage (his first wife died in 1972), two are his present wife's from a former marriage, and the 2½ year old is theirs.

"The older you get with children," he said with a touch of sadness, "the more you realize how you are destroying a very precious commodity when you kill time. I have missed a lot of my children's lives. I can still travel for two or three days, but I don't ever again want to be away from home for two weeks at a time.

"For instance," he said before the Dodgers-Cardinals game Tuesday, "the team leaves Thursday for four games in Cincinatti, four games in Atlanta and four more in San Francisco. They'll be gone for 13 days. Sure, I miss the road trips at times, the camaraderie that you feel on the road. But I don't miss the long absences from home.

"For the past several years, there's been a war going on inside me. I loved doing the games, but I hated the travel."

In contrast to the long road trips as a baseball announcer, Scully said his commitments with CBS usually consume only weekends.

"I can get on a plane on Saturday, do a football game on Sunday and be home Sunday evening," he explained. "You just can't do that in baseball."

SCULLY'S arrangement with the Dodgers allows him to broadcast the team's home games and anchor the telecasts of the road contests as long as they do not interfere with his CBS commitments.

One such conflict came this weekend, when Scully had to be in Chicago for the Western Open golf tournament.

But Scully, who said he would rather broadcast baseball than any other sport, flew into Cincinatti for Friday night's Dodger game against the Reds and Tom Seaver.

"I won't usually do something like that," Scully explained. "But it's only a two-hour flight to Cincinatti, and I want to see Seaver's debut as a Red at Riverfront Stadium."

Scully added that missing the road games makes his job more difficult, because he has more homework to do on the box scores and newspaper clippings from games he has missed.

"But Jerry (Doggett) and Ross (Porter) (the other two members of the Dodger broadcasting team) help fill the void, and after I've missed some road games, I can get them broken down in my head so it's almost as if I'd actually seen them."

VIN SCULLY
'Hi there, everybody'

While Scully is happy in his new arrangement as a part-time player on the Dodger team, there is evidence that he is missed by dedicated — and disappointed — fans.

"I don't come into contact with a lot of fans, and the mail has gotten so out of hand that it's answered in the office," Scully said, pausing to make a few notations in his scorebook. "But ocasionally I'll see a fan who will say, 'Gee, we missed you when the team was in Atlanta or Chicago or wherever.'"

BILL SHUMARD, a Dodger public relations spokesman, said while there has not been "a great deal of negative reaction (to Scully's part-time status) the fans have let us know they're disappointed."

Shumard added, though, that fan reaction to Ross Porter, who, along with Jerry Dogget, fills the gap when Scully is not at the mike, "has been very positive."

And Scully himself, who said Porter "is doing a fine job," believes the fans will accept the new face of the Dodger broadcasting team once they've become accustomed to the change.

Nevertheless, there is a lingering sense of loss among many Dodger fans, who miss Scully's familiar "Hi everybody! And a very pleasant good evening (morning or afternoon) to you wherever you may be," when the team is on the road.

In a fan survey once conducted to determine the most admired Dodger, Scully's name was at the top of the list.

The fact is, the terms "Baseball," "Dodgers" and "Vin Scully" are inexorably tied together in Southern California, and the marriage was no accident.

Scully, a ruddy-faced, red-haired Irishman who in 1950, at age 22, joined the Brooklyn Dodgers broadcasting team under the tutorship of Red Barber, has worked hard at the union.

"Baseball is such a great game," he explained with a hint of pride in his association with it. "It's a game that most people can relate to, because they've played it in one form or another, be it softball or stickball or whatever.

"I'VE TRIED as hard as I could to be as accurate as possible and to present pertinent information to the fans," he said. "I think it's a great tribute to the game that after all the games I have seen and broadcast, there still are games, there still are plays, that give me goosebumps. I would rather broadcast a good baseball game than anything else. . .

"I'm a salesman—a pretty good salesman—but what it all boils down to is the product you have to sell," he said. "I've been very fortunate to have had an extremely good product — both in baseball and in the Dodgers."

But Scully, probably as much as anyone or anything, has helped sell the Dodgers and baseball to Southern Californians. His campaign began when the team moved west in 1958, and evidence it has been successful can be viewed during any Dodger home game as Scully's voice booms out of thousands of transistor radios brought to the ballpark and tuned into the game by fans who are sitting right there, watching the action on the field.

It's a sight unparalleled in baseball.

"I guess the fans bringing their radios really began back when the Dodgers were playing in the Coliseum," Scully recalled. "The team was playing in what was actally a football stadium, people were so far away from the field it was often difficult to tell what was happening and, on top of that, the team was bad.

"So we began trying to sell the product, the game, the opposing players. And we tried to put some human elements in our broadcasts. I don't like numbers — I love words — and I would much rather tell one thumbnail sketch about a ballplayer, about his roots, rather than RBIs, batting averages and other statistics."

> "It is my team. It is my life. I'd like to see the team win. I'd like to see Walter and Kay O'Malley win another pennant...I feel like I'm part of the Dodger family. Walter O'Malley has always been a sort of father image to me, because I started so young."

THE RESULTANT anecdotes, which the announcer sprinkles throughout his broadcasts about as often as the Dodgers get on base, have become a Vin Scully trademark.

It is those anecdotes, combined with the picturesque phrases Scully turns more often than the team turns double plays and the restrained enthusiasm with which he describes the action, that has prompted more than one fan to call him the best broadcaster in baseball.

From Scully you are likely to hear how a pitcher got his start in baseball from a father who spent his lunch hour playing catch with his son; how a player got his nickname; that it's the birthday of a player, coach or umpire; how the Dodger stadium crowd hates relief pitcher Rawley Eastwick, formerly with the Reds and now with the Cardinals, "or almost any player from another team, just as the saying goes that 'the Indians hated the cowboys from another movie' "; how a ground ball is "backhanded by that vacuum cleaner" at third base or how a line drive is "speared" by an infielder, whether the player be for the Dodgers or the opposing team; and how a ball is "hammered" to right, "lifted" to left or "slapped" into center.

And he does it all with enthusiasm, giving equal credit to members of both teams for good plays, despite the fact that it's sometimes difficult because:

"It is my team. It is my life. I'd like to see the team win. I'd like to see Walter and Kay O'Malley win another pennant...I feel like I'm a part of the Dodger family. Walter O'Malley has always been a sort of father image to me, because I started to young. . .My association with the Dodgers has always been a family thing."

AT TIMES, Scully admits, the so-called cough button — that allows an announcer to say something that will not be heard over the air — comes in handy as a release.

"It doesn't happen often," he said, "but there are times, during an important game, when I might hit the button after a play and say to myself, 'Gee, I wish that had been a hit.' "

But no matter how hard Scully may try to hide his pleasure when a Dodger hitter knocks one over the fence, there's an unmistakable note of enthusiasm as he describes the play:

"And there's a high drive into deep right field, back goes Griffey, away back, to the wall, she's gone!."

And it is that enthusiasm, as much as anything else, that Dodger fans have come to love and, this season, dearly miss on those long road trips.

James Harris trade a slice of soap opera

As you know, the most soap-operaish incident to unfold in our town in quite some time was the trading of James Harris by the Los Angeles Rams to the San Diego Chargers.

Only the incumbent Super Bowl quarterback is immune from being supported by one faction and despised by another. Therefore, when Harris was unloaded by the Rams, the factions were heard from.

"What the hell are they doing?" demanded one.

"What the hell took them so long?" asked the other.

The significant thing is, however, that Harris was held in low regard by faction number three. This is ownership and management which in an ordinary area of society would be considered to be something like the third sex.

Professional football ownership is a consumed collection of creatures embarked on an incredible crusade. It is hardly likely there is a more confounding journey than the one from here to the Super Bowl and time spent on it does things to the character of men.

THE MOST DRAMATIC thing that happens to them is that they become impatient to a point of frenzy.

When the record of James Harris was examined in the throne room of the Rams, it was noted only that he had not delivered a Super Bowl. The reasons were neither here nor there.

JAMES HARRIS
Three factions

The Ram people are convinced Joe Namath is the answer. They know, or think they know, Harris will never get it done.

Therefore, it is the uncluttered view from here that Harris is better off in San Diego.

The Chargers are not pursuing a Super Bowl. They go forth each autumn in hopes of rising to mediocrity and this is a climate in which a quarterback can sometimes survive.

From a personality standpoint, it is also likely Harris will be more comfortable in San Diego. James is a man who guards his life from outside influences and this caused him some anguish with the press of Southern California.

HARRIS AND HIS sufferers often expressed dismay that the sporting authors did not present his side of the story. If this was partly true, however, the foremost reason was that James would not tell it.

An example of the defensive manner he adopted regarding his private life was the fact he continually refused to divulge how he came by the nickname of "Shack."

Harris will find the San Diego literary corps to be more lenient in their demands for information.

This has to do with the clientele served by the San Diego writers. The residents of the town do not become excited over such things and may get worked up only in the event somebody removed the Pacific Ocean.

San Diego is a remarkable study in athletic apathy. It is the graveyard of professional sports franchises and the next guy to move a team into San Diego will do so only in the interests of setting a new record.

AT ANY RATE, James Harris has to be in a happier position regardless of the manner in which events transpire. In fact, a romance could blossom inasmuch as the ownership of the Chargers rejoices.

"We now have a team," says Barron Hilton who speaks for 30 per cent of the Charger stock. "We have Johnny Rogers and Joe Washington and now a top quarterback. Look out."

See? This is how a proprietor sounds when he is happy about his quarterback. When owners are unhappy, they look around for a buyer.

This time, James Harris was sent to a peaceful place and he may one day appreciate San Diego.

No Apple Valley, mind you, but pro football will never know a Shangri La.

Planners say it won't cost the taxpayers

Will L.A. land '84 Olympics?

By Jack Stevenson
Associated Press

In this era when cities of the world fear billion dollar losses in staging Olympic Games, Los Angeles bids for the 1984 international sports spectacular with expectations of at least breaking even.

Reports from the latest sessions of the International Olympic Committee indicate this California city ranks as the favorite to be awarded the Games for the summer seven years hence.

First Los Angeles must gain the nod of the U.S. Oluympic group over the bids of other cities in this nation.

Then it must gain international approval next May at Athens, Greece.

Still, plans already are being made for the Los Angeles staging of an extavaganza which planners say won't cost the taxpayers.

Californians are somewhat leery of Olympics since the Winter Games at Squaw Valley in 1960 resulted in huge losses and the 1976 Summer Games at Montreal will be paid for by the citizenry of Canada for the next decade or more.

"We don't think it will cost anything," declares John C. Argue, who is president of the Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games.

He means the revenue from a Los Angeles event will more than offset the losses just as it did in 1932 when the Olympiad in Los Angeles wound up $1.5 in the black ink.

The main arena would be the same as in 1932—the Coliseum where such football teams as the Rams, UCLA and Southern California play their home games.

Most of the venues for the competition already are in existence and it's a matter of choosing which will be utilized for what.

Argue says there has been no decision yet solving the problem of an Olympic Village for the housing of the athletes, but adds:

"You can't build a village for two weeks, tear it down and throw it away. So, you use something you already have or build something that has lasting utility, and rent it a month for Olympic Games use.

"We have alternative plans, but the most probable thing that will happen is that a private investor will build an Olympic Village with some government money in terms of helping the financing. Then they will lease it to the Organizing Committee for the period of a month at a very handsome rental. At the end of the games, they will do their thing with their private development— moderate priced housing.

"We're not going to use the housing situations at Munich or Montreal as guides.

"They had problems with crowding and it doesn't appear they had the lasting utility that we want to see. They were built more for Olympic Villages than for permanent facilities.'

Argue estimated that capital expenses for Los Angeles would be $33.5 million although some other estimates have gone as high as $72 million. Operating expenses were pegged at $150 million.

"I say if Montreal took in $339 million, we sure as heck can take in $200 million to take care that kind of expenditure. And we'll take in more than that," Argue declared.

"Montreal estimates on what it would take in were pretty accurate. They estimated they would take in around $350 million and actually took in $359 million.

"THEIR operating expenses were about what they thought they would be, namely $150 million.

"So why the bad problem? Because of capital expenditures. They spent a billion 68 million. Of that they spent $800 million on their stadium. Take Los Angeles, you can scratch $800 million right way."

The planners figure to use the Coliseum, L.A. Sports Arena, Convention Center, UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, the Forum, the Rose Bowl, Griffith Park, Cal State Los Angeles, Rancho Cienega, Whittier Narrows, Elysian Park, the Long Beach Arena, Shrine Auditorium, and the Marina del Rey.

All are existing facilities and there are several alternates if some should not be available. Seating capacities will be greater than at Montreal.

He says to keep in mind the committee is talking of 1984, but there already are tentative plans to price tickets from $10 to $25 depending on the events."Figuring that, our revenues run to $74 million on tickets.

"Then there will be revenue from television, concessions, franchises and sponsorships,"the 45-year-old attorney points out.

Tracy draws critical raves

By Will Grimsley
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "Alice in Wonderland."

"Super Kid."

"Little Miss Marvel."

British journalists pulled out all literary stops Saturday in singing the praises of tennis's 14-year-old wonder child who became the youngest ever to play in the 100-year-old Wimbledon championships.

Attired in a too-big white dress with a blue bow tied in the back, wee Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, Calif., bowed, 6-1, 6-1 to defending champion Chris Evert on center court Friday.

The fragile-looking, 90-pound twig of a girl lost the match but won the centenary Wimbledon. It's been years since anyone created a greater sensation or a stronger ovation.

Everybody loved her, but none more than the purple phrase makers of the English press.

"Alice in Wonderland came to the centre court yesterday at centenary Wimbledon," wrote Peter Wilson of the Daily Mirror. "It was as though one of the original Tenniel illustrations to 'Alice' had stepped out of its frame."

Ian Branes of the Daily Express called her "Miss Marvel" and said: "She hits the ball—double-fisted on the backhand and ferociously on the forehand—like the champion she will surely be in the 1980s."

Laurie Pignon of the Daily Mail had his story headlined "Tomorrow's Girl Arrives," reporting: "Tracy Austin gave tennis a glimpse into tomorrow's world."

Tracy shared block-letter headlines with the announcement that the Duchess of Kent was expecting another child at age 44.

TRACY AUSTIN
Little Miss Marvel

"Ta-Ta, Tracy, But You'll Be Back!" said one 72-point streamer.

"A Shirley Temple in tennis shoes," added a caption.

Lance Tingas of the Daily Telegraph wrote: "The rigour of Miss Austin's game was awesome in view of the slight body from which it came. One can only assume that in the normal course of events she is likely to be a champion, because already she is phenomenal."

David Irvine of the Manchester Guardian said the crowd "left convinced that as surely as Wimbledon is 100 years old, they had seen a future women's champion."

And from the pen of the Times' Geoffrey Green, who referred to Chris Evert as "the spider who frightened little Miss Muffet away," came this comment:

"Unless one is widely wrong, this little Miss Muffett, with her coltish legs, her hair bunched and her teeth in braces has the future in her hands ... her time will come ... it may not be too far distant."

ANGELS—

But Bonds wasn't the only one to do a hell of a job Saturday. Pitchers Nolan Ryan, Paul Hartzell and Dave LaRoche did some fancy work, too.

Ryan went 7⅓ innings before giving way to a blister on the middle finger of his right hand. He allowed only three hits, walked just two and struck out 12, but was on the verge of being the loser — he gave up both Ranger runs — until the Angel rally.

"I was in the locker room when we got them (the runs)," said Ryan. "I got excited, but not because it got me off the hook, just because we won.

"I'm not looking for any personal statistics. I want to be healthy and be able to go out every four or five days and pitch for a winner."

Ryan made his feelings for the team evident in the eighth.

With the scored tied 1-1 and one out, he walked Mike Hargrove and gave up a single to Bump Wills, sending Hargrove to third. Out came Sherry to the mound. When the manager went back to the dugout, Ryan went with him and Hartzell came on to pitch.

Angel of Day

BOBBY BONDS, homered, singled, and drove in two runs in Angels 3-2 win.

"When he came to the mound I told him I had the blister and had better get out," said Ryan. "I could have stayed out there if I wanted to, but I couldn't throw my fastball properly and there is no reason getting beat because you can't do the things you are supposed to."

Ryan did do the things he was supposed to during the first seven innings. His control was better than it had been in any of his first 17 starts this year.

His only problem came in the third inning when Hargrove singled to open the inning, stole second and took advantage of two wild pitches to go to third and score.

Hartzell and LaRoche also did their job. Hartzell, after walking Jim Sundberg to load the bases, got Bert Campaneris to fly out to Bonds, Hargrove tagging up and scoring.

THEN IT was up to LaRoche. He struck out Claudell Washington to end the eighth and retired the Rangers in order in the ninth, leaving it to the Angel hitters to provide ninth-inning heroics.

Doc Ellis had checked the Angels on three hits, issuing just one walk, over the first eight innings. Other than Bonds, the Angels only managed to advance two runners past first base.

Nonetheless, Ryan decided to yank the righthander at the start of the ninth inning and brought in lefthander Darold Knowles to face the lefthand hitting Jerry Remy.

"I felt like the key to getting out of the inning was getting Remy out," said Ryan.

RYAN LOOKED smart when Remy flied out but after that, nothing went right for the Rangers in the ninth.

With the next five Angel hitters being righthanded, Ryan decided to replace Knowles with former Dodger Mike Marshall.

The 15,747 fans booed the unpopular reliever loudly, but they were nice to him compared to the Angel hitters.

Dave Chalk greeted him with a double down the leftfield line. Joe Rudi was hit by a pitch. Bonds singled to score Chalk and Rudi went to third and Bonds second when leftfielder Washington bobbled the ball. Mario Guerrero was given an intentional pass and Ron Jackson ended Marshall's nightmare with a single to right, scoring Rudi.

Marshall had faced five batters. He failed to get anyone out but he did get the loss, giving up three hits, a walk and hitting a batter.

"That was the first time I have seen him in person," a smiling Sherry said of Marshall. "I thought he did an excellent job."

Sherry also thought Bonds did an excellent job, even if the Angel rightfielder wanted to down play his effort.

"Bobby is just out there doing Bobby's share," said Bonds. "This is a team effort and I just want to contribute.

"If this club had to rely on Bobby Bonds to carry it, it would be in last place."

But Bonds is merely selling himself short. The Angels have relied on him to carry them the past six weeks, during which time they have put together a 24-18 record and reached fourth place.

ANGEL ANGLES: LaRoche said the key to the Angels winning was having reliever Dyar Miller warming up in the bullpen. "The team knew Dyar was up in the bullpen so it just got carried away a little early," said LaRoche. Miller has appeared in three games with the Angels and has a 3-0 record...The Angels start Gary Ross (2-4) and Ken Brett (6-5) in today's doubleheader while Texas counters with Nelson Briles (3-4) and Doyle Alexander (6-4)...Ryan's 12 strikeouts gave him 95 major league games with 10-or-more strikeouts, two games short of Sandy Koufax's major league record...The Angels have signed lefthand pitcher Jeff Conner, their third pick in the free agent draft. The 18-year-old Phoenix native will spend the summer in Idaho Falls.

How they scored

RANGER SECOND

Hargrove singled. Wills struck out. Hargrove stole second. Sunberg struck out. Hargrove went to third on a wild pitch and scored on another wild pitch. Campaneris struck out. One run, one hit, none left.

ANGEL FIFTH

RANGER EIGHTH

With one out, Hargrove walked. Wills singled, Hargrove going to third. Hartzell replaced Ryan. Sunberg walked. Campaneris flied out, scoring Hargrove. LaRoche replaced Hartzell. Washington struck out. One run, one hit, two left.

ANGEL NINTH

With one out, Marshall replaced Knowles. Chalk doubled. Rudi was hit by a pitch. Bonds singled, scoring Chalk. Rudi went to third and Bonds to second when Washington misplayed the single. Guerrero was walked intentionally. Jackson singled, scoring Rudi. Two runs, three hits, three left.

Fans salute The Bird

Detroit pitcher Mark Fidrych acknowleges his fans' cheers in curtain call after picking up his fifth victory Saturday, defeating Cleveland 6-4 and ending Indians' nine-game win streak.

The Bird wings it, but still bags 5th in a row

Combined News Services

DETROIT — Whoever heard of The Bird throwing 140 pitches in a game, giving up 11 hits and still winning?

Mark Fidrych did all that Saturday as he stopped Cleveland's nine-game winning streak, 6-4, before a Tiger Stadium turnout of 37,279.

Jason Thompson tripled in two runs in the eighth inning to give the Tigers their winning margin.

It was the fifth consecutive triumph for The Bird, who is 5-2 with six complete games in seven starts, since he came off the disabled list May 25.

But it wasn't easy for Fidrych who used just 81 and 86 pitches to dispose of his last two opponents.

"If somebody said, 'Hey, we got a party to go to,' I think I'd say, 'Forget it,'" said the 22-year-old, normally a party lover. "I'm a totally drained man.

Jeff Torborg, who suffered his first loss since succeeding Frank Robinson as Cleveland manager eight games ago, said his players worked hard. "Our guys were hitting line drives off him (Fidrych). We even hit his good low pitches."

Pat Dobson, who gave up a three-run homer to Rusty Staub in Detroit's first inning, settled down to pitch a strong game.

Singles by Ron LeFlore and Tito Fuentes preceded Staub's homer, his seventh of the year. It landed in the upper deck in right field.

Chisox 8, Twins 1

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — The White Sox blasted four Minnesota pitchers for 15 hits and climbed back into first place in the American League West, two percentage points ahead of the Twins.

Eric Soderholm, a former Twin, banged out three hits, including a solo home run, and lanky righthander Chris Knapp fired an eight-hitter to spark the White Sox.

Rod Carew had a single to keep his major league-leading batting average at .396.

AMERICAN

Orioles 5-3, Jays 2-1

BALTIMORE — After ending a six-game losing streak in the opener, Ken Singleton doubled home two runs in the fifth, leading the Orioles to a second game victory and a sweep of Saturday's twi-night doubleheader with the Toronto Blue Jays.

Rookie Dennis Martinez pitched a seven-hitter and Rick Dempsey drove in three runs with a bases loaded triple in the opener.

Yanks 5, Bosox 1

NEW YORK — Mike Torrez knew all about Boston's incredible slugging feats in the last 10 games.

"You think I can't read?" he quipped after a seven-hit pitching performance that put an end to Boston's record 10-game home run spree during which they socked 33 homers while setting eight major league home run marks and tying another.

Actually, Torrez didn't have to read the newspapers to find out about the Red Sox. He yielded three long balls, 13 hits and seven runs last weekend as the Sox pounded a record 16 homers during a three-game rout of the Yankees in Boston.

While Torrez was cooling off the Boston bats, Mickey Rivers and Graig Nettles homered for the Yankees off Luis Tiant.

Royals 6, A's 4

OAKLAND — Four home runs, including two-run blasts by rookie Joe Zdeb and Fred Patek, helped Kansas City Royals The loss was the ninth in the last 10 games and fourth in a row for Oakland.

Zdeb's homer, his first in the major leagues, came off reliever Bob Lacey, who replaced A's starter Mike Norris with one out and a runner on first in the seventh and snapped a 2-2 deadlock.

Mariners 8, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Ruppert Jones crashed a pair of home runs and Dan Meyer smacked a homer and knocked in four runs to lead the Mariners.

Courageous wins pair

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Courageous, with Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner at the helm, swept a pair of races Saturday against Enterprise and Independence, moving her record in America's Cup preliminaries for United States' 12-meter yachts to 7-1.

In the first race against Enterprise on Saturday, the 1974 Cup champion took a two-second lead at the start and stretched the margin to 41 seconds at the first mark.

On the final windward leg, Enterprise tore a jib shortly after rounding the starting buoy, enabling Courageous to widen the lead and round the weather mark 2:43 ahead.

The America's Cup Committee of the New York Yacht club placed Courageous 2:34 ahead of skipper Lowell North in the Enterprise at the finish of the 12½-mile triangular course.

Turner maneuvered Courageous to a seven-second lead at the start of the second race and gradually pulled away from her sister King's Point Syndicate yacht—Independence, skippered by Ted Hood.

At the finish, Courageous was 27 seconds ahead of Independence. Winds in both races were from the southwest at about 15 knots.

The America's Cup Committee paired Independence and Enterprise in Saturday's third race, which was won by Independence by 1:28. Independence got the jump by three seconds at the start and stretched the margin to one minute at the third mark, leading all the way.

Thus far, Turner has beat Independence three times in the preliminary trials. Turner won four of five against Enterprise. In her only win against Courageous, Enterprise crossed the finish line just seven seconds ahead of Turner.

At the end of Saturday's races, Enterprise had beaten Independence three out of five times, taking one of those wins on Tuesday by the widest margin of the trials — two minutes, 41 seconds.

On the first day of the trials a week ago, Enterprise and Independence traded wins, with Independence claiming the first race by just seven seconds and Enterprise the second by more a substantial 27 seconds.

Cubs making life grizzly for N.L. opponents

Combined News Services

They are called the Chicago Cubs and they are making life pretty grizzly for their opponents in the National League's Eastern Division.

They made the New York Mets their victims Saturday, clawing to a 5-4 victory, their fifth consecutive triumph.

Perhaps the most frustrating part of the defeat for the Mets was the method in which it was dealt them.

For eight innings Chicago had hardly managed a growl against New York pitchers Pat Zachry and Skip Lockwood and trailed 4-1. However, doubles by Larry Biittner and Bill Buckner keyed a four-run roar that propelled the Cubs to victory.

Catcher Steve Swisher led off the ninth inning with a single off Lockwood, who then bore down to retire pinch hitter Greg Gross. However, Ivan DeJesus smacked a ringing double to center and Biittner promptly chased home two runs by doubling off the glove of first baseman John Milner.

Buckner's subsequent fly to left center became another double and tied the score when outfielders Lee Mazzilli and Steve Henderson collided.

Bobby Murcer was issued an intentional walk and Jerry Morales also walked to fill the bases off reliever and loser Bob Apodaca (2-3). Manny Trillo then bounced to third baseman Doug Flynn, who stepped on third for one out but threw to first too late to complete the double play as pinch-runner Mick Kelleher scored the winning run.

Ray Burris (9-6) went the distance for Chicago to gain the victory.

Pirates 10, Expos 2

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates remained seven games behind Chicago with the help of some third-inning muscle flexing as they routed the Montreal Expos, 10-2.

Dave Parker, Al Oliver and Rennie Stennet each hit home runs during the six-run uprising which staked the Pirates to an 8-2 advantage.

Bruce Kison (5-3) endured a rocky start to pick up the victory. He yielded runs in the first and second innings but shut out Montreal thereafter.

Cards 3, Phils 2

ST. LOUIS — Ted Simmons socked a two-run homer in the seventh inning off Steve Carlton, lifting the Cardinals to a 3-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Simmons' blast, his ninth of the year, supported the eight-hit pitching of Bob Forsch (9-4) and Rawley Eastwick. Forsch surrendered a solo homer by the Phillies' Mike Schmidt, his 19th of the year, in the third inning.

NATIONAL

Carlton (9-4) had limited St. Louis to three hits and enjoyed a 2-1 advantage until Simmons followed Hector Cruz's infield hit with his shot to left.

Braves 9, Padres 5

ATLANTA — Vic Correll slammed a three-run homer and Andy Messersmith knocked in two runs with a double, powering the Atlanta Braves to a 9-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Messersmith (5-3) went seven innings and allowed five hits, including George Hendrick's solo homer in the seventh as the Braves won their third game in succession.

Atlanta wasted no time getting on the scoreboard, assaulting Padres starter Bob Shirley (6-8) for four first-inning runs.

Astros 4-1, Giants 3-4

HOUSTON — Charlie Williams and Gary Lavelle combined on a five-hitter to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros and a split of their doubleheader.

Ken Boswell's 10th-inning pinch single drove home Wilbur Howard with the winning run that gave the Astros a 4-3 win in the opener.

Williams (3-1) picked up his first career victory against Houston and helped the Giants snap a five game losing streak. Mark Lemongello (1-11) absorbed the loss.

Joe Niekro (1-1) pitched the final four innings in relief of James Rodney Richard for the victory in the first game while Randy Moffitt, the third Giant pitcher, was saddled with his fifth loss in seven decisions.

say our defense is the best around. It gets us out of a lot of trouble."

Morgan turned in the first one, taking a base hit away from Monday to lead off the sixth inning. It appeared impossible that he'd even get to the ball. But he did, and then made a complete turn and fired a strike to first. A base hit followed one out later.

"That might be the finest play I've ever seen by an infielder," bubbled Sparky.

In the eighth, Concepcion made a running catch of a looper by pinch hitter Boog Powell with a runner at first.

"There's no way he was gonna get to that ball," said Anderson, "but, somehow, he did."

The Dodgers followed it with two hits.

Finally, in the ninth, trailing by a run, Steve Garvey led off with a liner to straightaway center. Geronimo caught up with the ball at the fence.

"That ball was tagged," announced Sparky.

AGAIN, two hits followed — but no runs — and, thanks to the big plays, the Reds put away their ninth one-run victory.

Another play that went the Reds' way was a misfired attempt by the Dodgers to squeeze home a run in the fourth inning.

Dave Lopes had just tripled home a run and Bill Russell was the hitter. Lopes broke for the plate but was out cold. Bench had called for a pitch out and Russell had no chance to bunt the ball.

"Just a lucky guess," Bench said later of the pitch out, insisting he hadn't picked off a sign from the Dodger bench.

The Dodgers opened a 2-0 lead on bases-empty homers by Russell in the first inning and Dusty Baker in the second.

The Reds got one run back in the third with the help of an error by Sutton. Lopes' run-scoring triple in the fourth made it 3-1.

Bench then popped his first homer in the bottom of the fourth and then unloaded a two-run shot an inning later when Cincinnati scored three times.

DOUBLES by Geronimo and Ken Griffey in the sixth improved Cincinnati's lead to 6-3, chasing Sutton in the process.

But it was Dan Driessen's bases-empty homer in the seventh off Al Downing, making his first appearance in a month, that proved decisive.

The Dodgers scored twice in the seventh off Joe Henderson, just promoted from the International League, and one more in the eighth. But thanks to Concepcion's big play, that's all they got.

Dodger of the day

DUSTY BAKER homered and singled in 7-6 loss to Reds.

Bench said he's had only modest success over the years against Sutton despite hitting the two home runs Saturday.

"What really did it," he said, smiling, "was my mom's gravy. She came up (from Oklahoma City) for the series and made this gravy. She calls it 'Home Run Gravy.'

"Yeah, I think maybe I'll have some more tonight."

DODGER DOPE — Woody Fryman earned the win, ending a personal three-game losing streak . . . It marked the 13th time Bench has hit two or more homers in a game . . . Downing had not pitched since May 28 when he suffered a pulled groin muscle against the Reds in Dodger Stadium. He'll turn 36 on Monday . . . The loss was the Dodgers' first in four games in Riverfront. It was only their third loss in their last 11 games . . . Rick Rhoden (10-3) and Doug Rau (6-1) will start today's doubleheader against Cincinnati's Fred Norman (7-3) and Paul Moskau (0-0) . . . Channel 11 will televise both games beginning at 10:15 a.m.

How they scored

DODGER FIRST

With one out, Russell homered to left, his second. Smith singled. Cey walked. Garvey flied out and Smith was doubled off second. One run, two hits, one left.

DODGER SECOND

Baker homered to left, his 15th. Monday walked. Yeager singled. Sutton sacrificed. Lopes was walked intentionally, loading the bases. Russell grounded into a doubleplay. One run, two hits, two left.

RED THIRD

Fryman bunted for a single and took second on Sutton's throwing error. Rose doubled, scoring Fryman. Griffey flied out. Morgan popped out. Driessen walked. Foster popped out. One run (unearned), two hits, one error, two left.

DODGER FOURTH

Yeager singled. Sutton struck out. Lopes tripled, scoring Yeager. On an attempted squeeze play Lopes was out at the plate. Russell grounded out. One run, two hits.

RED FOURTH

RED FIFTH

With one out, Morgan walked. Driessen singled. Foster forced, Driessen, Morgan scoring. Bench homered to left, his 16th. Concepcion grounded out. Three runs, two hits.

RED SIXTH

Geronimo doubled. Summers batted for Fryman and struck out. Rose flied out. Griffey doubled, scoring Geronimo. Downing replaced Sutton. Morgan fouled out. One run, two hits, one left.

DODGER SEVENTH

With Henderson pitching, Russell walked. Smith flied out. Cey singled and when the ball got past Foster for an error, Russell scored and Cey took third. Garvey singled, scoring Cey. Baker and Monday struck out. Two runs (one earned), two hits, one error, one left.

RED SEVENTH

Driessen homered to right, his seventh. Foster grounded out. Bench lined out. Concepcion flied out. One run, one hit.

DODGER EIGHTH

Goodson batted for Yeager and singled. Oates ran for Goodson. Powell batted for Downing and flied out. Lopes struck out. Russell singled. Smith singled, scoring Oates. Borbon replaced Henderson. Cey flied out. One run, three hits, two left.

SCARSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Funeral services were held Saturday for golf promoter and executive Fred Corcoran, who died Thursday at the age of 72.

For LBSU lady golfers

Hawaii not exactly a paradise

By Elaine Risinger
Staff Writer

WOMEN IN SPORTS

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) golf tournament in Hawaii turned into one of those good-bad news situations for Long Beach State golfers Millie Stanley and Sue Bennett, who returned home last weekend.

Millie, who is playing her first year for LBSU, was elected by the golfers as the only student representative to the Women's Collegiate National Golf Board. In tournament play, the well-known Long Beach golfer shot 321 for 72 holes and finished 33rd among the 173 entries.

Sue, who was disappointed with her 341, was bothered by tendinitis during the entire competition, says coach Bunny Cripe. The Seal Beach golfer had to soak her wrist in ice before each round. The same tendinitis problem kept Sue out of the final league match this spring.

Weather also proved a factor for all golfers, reports Cripe. Winds ranged from 25 to 40 miles per hour and Sue played one round in a torrential downpour.

The LBSU junior has planned a busy summer of golfing. After completing Long Beach City Match Play—in which she won the title with a 1-up victory over young Marty Stewart on the 19th hole Friday—Bennett will compete in the Broadmoor Invitational in Colorado Springs, come back home for a brief rest then play in the U.S. Amateur in Cincinnati and the Trans National in North Carolina.

PAM SOKOLIK, catcher for the Cerritos College softball team, will attend Point Loma College in San Diego on a scholarship in the fall. The junior, who batted .364 for the season, was selected this spring to the SCCCIAC All-Star team.

Pam will compete in volleyball and softball for Point Loma and serve as assistant gymnastics coach. While a freshman at Long Beach City College, she was a member of the gymnastics team.

A top studennt (she graduated with honors from Cerritos), Sokolik plans a career in coaching with emphasis on gymnastics and softball.

JILL ORNSTEIN, who will be a senior at Marina High School in the fall, was chosen CIF Gymnast of the Year. The award was presented in ceremonies at Magic Mountain.

Now competing with Gymnastics USA, Jill won the all-around with a score of 69.95, the bar with 9.4 and the beam with 9.0 in the CIF meet. She earned a 9.05 in vaulting and 8.65 in floor exercise.

Jill, who has been in gymnastics eight years, will compete as an elite in club competition.

THE SUMMER recreational basketball league at Cerritos College is set. Ten high school teams from the Cerritos area and 10 community college entries will begin competition Aug. 1. Two-year schools entered include Long Beach City College, Golden West and Cypress.

Play will be on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, volleyball will take over the gym. The high school roster is filled, but there are still places open for teams from four-year and community colleges. Coach Nancy Kelly at Cerritos can provide additional information.

THIS IS the time of year for shifts in coaching personnel. USC has filled a vacancy left when Marci Cantrell resigned as head coach of the Trojan basketball team. Moving up will be Linda Sharp, who assisted Canntrell last year.

Sharp, who was girls' athletic director and basketball coach at Mater Dei High School before moving to USC, built an impressive record there, recording 63 wins and only seven losses by her cagers.

Dean Smith, J.D. discuss UCLA post

UCLA athletic director J.D. Morgan says he has talked to University of North Carolina coach Dean Smith about the head basketball coaching vacancy, but both declined comment on rumors that Smith would be offered the UCLA post.

Smith, who wound up his summer basketball camp at Chapel Hill, N.C., and left on an undisclosed weekend trip Friday, said:

"I have no comment because there is nothing to comment on."

Morgan said Smith was one of "eight or 10" coaches with whom he had discussed the UCLA position, and said it would probably be two or three weeks before a decision was made.

Volleyball event

Five teams will compete in the Buddy Montague Memorial volleyball tournament Sunday, July 3, at Eighth Place. Al & Kenny's Sporting Goods, Beach Bait & Tackle, Al's Pals, Cherry Ave. and Mo-Peds Unlimited comprise the entry.

605 preps set for grid drills

Squads representing the North and South will begin workouts Monday night for the 10th Kiwanis 605 all-star football game scheduled July 15 at Cerritos College.

The South, under the direction of Bellflower coach Clay Odell and Cerritos' Tom Wright, will work out nightly from 6:15 to 8 at Cerritos College. The North camp is located for the first time at Santa Fe High under the direction of Tak Kobayashi of Montebello and Jack Mahlstede of Santa Fe. Both teams will take off weekends and July 4th.

The North, which holds a 6-3 lead in the series, is loaded with nine all-CIF selections, the most ever for one squad. In comparison, the South has only three all-CIF players — Jeff Benjamin and Gary McCredie of Bellflower plus Rick Diffine of Mayfair.

ODELL, HOWEVER, is confident that his team, which covers the Suburban League, Cerritos, St. John Bosco and the six Long Beach high schools, will be more than representative.

"I think we'll be able to move the ball," says Odell, "and that's what everyone likes to see in an all-star game."

Odell's optimisim is based on the presence of outside receivers Andre Tyler (Poly), McCredie and two St. Anthony standouts, Cormac Carney and tight end Jim Donnelly. Tyler will attend Stanford this fall, Donnelly is bound for Colorado.

Phil Wilson of Cerritos and Don Hovarter of Bellflower are the quarterback candidates.

Odell says his offense will feature two flankers and two tight ends on every call, with only one set back, either Dale Oden of Wilson or Steve Johnson of Cerritos.

Odell has already been forced to make one roster change, Bob Kurz of LaMirada replacing Bill Threlkeld of Jordan on the offensive line. Threlkeld is still recovering from knee surgery.

KOBAYASHI says the North will use the Veer. He has three quarterbacks who each threw for more than 1,000 yards last fall — Billy Drulias from his own Montebello team, Dave Esquivel of Schhurr and Rich Gallegos of Santa Fe.

The North's all-CIF players are tight end James Forge and linebacker Clark Bruner of Pius X, tackle Mike Trapletti and defensive back Nike Lozica of St. Paul, guard/linebacker Ed St. Pierre of Downey, placekicker Ralph Petrosian and tackle Sal Cisneros of Montebello, linebacker Jeff Kiser of California and defensive back Allan Zettas of Whittier Christian.

Double bogeys spook pacesetters

Watson shares golf lead

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The Butler National course spooked pacesetters with double bogeys Saturday in a wild third round of inconsistencies that left Tom Watson, Wally Armstrong and Tom Weiskopf tied for the Western Open lead, each with two-under-par 214s.

Watson, the leading money earner of 1977 who has won the Masters and two other tournaments this year, rattled around for a 75. Water cost him two strokes to par on the 10th and 13th holes.

Meanwhile, Armstrong, who never has won a tour event, and Weiskopf rallied with 69 and 70, respectively, to draw abreast.

A dozen players were separated by only two strokes, setting up a frantic finale today for the $40,000 first prize.

One stroke from the leaders at 215 were Andy North, Gary McCord, Bill Kratzert, Johnny Miller and Dave Eichelberger.

At even par 216 were Phil Hancock, who was tied with Watson for the lead at 45 holes, then collapsed with double bogeys at the 10th and 18th for a 75; Mike McCullough with 74; J.C. Snead 72 and Rik Massengale 71.

North, who shared the 36-hole lead with Watson, blew to a 76. McCord had 75 with two double bogeys and Kratzert steered to regulation 72.

Miller made his move with a 69 and Eichelberger, who had the lead to himself on the back side before bogeying two of the last three holes, finished with 71.

Bunched at 217 were Bob Gilder, Mac McLendon and Curtis Strange. Tom Kite and John Lister were at 218 and six players, including Hale Irwin, were locked at 219.

Stringing out behind were U.S. Open champion Hubert Green and Arnold Palmer at 223 and defending champion Al Geiberger at 227.

Watson said he lost his concentration, making some bad swings and even misclubbing at times.

"But this is the type of course where a lot of players can shoot some high scores," he said.

North, Watson's close friend, had four bogeys and no birdies. He said: "I just played awful. The wind made it frustrating for me. I couldn't get my balance at times and couldn't take a normal pass at it. If you shoot 68 tomorrow you might run away with it."

Five-foot miss has Laura mad

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Mickey Wright fired a four-under-par 68 Saturday to share the lead with defending champion JoAnne Carner after the second round of the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Hoosier Classic.

Mrs. Carner of Lake Worth, Fla., shot a 70 on the 6,225-yard Plymouth Country Club course for a six-under-par 138 going into Sunday's final round.

"This is only Saturday," said Miss Wright, a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame. "You can't think about the other players at all now. I try not to even look at the leader boards and play one hole at a time."

The last time the two played together was in 1962, and Mrs. Carner admitted that she stayed up all night thinking about the match.

"I told myself over and over again 'Don't get in a driving contest,'" she said. "And after about three or four holes, there we were, pounding away."

One stroke behind the co-leaders is 1976 Player of the Year Judy Rankin, who shot a 68 Saturday after an opening round 71.

Mrs. Rankin, winner of last week's LPGA tournament at Noblesville, will be fighting Mrs. Carner for the No. 1 spot on the money list.

"I never have a problem getting pumped up for a tournament after winning the week before," Mrs. Rankin said. "I wouldn't be playing if I didn't feel like it."

Tied at two strokes off the pace were Pat Bradley, Debbie Austin, last week's LPGA winner Chako Higuchi and Laura Baugh, who missed a five foot putt on the 17th hole that would have given her a share of the lead. She missed again from only three inches away.

"It made me really mad, missing that putt," said Miss Baugh, who is still looking for her first career victory after nearly four years on the circuit. "It should help me tomorrow because I play better when I'm mad. And right now I'm pretty mad."

More bald eagle sites purchased

The National Wildlife Federation has announced an $837,000 land acquisition program to save two American bald eagle roosting sites from human intrusion and development. One of the sites is in California, the other in Illinois.

The California site is in Northern California's Siskiyou County, and was acquired by a citizens' conservation group. The site embraces 1,200 acres between Modoc and Shasta National Forests. Those privately owned tracts will be added to 4,800 acres of government-owned land to comprise a 6,000-acre sanctuary to be known as the Three Sisters Bald Eagle Preserve.

The preserve has many towering Ponderosa pines and is the major roosting site in the Lower Klamath Basin near the Oregon-California border. Wildlife biologists counted 498 bald eagles there last February. It was the largest known concentration of the national bird in the lower 48 states.

The Illinois site in Rock Island County is smaller. The NWF purchased 105 acres near East Moline and declared its intention to acquire 120 additional acres. The two parcels are on bluffs overlooking Lock and Dam 14 on the Mississippi River. The sanctuary will be known as the Oak Valley Eagle Refuge. It is known that 50 bald eagles roost there, but it is a feeding area for 1,000 eagles moving up and down the Mississippi flyway annually.

Both the California and Illinois sites were under threat of bulldozers when the NWF moved in to protect the eagles' habitat, said Raymond J. Nesbit, Sacramento, director of the NWF's Land Heritage Program.

THE BULLDOZERS ALREADY had moved into the Three Sisters Preserve, and many of the privately owned acres that were targeted for acquisition had been subdivided into 40-acre tracts. Nesbit had difficulty in finding all the 21 property owners because most of them had bought their land on unrecorded sales contracts.

Nesbit noted the NWF had to act fast to save the area in Illinois. Bulldozers had almost started their work and the property would have been lost forever to builders. Nesbit said, "Eagles are very intolerant of man and man-made developments."

Both preserves have a nearby supply of fish in water that doesn't freeze over; both are isolated from people and both have fair protection from wind. Also, there is adequate morning sunshine to dry their wings for flight. In California, the big trees are far enough apart to accommodate the birds' six-to-seven-foot wingspan.

NWF, one of the world's great conservation organizations, previously had acquired two sites for eagles—1,100 acres of Missouri River bottomland along the South Dakota-Nebraska border, and a 150-acre site along the Wisconsin River, near Sauk City, now known as the Ferry Bluff Eagle Sanctuary. The Missouri River sanctuary is known as the Karl Mundt National Wildlife Refuge.

Eagles are plentiful in Alaska, non-existent in Hawaii and have been declared endangered in several of the 43 U.S. mainland states where they still survive.

MANY WATERS that support trout through the late fall, winter and spring have turned too warm for rainbow survival, so anglers are starting to look at the lakes of the Southland in the hope of catching and taking home limits or partial limits of largemouth bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish.

San Vicente Lake, the West's top producer of lunker bass, will close at sunset Monday, July 4. A quick look at the records shows that the anglers there landed 68 largemouth bass, each of which weighed more than nine pounds. March and April were the top months with 47 of those lunkers recorded.

The San Diego City Lakes Recreation people reported that boating had been purposely curtailed in Lake Murray because of the discovery of hydrilla, a noxious aquatic plant. Departments of the State and San Diego County are working to prevent the spread of the plant to other lakes.

Otay, Hodges, Sutherland and El Capitan Lakes remain open on certain days of the week. If you wish information on any of those or wish to reserve boats, telephone (714) 236 5532. Bass fishing is best in Hodges, Otay and El Capitan, and anglers are using Rebels, Rapalas, plastic worms, nightcrawlers and crayfish.

All of those lakes have been good for channel catfish, with bonito or mackerel chunks the favored food. Red worms and meal worms are the best bets for the scrappy bluegill in the same lakes.

Poly advances to semifinals in Watts cage tournament

Poly High had four players score in double figures to defeat Corona del Mar, 57-42, Saturday at Cal State Los Angeles in a quarterfinal Watts Summer Games boy's basketball tournament game.

The Rabbits will face Carson High, a 57-54 upset winner over Verbum Dei, in a semifinal game today at noon at CSLA. In the other semifinal game, CIF 4-A champion Pasadena will battle Morningside (11 a.m.).

The semifinal winners will play for the championship tonight (5:30), also at CSLA. The losers meet to decide third-place at 3.

Poly, the CIF runner-up, was led by senior guard Steve Griffen (15 points) and junior center Ray Whiting (12). Senior Reggie Bell and junior James McDonald added 10 apiece for the Rabbits.

L.A City 3-A champion Carson used 12 points by center Paul Reed and 10 by forward Bob Davis to stop Verbum Dei. All-CIF center Leonel Marquetti scored 32 for the losers.

Taisez Vous 'guaranteed winner' at Hollypark

By George Main
Special to the I.P-T

When you hear that veteran trainer Bob Wheeler believes Taisez Vous may be the best filly he's ever had, it is understandable that this three-year-old filly is listed under the heading, "guaranteed winner," for today's $100,000 Hollywood Oaks at Hollywood Park.

Our man who compiles horses for the "guaranteed-winner" category had one word of caution. "Remember, this race is for fillies and they are the most unpredictable of all horses."

Taisez Vous is two for two at Hollypark and four for five lifetime. Each of her Hollypark victories has been accomplished with ease. She's a runner and probably a super runner considering Wheeler's comments. In other years, Wheeler conditioned the likes of Silver Spoon and Bug Brush.

In 1960, Silver Spoon carried 130 pound and won the $100,000 Santa Margarita Handicap at Santa Anita. Bug Brush won it the year before under 126. That same year, Bug Brush defeated the likes of Hillsdale and Terrang in the $100,000 San Antonio while running a mile and one-eighth in a record setting 1:46⅖.

If Taisez Vous is in that class, as Wheeler hints she is, this little doll is indeed "guaranteed." It's just a matter of running around the track. The others can fight it out for the lesser awards.

Also on today's program is Hollypark's "all-star" jockey race. This is at a mile and one-sixteenth and the jocks got their horses via a luck of the draw affair. Names of horses and jockeys were put on slips at the racing secretary's office and were selected one at a time. First a horse was drawn then a rider to match the horse.

Bill Shoemaker has been lucky in the past two drawings. He got a running horse both times and, consequently, is a two time winner of this race. Joining Shoemaker in the starting gate for today's race, which has a bonus of $7,500 to the winner are Steve Cauthen, Laffit Pincay, Angel Cordero, Ed Delahoussaye, Sandy Hawley, Fernando Toro (he also rides Taisez Vous), Darrell McHargue, Chris McCarron, Don Pierce, Fell and John Lively.

Jean Cruguet, who won the Triple Crown aboard Seattle Slew, was scheduled to ride in the race but had an engagement in the Queen's Plate at Woodbine in Toronto and could not make connections to arrive at Hollypark in time for today's race.

Turf highlights

WOODBINE — Sound Reason, ridden by Robin Platts, overtook favored Northernette in the stretch to win the 118th running of the $133,135 Queen's Plate ...Sound Reason trailed Plus de Rien and Northernette, then rallied at the head of the stretch for a half-length victory in the 1¼-mile test for 3-year-old Canadian-breds. Giboulee, ridden by Jean Cruguet, came from off the pace for third, and Plus de Rien faded to fifth...Sound Reason paid $5.10.

DUBLIN, Ireland — Jockey Lester Piggott and The Minstrel pulled off the double at the Curragh race track when the winner of the English Derby stormed through the stretch to win the Irish Sweeps Derby over 1½ miles...Second was Lucky Sovereign third Classic Example...The Minstrel was 11-10 favorite, Lucky Sovereign was 20-1 and Classic Example 14-1. The win was worth $123,755 to The Minstrel's owner, English soccer pools tycoon Robert Sangster.

ARLINGTON PARK — Century Type bested stablemate Testimonial Type by 2½ lengths as she captured the $39,275 Colfax-Maid Stakes for Illinois bred fillies...Century Type covered the six furlongs in 1:11⅗ to earn $26,535...She paid $4.60.

BELMONT PARK — Fleet Victress broke on top and led all the way to win the $55,550 New York Handicap and set a track record of 1:39⅗ for 1-1/16 miles over the Widener turf course...Ridden by Ruben Hernandez and carrying 115 pounds, the 5-year-old mare finished four lengths ahead of Lady Singer, who was a neck in front of Welch Pearl. The 1-2 favored three-horse entry of Glowing Tribute-Nijana-Javamine finished out of the money...Fleet Victress paid $11.80. The old record was 1:39⅘, set three weeks ago by Quick Card.

SATURDAY WASH— Mill House's Practitioner came from far off the pace to win the $44,350 Cortez Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday, but most of the 31,156 in attendance went home talking about J.O. Tobin.

The three-year-old Never Bend colt, champion juvenile in England last year, warmed up for his "second showdown" against Seattle Slew next week by winning the sixth race, a nine furlong turf affair, by three easy lengths in 1:47 flat. That clocking eclipsed the course record set by horse of the year Ack Ack in 1971 and prompted jockey Bill Shoemaker to say "that other horse (Seattle Slew) is gonna have to do some running to beat my horse next week in the $300,000 Swaps Stakes, Sunday, July 3."...Seattle Slew met and defeated J.O. Tobin in the Preakness in May, but Shoemaker, who's been in enough races to know, insisted that effort was not a true indicator of his colt' ability..."We were beaten five lengths by 'Slew in the Preakness, and believe me, we had a lot more trouble than that. I know the Swaps is on dirt, and today's race was on grass, but I honestly don't think the change in surface will make that much difference to him."

Two races later, Practitioner, under an expert ride by Sandy Hawley, outfinished, but didn't outgame favored Radiant Boy in the Cortez, contested at the mini-marathon distance of a mile and three-eighths on turf. The winning margin was a length and one-quarter, with Copper Mel coming home third, a half-length further back...Radiant Boy, according to jockey Fernando Toro, ran the final five furlongs on a bad wheel. "He started to lug out badly and I sensed something was wrong. But he tried hard all the way and to be beaten by that small a margin is a credit to his courage. He came back lame."...This was not to detract from Practitioner's performance. Unlike his sire, speedball Dr. Fager, the Laz Barrera-trained colt likes to lope during the early running and make one late charge and that's how Hawley, Hollypark's leading reinsman, rode the race..."Mr. Barrera," said Hawley, "told me this horse would relax early and would finish strong and that's exactly what happened."...Time for the distance was 2:16 flat, and Practitioner returned across the board mutuels of $21.20, $9.40 and $6.00. Radiant Boy paid $5.20 and $3.40, while Copper Mel returned $3.80 to show...Practitioner's victory was one of two wins by Hawley, and boosted his lead over Laffit Pincay in the jockey standings to 86-80. That margin figures to grow larger in the next five racing days, as Pincay will be on vacation due to suspension.

In Ninos Stakes at Alamitos

Lantys Easy Jet races to win

Lantys Easy Jet, the heavily-favored son of Easy Jet, posted his second successive triumph and third in five career races Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course when he drew away to capture the $15,000 Los Ninos Stakes for 2-year-old colts and geldings in impressive fashion.

Lantys Easy Jet had kicked off the stakes schedule for the month of June with a victory in the Jet Deck Stakes. He has now earned more than $28,000 during his brief career and he stamped himself as perhaps the leading contender for next month's $75,000-added Kindergarten Stakes with the sharp Los Ninos win.

Piloted by Kenny Hart, Lantys Easy Jet broke well in the 350-yard sprint but could not shake the swift Kingdom Key, winner of the $160,000 Bay Meadows Futurity last month. However, with about 100 yards to go, Lantys Easy Jet began to pull away and was a half length in front at the wire, racing the distance in 17.86 seconds.

The winner returned $3.20, $2.40 and $2.40 as the solid 3-5 public choice.

Kingdom Key returned $2.60 and $2.60 while Lanes Golden Eagle paid $3 to show.

He's a Pleasure defeated a talented field of six 3-year-olds in the supporting feature.

He's a Pleasure notched his first win of the year in the 350-yard allowance heat in 17.89 seconds.

Ridden by Robert Adair, He's a Pleasure returned $13.80, $5.80 and $3.40. The Candidate finished second, returning $4.20 and $2.80. Truly's Easter held on for the show and paid $3.

Harness dead-heat record set

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Richmond, a 5-2 second choice, and Committeeman, a 5-1 shot, established a harness racing world record for a dead heat Saturday night as they covered the mile distance in 1:56⅘ at Brandywine Raceway.

The new mark came in the featured $10,000 Forty-Five Pace and the time was the fastest for any track—mile, five-eighths or half mile—in North America.

Approaching the wire, Richmond appeared to have the race won, but Committeeman came on with a final burst to bring about the dead heat.

The previous dead heat record of 1:58 was set in 1974 by Just Tar and R.D's Beauty at Hollywood Park.

Calkins clamps news blackout on L.B. crime

By Molly Burrell
Staff Writer

Acting police chief Carl Calkins has ordered a partial blackout on public information about crime in Long Beach.

The ban applies to all news media. It bars access to police reports and, in most instances, to crime scenes.

Since its beginning in a May 20 directive, Calkins has reversed a long-standing policy of police cooperation with news media.

The policy enunciated five years ago by then Chief William J. Mooney called the "news media an asset to law enforcement" and said "the press should be helped in any way possible."

Calkins' administrative order specifies:

— No access to any police reports.

— Channeling all inquiries at a crime scene to a press information officer.

— Writing a memorandum to the commanding officer about any information given to the news media.

Calkins advised his officers that "certain information must be withheld in order to protect individuals' right to privacy, to avoid interference with investigative operations or because it is legally privileged."

A month later, a Calkins memo reaffirmed the May 20 directive but ordered that some reports be "made available for review by authorized media personnel."

The reports opened to the news media did not include those of homicides, discharge of firearms by police officers, dead bodies and suicides, arrest reports, follow-up reports and stolen vehicle reports.

Calkins has said the secrecy of reports on discharge of firearms by police officers need not alarm the public because he will not "let an officer go out and discharge his firearm or do anything reckless and abandoned and not take an immediate action on that officer." Calkins said he would at once make public any action he took in such a case.

Copies of authorized reports can be read but not duplicated by the news media, Calkins said in a June 15 memo. The reports will be shredded after 48 hours, according to an order from the commanding officer of the records division.

The May 20 directive quotes a state law authorizing members of the press access to areas closed to the general public due to riot, fire, flood, earthquake or other disaster, but Calkins' directive adds: "This does not entitle the press access to areas closed off for criminal investigation."

News media representatives conceivably could be barred from almost any area where news is breaking, whether or not a crime has been committed. That is because there must be an investigation to determine if a crime has been committed and this would qualify as a criminal investigation.

A further order reads: "Media requiring more detailed information on a crime or incident will contact the assigned investigator." If the investigator has finished his shift or is for any reason unavailable, there is no "detailed information" available.

In a telephone interview, Calkins said his policy "is as broad as broad can be, and it makes the officers responsible to give information when they have information."

In a memorandum prepared for Calkins' immediate predecessor, Ralph G. Kortz, the city attorney's office declared that on a case-by-case basis "the public's right to know must be weighed against the reasons for nondisclosure."

"That's what you need to do," Calkins told an I. P-T reporter.

Ford swings — Ouch!

Former President Gerald Ford watches in alarm as his tee shot sails into the crowd at the Vince Lombardi Memorial Golf Tournament Saturday in Milwaukee. At right, Ford leans over Gene Bartelt, 56, who was hit on the head by the ball, requiring six stitches. "I'm very sorry," Ford told him. Bartelt didn't reply at the time but later said, "And I voted for him!"

'Idi Amin wounded,' says man who tried to kill him

LONDON (AP) — A man claiming he took part in a bazooka-and-machinegun attempt on Idi Amin's life says the Ugandan president was wounded and carried away by bodyguards, the Observer newspaper reported today.

The newspaper said the man, who was reported to have reached the Kenyan capital of Nairobi with fellow plotters, asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals against relatives in Uganda.

The Observer quoted him as saying he and nine other heavily armed men ambushed Amin on June 18 as the dictator traveled by car from the Ugandan lakeside town of Entebbe to Kampala, the capital.

The man told Observer reporter David Martin that the ambush team fired a bazooka shell, killing two men in the front of Amin's car. The man was quoted as saying Amin returned fire with a pistol, but was hit by machinegun bullets as he leaped from the car and fell bleeding to the ground, clutching his stomach.

Amin's bodyguards shot dead the machinegun operator and the rest of the attackers fled, the man was quoted as saying.

The Observer article, which came as the London Sunday Times reported the possible defection of a second Ugandan government minister, is the latest account of an armed bid to end Amin's six-year rule.

Other reports reaching Kenya indicated Amin had gone into hiding after an abortive assassination attempt on the Entebbe road, but Amin told an American reporter last week that he had been honeymooning with his wife of two years, Sarah.

Government-controlled Radio Uganda Saturday quoted Amin as denying an attempt was made to assassinate him. But it said Amin indicated arms smuggled from neighboring Kenya and Tanzania had been captured and that exiles had attempted to enter Uganda to "bring chaos."

The newspaper quoted the alleged plotter as saying he did not know how badly Amin was wounded.

The paper quoted the man as saying he was told Amin was either treated at a house on the shore of Lake Victoria or flown to Libya for treatment.

The Sunday Times reported that Justice Minister Godfrey Lule, who had been sent by Amin to argue Uganda's case before the U.S. Human Rights Commission in Geneva, may have defected to Britain.

The paper said the 42-year-old Lule and his family were in Britain and "it is understood that he has asked the Home Office for permission to stay."

New harbor oil refinery planned

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

Plans have been quietly continuing for a major oil tank farm in Los Angeles Harbor that would have a storage capacity of 3½-million barrels — almost as much as the proposed Standard Oil of Ohio terminal in Long Beach Harbor.

Although Western Fuel Oil Co. reached agreement last October with Los Angeles Harbor on an option to lease 55 acres on Terminal Island for the $18-million facility, representatives of the State Coastal Commission and Air Resources Board say they are unaware of the project.

And the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, which is supposed to be using the oil, says it has no contract for the petroleum.

THE Los Angeles Harbor tank farm and a refinery to handle 100,000 barrels per day have been proposed by Western, a subsidiary of Coastal States Gas Corp. of Houston.

Last Oct. 27, Western reached an agreement with the Port of Los Angeles on a lease option for 55 acres on the former Reeves Navy Field on Terminal Island for the facility. Since then it has been negotiating for an additional 20 acres, according to a spokesman for Coastal States Gas.

Calvin Hurst, environmental scientist with the Los Angeles Harbor Department, said the proposal is still active, and he is awaiting word from Western on how it wants to proceed with an environmental review of the proposal.

Spokesmen for the State Air Resources Board and the Southern California Air Quality Management District say they are unaware of the Western proposal, even though air quality would be a major consideration in any review of the project.

AND Michael Dadasovich, port coordinator for the State Coastal Commission, said he has not been approached about the proposal.

Even the Los Angeles DWP, which supposedly will be supplied the oil desulfurized in the refinery, hasn't heard much about the project.

"We don't have any contract for the oil," said Elizabeth Wimmer, a DWP spokeswoman. She said Western, which has a contract with the utility for 500,000 barrels per month through September 1978, has talked to DWP about the project but there are no agreements for the oil.

However, an Oct. 22, 1976, memo from Los Angeles Port General Manager Fred Crawford to harbor commissioners states, "I am advised that there are tentative agreements between the Company and the city of Los Angeles, Department of Water & Power for the utilization for this desulfurized fuel."

Wellington Osterloh, a spokesman for Coastal States, confirmed that the project was still "on", but that the company is negotiating for another 20 acres. He spoke only in general terms about the project and when asked where the crude oil would come from, only would answer "from anywhere."

HE SAID the project might not be completed for five years. He referred most questions to the agreement signed last October with the port.

Osterloh also said the project had no connection with any other petroleum project in harbor area.

Educator recalls violent Oakland days

The stormy, Nov. 6, 1973, Oakland School District board meeting had just concluded with threats of violence against school administrators who had proposed safety measures to protect teachers. Richard Arthur, principal of Castlemont High School, was talking to District Superintendent Marcus A. Foster. Arthur, now an adult coordinator for the ABC Unified School District, offered to give Foster a ride home. Foster declined.

Twenty minutes later, as he was driving home, Arthur listened in shock on the radio to the details of the parking lot shooting of Foster. The murder of Foster, a respected black educator from Philadelphia, was traced to Symbionese Liberation Army members Russell Little and Joseph Remiro, who were convicted of the murder and sentenced to life terms in prison.

Arthur has witnessed violence, as a teacher for 22 years in the Los Angeles City School system and as principal for four years in Oakland.

At Castlemont, Arthur had replaced a black woman who had been murdered, and he had major challenges of satisfying the demands of black students in a violent area of the city. Now, with the murders and riots only a memory, he has embarked on a more relaxing assignment with the ABC District.

Arthur, who lives in Norwalk with his wife and three children, is coordinator of a new class, "Contemporary Problems and Issues in Education" for Pacific Christian College.

He was interviewed by Independent, Press-Telegram reporter Tim Burt.

Q. How did you manage to wind up at Oakland?

A. I'm not really sure. The new superintendent, Marcus Foster, had heard about me — I don't know how — except that I was doing a lot of work with the Los Angeles city schools conducting workshops for teachers, principals and parents in the district.

FIVE UP PLAYER volleyed for the lead down the backstretch, took a clear advantage into the stretch then battled MIAMI SUN to briefly lose the edge but kept to his task and came back to win pulling away. MIAMI SUN shared the lead to the turn, dropped back of the winner to the stretch, rallied from the outside under urging to get the edge leaving the furlong pole then slackened when the rider lost his whip. The rider on MIAMI SUN claimed foul against the winner for causing him to drop his whip however the stewards ruled that both jockeys were using their whips which were somewhat tangled without intent and thus the claim was not allowed. KING AL saved ground and hung.

Cauthen wins a pair, goes over $3 million

NEW YORK (AP) — Jockey Steve Cauthen, 17, who went back to work Thursday after recovering from a broken wrist, scored two wins Saturday at Belmont Park and boosted his mounts' earnings for the year to more than $3 million.

The two winning purses—together with earnings refigured after being placed first in a disqualification earlier this year— gave Cauthen's horses $3,027,153.

He has ridden five winners since returning to work and gave him 281 for the year, still tops in the nation.

Cauthen left immediately after the Belmont program for Hollywood Park where he will ride in the jockey's championship race today.

Tons of A-fuel 'missing' at U.S. nuclear projects

Thefts of bomb-grade uranium possible; 'sloppy books' blamed

By John Fialka
Washington Star

Regulatory Commission is preparing to make the momentous announcement, according to several sources within the agency, that over the years the government has been unable to account for several tons of bomb-grade materials used in various nuclear fuel programs.

The problem, hinted at for years, will be described for the first time in specific numbers. Those numbers, according to the sources, will show that the great majority of the losses are traceable to "chronically sloppy" accounting procedures at facilities used to fabricate fuel for Adm. Hyman Rickover's nuclear submarine fleet.

The traditional explanation for what is known in this rather exotic trade as a "Muf," or material unaccounted for, is that it is material stuck somewhere in the pipes of a facility or material that has been mistakenly discarded as waste.

Research within the NRC, however, according to the sources, has shown that the agency cannot rule out the possibility that some of the material may have been stolen. "The accounting was so damn poor that there is no way for determining what happened to it," one source explained.

Highly enriched uranium, the material used to power submarine reactors, is an extremely dense metal. A cubic foot of it weighs more than half a ton. A strategic quantity, the amount that could be made into a small atomic bomb, would fit into a container slightly larger than a teacup.

FUEL FABRICATION for the submarine reactors takes place at several sites throughout the country, but the one most familiar to NRC inspectors is probably a facility at Apollo, Pa., 30 miles northeast of Pittsburgh, where Mufs have gone on for years, where millions of dollars worth of bomb-grade metal has disappeared and where repeated violations of government regulations have produced little more than an occasional slap on the wrist for the plant's operators.

The full story of what has happened at Apollo is still shrouded in government secrecy. According to two NRC sources, the losses at Apollo and other submarine fuel facilities are so embarrassing that Adm. Rickover has been looking for ways to prevent the release of Muf numbers.

Asked for a comment, a Rickover spokesman said that this is not true. The responsibility to safeguard nuclear fuels in the fabrication stage has "never been the responsibility of the admiral," he added, pointing out that the jurisdiction traditionally has fallen to inspectors of the former Atomic Energy Commission and its regulatory successor, the NRC.

In recent weeks several documents have been released quietly by the NRC which begin to unravel the mysteries of Apollo.

In late 1956 a company called NMEC was formed by three former AEC scientists led by Dr. Zalman M. Shapiro. They purchased an old steel fabrication plant at Apollo and began to solicit government contracts to process various nuclear materials.

AEC OFFICIALS first began to worry about losses in the plant during the early '60s, when NMEC was processing a large quantity of highly enriched uranium for use in a nuclear rocket called Nerva, a project later scrapped by the AEC.

Since there was no formal regulatory apparatus at that time, the government officials wondered how to account for the mounting losses which had grown to the point that in 1964, when the Chinese detonated a nuclear device, some intelligence officials wondered whether the material had been stolen from Apollo.

Later, when U2 flights discovered uranium enrichment sites in China, their attention eased somewhat, but a year after that, the problem resurfaced when AEC inspectors, according to a NMEC case history released by the NRC, calculated that the loss of 206 pounds of the material — roughly enough to make 20 atomic bombs — could not be accounted for through any known "loss mechanism" at the plant.

One day after the survey at the plant was completed, according to this document, NMEC officials hired one of the principal AEC inspectors. The incident was reported to the Department of Justice as a possible conflict of interest, but Justice determined that "the matter did not warrant prosecutive action."

A BROAD SECRET investigation was mounted. Over 400 past and present NMEC employes were interviewed and a considerable portion of a waste burial ground at the plant was dug up in an effort which located some of the missing material. In the end, though, NMEC officials had to pay the government $929,000, the value of uranium which could not be accounted for, according to the case history.

Shapiro, then NMEC's president, was described by one source as a man who "operated on the come," taking material from one batch and using it to account for losses in a prior batch until the losses became too big to cover up any more.

Reached for comment by the Washington Star, Shapiro termed the description "utterly ridiculous and totally untrue." Losses, he said, are inherent in the fuel fabrication business because of the highly complex process which uses uranium in solid, gaseous and liquid chemical forms and which results in a large amount of waste material at each step.

He gave an analogy: "If you're cooking a small thing in a large pot, then you have material that sticks to the pot."

Shapiro, who now works for Westinghouse, also explained the hiring of the AEC inspector. "We were looking high and low for good people. Obviously some of those people worked for the AEC."

SHAPIRO SOLD the Apollo plant in 1967 to the Atlantic Richfield Co., and Arco sold the plant to another nuclear-related company, Babcock & Wilcox, in 1971. Throughout the various periods of ownership, according to the case history, the plant's tradition of noncompliance to AEC accounting procedures continued.

In April 1973, for example, the plant was cited for 14 different items of noncompliance in one inspection. In November of the same year a worried General Accounting Office team found 18 different security weaknesses at the plant, including guards that did not control properly and three doors that were not locked.

The following year Babcok & Wilcox was fined $12,170 for the security violations. In 1976 the company was fined another $19,000 for inadequate accounting.

An NRC spokesman noted that inspections at the plant have escalateed dramatically as the nation has become more aware of the possibility of a nuclear theft. There were 10 inspections in 1972 at the plant. So far this year, he said, there already have been 36 inspections.

Regulations have proliferated during the same period. Despite the increased pressures from the government to safeguard the plant, the NRC spokesman described Babcock & Wilcox as a "poor performer."

Asked to comment, a B&W spokesman in the company's New York headquarters said that "basically our accountability has been in accordance with regulations." The fines, he explained, "were related to technical details. The industry was not given time to implement the new requirement."

The mysteries that still surround the Apollo facility appear to go beyond the powers of the NRC, which was formed to take over the AEC's regulatory duties in 1975. NRC researchers discovered this last year when they were attempting to piece together a definitive account of events at the plant during the early 1960s.

VITAL PIECES of the story, they discovered, were still classified although they were 10 years old. They were in the locked files of the Energy Research and Development Administration, the nonregulatory half of the old AEC, and "other government agencies."

Despite the fact that the NRC investigators had the proper security clearances, they were "given the royal runaround," according to one source. There were secrets so secret that even the compilers of secrets were forbidden them.

The situation proved so exasperating that one of the NRC investigators, James H. Conrad, began a series of protests within the NRC. How could the NRC staff protect facilities against losses when some of the past information about losses was concealed from the staff, he argued.

A group of safeguards experts was assembled by the NRC to look into the matter. It was called "Task Force on Allegations by James H. Conrad."

'Go slow' on B1, Byrd tells Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday the United States ought to "go very slow" in developing the B1 bomber because expanding production would mean foregoing "many unmet public needs."

Byrd said he conveyed his sentiments to President Carter in a letter Friday. Carter is expected to announce his decision on whether to expand or scrap the B1 program by Thursday.

Advocates of the bomber says it can evade detection devices by flying at extremely low altitudes and that the plane is needed to replace the aging B52 fleet.

"BY GOING all out on the B1, we would drastically reduce our ability to develop and fund other weapons systems. Additionally, we would add to our budget deficit and reduce the potential for meaningful tax reduction," Byrd told reporters.

"I'm not opposed to keeping the way open for refinement in the technology in this field."

The senator said he supports funding the purchase of five of the aircraft as has been provided for in the budget now being considered in Congress.

He discounted the value of the B1 as a bargaining chip with the Soviet Union in talks on the reduction of strategic weapons.

"I don't think the Soviets fear it very much," he said. "The cruise missile is their great fear."

"I'm a strong supporter of the cruise missile," he added.

Byrd said the Russians are known to be working on a "look down" radar system that would make the B1 obsolete because of its ability to detect low-flying aircraft.

"I think we ought to go very slow and not commit ourselves to a drastic commitment of public funds until we know what the Soviet capability . . . may be."

The cruise missile is a low-flying, targeted weapon.

The senator said he has no indication of what Carter's decision will be, saying, "I've heard he's moving both ways."

DURING last fall's presidential campaign, Carter was thought to be leaning toward abandoning the B1 development program. Gerald Ford favored it when he was in the White House.

Byrd said the B1 issue is "a question of the best allocation of our limited resources. At a cost of over $100 million per plane, we would be investing vast amounts of public funds in a gamble that the B1 would be effective and invulnerable during its life cycle of 20 to 30 years."

The entire program would cost about $100 billion. "That's $100 per minute for every minute since Jesus Christ was born," he said.

Chef bares 22 bizarre months in Groucho's home

Combined News Services

A chef who worked for Groucho Marx has told of 22 bizarre months in the comedian's household, where the dinner table was "an explosive battlefield," and the aged comedian's companion dreamed of inheriting all his money.

John Edward Ballow's memories were contained in a 368-page, three-volume sworn deposition filed in connection with Erin Fleming's bid for conservatorship of the frail 86-year-old comedian.

A Santa Monica Superior Court trial is scheduled July 15 to decide whether Miss Fleming, Marx's long-time companion, secretary and manager, should be named permanent conservator.

The comedian's son, Arthur, has won the first round of court battles by having the 37-year-old woman removed last month as conservator, after witnesses contended she had abused Marx. Two private detectives stated barbituate-containing hypodermic syringes were concealed outside Marx's Beverly Hills home.

"She wanted to be conservator and she wanted to inherit as much as she could," the 27-year-old chef alleged in the documents made public Friday.

Meanwhile, Marx returned to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center Friday, where spokesman Larry Baum said he was suffering from pneumonitis, "a kind of benign pneumonia." He had been released from the hospital earlier in the week after undergoing hip surgery.

And on Friday, his long-time friend Nat Perrin, 72, asked Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie to be relieved of his responsibilities as Marx's temporary conservator because "it's been far too much of a strain for myself and my wife." Perrin described Marx as "quite sick, quite feeble."

Marx' condition remained unchanged Saturday, a hospital spokesman said.

In the deposition, Ballow alleged that Miss Fleming convinced Marx to tear up all of his pictures of his daughter, Melinda. "And at lunch that day, he said, 'I don't have any children,'" Ballow recalled.

Frequently, Ballow said Miss Fleming railed against Marx's son, Arthur. The chef said she told Marx: "You don't love him, Groucho. I'm here. Don't worry about Arthur. Arthur doesn't deserve anything from you."

He said he saw Miss Fleming gag Marx by forcing a linen napkin into his mouth until he turned blue. On other occasion, he said she shoved a plate of food in Marx's face.

Miss Fleming was not available for comment but has maintained that she has done nothing that was not in Marx's best interest and theirs was a close, loving relationship.

"There were tons of incidents at that dinner table," he said. "It was like an explosive battlefield."

"She would drive him to the point that he was incapable of even sitting in his chair," Ballow said. "He was just a mass of nerves (from) the screaming alone."

He said Miss Fleming had frequently ordered a nurse to administer drugs to Marx even though doctors had advised that they could kill him.

"If she got him upset ... she would always come up as a way of, I felt, a way of soothing her own conscience, smack him full of those things (drugs) and that would calm him down," Ballow said.

Ballow said a doctor had told him "Mr. Marx could die any second. He's on a very thin line. He's not a strong man. He's had many strokes."

For a time, he said Miss Fleming was intent on having Marx adopt her. Ballow said a woman psychiatrist intervewed Groucho twice about the matter.

Another of Miss Fleming's plans, he said, was to sell Marx's house, and move him, perhaps, to a penthouse somewhere.

"I said, 'That sounds like a real drag. Do you realize that might be depressing? This is his castle; this is what he worked his entire life for.'

"And she said, 'To hell with the castle. He'll do what I tell him to do.'"

At one point in the deposition, one of the attorneys hinted Ballow might be exaggerating the situation. The chef replied: "I can't paint any picture uglier than really occurred in that home."

He indicated he had received phone calls urging him not to testify, and he said, "I am very afraid of Erin Fleming and always have been."

Ballow insisted that his motivation for telling all was to right some of the "many injustices" that he witnessed in the Marx household.

Police gas black funeral

Combined News Services

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police used tear gas to disperse an estimated 20,000 Soweto blacks massed for the burial Saturday of a 17-year-old youth whose death was blamed by some blacks on a police beating. Police said there were a few stoning incidents but no one was reported injured or arrested. Witnesses said the mood at the funeral for Philemon Tloana was one of volatile anger, but for most of the day police kept their distance.

Lutherans veto bias

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — The Lutheran World Federation, representing 58 million members worldwide, has overwhelmingly adopted a resolution saying its churches in southern Africa must reject racial segregation as a matter of faith. The assembly called the apartheid system contrary to Lutheran teachings and said churches must publicly oppose it regardless of possible dangers to them or their members.

China aids Egypt

CAIRO — The Egyptian government, which Friday declared that it had made "no progress" toward improved relations with the Soviet Union, Saturday pointedly announced that it has received a shipment of military spare parts from China. The Chinese gift is believed to consist of Chinese-made engines for some of Egypt's Soviet MIG17s and 21s but there was no official confirmation of this.

Amin bares 'plot'

NAIROBI, Kenya — President Idi Amin has denied that he was the target of an assassination attempt a week ago, but he said there had been a plot to topple his 6½-year-old government, Radio Uganda reported Saturday. Amin said the plot was launched by Ugandan exiles, trained by "imperialists and Zionists."

Canadians jail Huey Newton

TORONTO — Fugitive Black Panther leader Huey P. Newton was taken into custody late Saturday after arriving here from Cuba on the first leg of a journey to California where he faces murder and assault charges.

Canadian officials said the 35-year-old Newton, who spent the last 2½ years in Communist Cuba, was being held pending a deportation hearing today.

An immigration spokesman said officials would seek to have Newton deported to the U.S. because of a criminal record.

8 on hunger strike

GENEVA, Switzerland — A spokesman for eight Chileans holding a hunger strike at International Red Cross headquarters said Saturday they were "confident" their demand would be met over the weekend. They are demanding an international panel be set up to travel to Santiago and investigate their claim that 2,500 Chileans have "disappeared" since the military government took power there in 1973, toppling the electedgovernment of Salvador Allende.

Korean anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea — The two Koreas marked the 27th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on Saturday with mass rallies on each side. Each called for the ouster of the other's leader. But quiet was reported along the demilitarized zone separating the armies of the Communist North and U.S.-backed South.

Shelling kills 4

BEIRUT — Rightist Christians said Saturday a Christian village in southern Lebanon was heavily shelled during the night, leaving four dead and many injured. The bombardment marked the fifth day of fighting just north of the Israeli border between Christians and an alliance of Moslem leftists and Palestinian guerrillas.

Reds squabble

MADRID — The Communist party declared Saturday that an attack by Moscow against Spanish Communist leader Santiago Carrillo, "is an attack against the entire party." The party said the Soviet attack was directed at all Communist parties seeking to establish socialism in democratic nations. The Soviets accused Carrillo of "anti-Sovietism" and claimed he was trying to divide the Communist movement by asserting his independence from Moscow.

Women assail ERA

SALT LAKE CITY — A loud, overwhelming majority of about 4,000 women at a Utah International Women's Year conference workshop voted to go on record against the Equal Rights Amendment. In another workshop, tempers flared as participants voted against abortions under any circumstances, sex education in schools and wider availability of contraceptives.

Young foils misquotes by taping self

In Richmond, Va. Saturday, United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, who has often accused the news media of misquoting him or quoting him out of context, turned on a tape recorder he was wearing under his suit coat before speaking with reporters.

Young made no reference to the recorder in answering questions put to him at Byrd International Airport after his arrival for an appearance at the Church of the Brethren's Annual Conference.

Reporters who have traveled with him say to their knowledge he has never personally carried a tape recorder in the past.

But Young said later he had been using a tape recorder for all of his appearances since he was in Congress. The ambassador says he does not generally speak from prepared texts and that he records his comments in case he decides to write a book about his experiences.

In response to questions at the airport, Young denounced South African police treatment of black demonstrators in Soweto on Saturday as "a kind of savagery we haven't seen in public for a long time in the world."

Police in the Johannesburg suburb fired cannisters of tear gas to disperse thousands of blacks gathered for the burial of a 17-year-old youth whose death was blamed by some blacks on a police beating.

Young said the South African government has exhibited "the kind of primitive racism that feeds the seeds of Communist expansion ...

"There are many good people in South Africa who are white, but they don't seem to be in control."

Young commented only briefly on Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, who referred to Young in a Radio Uganda broadcast as a "puppet diplomat" with "no power to talk about American policy in Africa."

Young said the regimes of South Africa and Uganda are similar — "Neither government is concerned about their citizens."

He said Amin "represents almost nothing" of contemporary thinking of Africa.

"We have no interest in Uganda," he said. "The less said about Idi Amin, the better."

Young, an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, preached at an evening worship service of the Church of the Brethren gathering at Richmond Coliseum.

Elvis still in fighting form

Elvis Presley's age and waistline are both about 42 now. But there's still a hint of the duck-tailed Elvis the Pelvis of 20 years ago in the king of rock 'n' roll.

In Madison, Wis. Friday his limousine stopped next to two teen-agers fighting, and, leaving his bodyguards behind, Presley jumped out.

"He sat there in his car watching for a couple minutes while I was fighting this other guy," recalled Keith Lowry Jr., 17. "Then he jumped out."

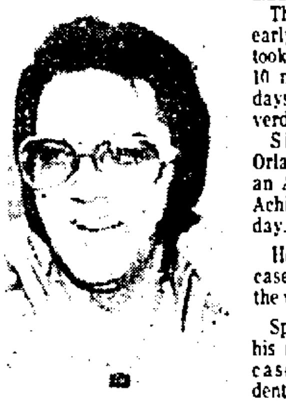
"He jumped out like one of those kung fu guys," Lowry said of Presley, a reputed martial arts devotee. "He looked kind of tough."

"All right, I'll take you all on," Presley told the fighters and a teen-age onlooker.

"We kind of froze," Lowry said. "It stopped the fight instantly. That was Elvis, no doubt about it. He was overweight and had jet black hair."

"He shook our hands and said he hoped everything was okay now and that it was all settled," Lowry said. "Then he shook hands with some other people and a woman took pictures of him and then he left. The whole thing took about five minutes."

Presley was in Madison for a Friday night concert.



ELVIS PRESLEY

Sirica

Despite the "long, lonely, sad hours" and the many crucial rulings that helped topple a president, Judge John J. Sirica says the Watergate case was not his toughest.

"Surprisingly, no," Sirica said in a rare interview. "The toughest was a Federal Commerce Commission case in which a trucking company sued a number of railroads for unfair competition."

That was back in the early 1960s, and the case took two years to prepare, 10 months to try and 10 days for a jury to reach a verdict.

Sirica, 73, was in Orlando, Fla. to receive an American Academy of Achievement award Saturday.

He did not belittle the case that thrust him into the world spotlight.

Speaking cautiously of his role in the Watergate case which forced President Nixon to resign and left a number of close aides in jail, Sirica said the rigors of the trial probably caused his heart attack in February 1976.

'Genteel wake' held for Joan Crawford

It was like "a genteel Irish wake," said John Wayne.

"It is the first time the entire film industry has come together to honor one of its own," remarked Myrna Loy.

The two indelible film stars were speakers at "A Tribute to Joan Crawford," held Friday night at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Los Angeles, with the film industry and its guilds participating and a thousand of Miss Crawford's friends and co-workers in the audience.

The star died May 10 in New York at the reported age of 69.

"This is not a somber memorial service," said Kathleen Nolan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, which Miss Crawford joined June 12, 1934, as the 328th member. "She never looked back. Regret was not in her vocabulary."

And so, for a couple of hours, friends talked about the actress who seemed to epitomize stardom. The audience watched scenes of her memorable performances in "Dancing Lady," "Mildred Pierce," "Humoresque," "Torch Song," "The Gorgeous Hussy," "Reunion in France," and others.

Miss Loy claims to be Miss Crawford's oldest friend in Hollywood, since they appeared as showgirls in the 1925 "Pretty Ladies." Miss Loy recalled, "We had to form a human chandelier."

Robert Young, who appeared in four Crawford films, reminisced about his secret marriage 44 years ago — "Film actors weren't supposed to get married in those days and having children was out of the question." He brought his bride home to find two dozen red roses and a copy of "The Prophet," gifts of Joan Crawford.

Wayne recalled seeing Miss Crawford at tea dances in Los Angeles in the late 1920s and termed the star "so courteous, polite and gracious to fellow workers and unknowns."

Steven Spielberg, director of "Jaws," remembered his first directorial assignment, a "Night Gallery" television segment starring Joan Crawford. He was only 21 at the time.

"She treated me like I knew what I was doing," the young director said. "It was a baptism of fire, and I loved her for it."

Long Beach realizes its 'money tree' is dying

Tideland oil funds run out in a decade

By James M. Leavy
Urban Affairs Writer

Long Beach, an oil-rich old dowager made giddy in the early part of this decade with what appeared to be an unlimited source of money, has had some sobering jolts of late and is now thinking of "biting the bullet" or "tightening her belt" or doing whatever one does when the money is running out.

In recent years the realization has grown on city officials that tideland oil funds — that dwindling source of revenues they spent with such abandon on the shoreline — will run out in a decade.

And when they take a look around to see what will replace the oil money they find only more trouble.

Sales tax revenues are down, and residents won't sit still for an increase in property taxes. These are the two main sources of money used to run the city.

At the present time there is no connection between money that comes from tideland oil — and consequently must be spent on the shoreline — and the money from taxes, which pays for police, fire, public works recreation and other city services.

But the specter of a depleted tideland reserve lurks behind many of the budget considerations these days and generates an air of desperation among financial planners looking into the next decade.

It is against this backdrop that the 1977-78 budget was approved last week by the City Council. It totals more than a half-billion dollars. Tax supported revenues and expenditures — the part that effects the services residents receive and what they pay for them — amounts to $114 million.

That's 5.7 per cent higher than last year but less than it should be, given the increasing demand for services and the effects of a 6.5 per

New budget tries to end 'nonplanning'

What would have happened if the two following items had appeared in the 1966-67 Long Beach city budget?

—Proposed expenditure — $80 million.

Description — Purchase the Queen Mary.

Justification — Attract tourists and provide a maritime museum.

—Proposed expenditure — $50 million.

Description — Build a convention center complex.

Justification — Attract major conventions to the city.

That isn't the way the money for those two major projects was appropriated. It occurred in increments and the enormity of the decisions being made was not apparent until the money was committed.

There are changes in the 1977-78 budget procedure which appear to be aimed at avoiding this type of "nonplanning." And, according to city officials, the changes will provide more accountability, more control, and more opportunity for long-range planning and citizen participation. The 300-page document suggests some new approaches and new attitudes on the part of city government.

For the first time the budget included all the money which passes through the hands of city officials. It came to more than a half-billion dollars. In previous years the total — in the neighborhood of $100 million — included only tax-supported revenues and expenditures, those involved in the day-to-day operation of police, fire, public works, recreation and other departments.

The new budget includes in its total $125.7 million in tideland oil revenues and $132.7 million in revenues and expenditures for the Port of Long Beach. In past years these funds were considered separately.

Lads, lassies throw guid Highland fling in auld Long Beach

Southland Scots — and those who wished they were — joined the sons and daughters of Highland chieftains Saturday at Long Beach Veterans Stadium for the 45th annual Highland Gathering and Games of the Scottish clans.

And wasn't it a grand time?

An estimated 35,000 lads and lassies came to Long Beach from throughout California, Arizona and even Canada to celebrate their thousand-year-old lore.

Sponsors of the day-long fete, the United Scottish Societies, Inc., of Southern California, said they gathered in Long Beach this year — and plan to from now on — "because, frankly, mon, we've outgrown the facilities we've used in Santa Monica," according to Art Roberts, a Scottish Societies director.

"Long Beach has given us the space, you understand, and the hospitality we need for our gathering," he said.

Aye, and a grand time they had.

Hugh Hunter, 4, of Anaheim, upper left, marveled at the spectacle of his heritage while watching a pipe and drum band bleed the eerie half-tones of the centuries-old bagpipe music in competition.

Brian Olfield, lower left, tries to clear the 15-foot mark in the weight throw, while, below, Rene Cusson, who journeyed to the Long Beach games from Victoria, B.C., seems lost in memories of heather and hearth as he competes in the individual bagpipe event.

At lower right, a kilt-clad contestant sent spectators scattering as he tossed the caber, a telephone pole-like projectile, for a near-record. The event is a favorite in Scottish games.

Meanwhile, at right, a very intent lass concentrates on winning the Highland dancing competition, which drew hundreds of participants.

In all, spectators and participants agreed it was a day well spent, a day they say they'll repeat next year in Long Beach.

New Irvine owners set for takeover

The purchasers of the Irvine Co. plan to meet Monday with the company's officers to make arrangements for the July 26 formal takeover of Orange County's largest land parcel.

A. Alfred Taubman, the Detroit developer who heads the consortium that bought the company for $337 million, will be the chief spokesman at a series of meetings with company personnel.

Taubman apparently intends to tell the Irvine Co. staff that no drastic changes are planned, and that Raymond Watson will be retained as president and chief operating officer of the company.

The Taubman group won a spirited bidding for the company last month, after Mobil Oil Co. withdrew from a bidding war.

The Irvine Co. owns approximately 80,000 acres of land in central Orange County, 15,500 acres of farmland in the Imperial Valley and an 80,000-acre cattle ranch in Montana.

On May 24, directors of the James Irvine Foundation approved the purchase of its 54.4 per cent interest in the Irvine Co. The foundation and 14 Irvine family members who owned stock signed their shares over to the buyers.

THE NEW owners include Joan Irvine Smith, granddaughter of Irvine ranch developer James Irvine.

Taubman plans to stress that the consortium aims to expand agricultural activities in Orange County and that it will follow the company's master plan for commercial and residential development.

Besides Taubman and Mrs. Smith, the consortium includes Charles Allen, a New York investment broker; Milton Petrie, head of a chain of department stores in the East; Henry Ford II, the Detroit auto maker; Max Fisher, a member of a Detroit investment and development firm; Henry Marguleas, an Imperial Valley agribusiness tycoon; L. Donald Bren, a Newport Beach builder, and Mrs. Smith's cousin, Linda Irvine Gaede and her husband, Keith, of Newport Beach.

Mrs. Smith, who owned 22.5 per cent of the company stock, had challenged plans to sell the company to Mobil, which initially bid $200 million for the company.

The nonprofit Irvine Foundation was forced to sell its interest in the profit-making company because of provisions of the 1969 federal Tax Reform Act.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

THE JUNE 9 "People Talk" column recounted the story of Betty Seguin of Signal Hill, whose sense of economy was outraged recently when three identical copies of Congressman Mark Hannaford's newsletter popped up in her mail box on the same day.

Mrs. Seguin, of course, was the victim of a computer that had run amok. An equal victim was our own Congressman Hannaford, a gentleman the chair now recognizes for purposes of giving an explanation. He says:

"Indeed, computers are mysterious creatures which seem to operate on a logic system all their own. Although the computer operators who maintain my 'Washington Update' mailing list attempt to 'combine' listings which are nearly identical, their efforts are not always successful.

"At the end of each of my 'Updates,' I instruct readers who receive multiple copies of the publications to drop me a line indicating this fact. The duplications are eliminated as soon as I am notified.

"I have written to Betty Seguin of Signal Hill informing her that from this day forward she will receive only one issue of the 'Washington Update' — that is, IF my computer is willing to cooperate.

"In the meantime, all I can say to her and any others who might find themselves in similar situations is: I'm sorry, I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

I'd go one step further. Any computer that doesn't shape up should be cited for contempt of a congressman.

READER John Charles Thomas Jr., of Downey, recently registered his pet peeve as waitresses who respond "Is that all?" when he confines his order to a cup of coffee. As you might expect, "People Talk" heard from a waitress in short order.

Meet Doris Ramage, a waitress at Norm's on Long Beach Boulevard, who notes:

"I sincerely enjoy being around people and serving them. I do not mind serving just coffee, and if I should ask 'Anything else?' it is just suggestive selling, not an invitation to leave.

"My pet peeve is not with coffee drinkers or even people who do not tip. It is simply the inconsiderate customers who do not realize — when they are just sitting there after they finish eating — that they are depriving you of further tips and inconveniencing others who also wish to eat.

"I have served customers who read, write letters or just sit and talk for hours, even after I remove the dishes. At the busiest times, too.

"I think such people should consider their tips as rent, instead of favors for the waitress."

Well said, Doris Ramage. I'm on your side.

A number of years back (during a newspaper strike) I was employed as a bus boy in a well known Hollywood restaurant. I was happy to have the job but not so happy with some of the slob customers I had to endure. One in particular sticks in my memory — and my craw.

I was carting a big load of dishes to the kitchen. Riding atop the crockery pile, precariously so, was a nearly full tureen of chicken broth. My route led me past a booth wherein sat a male diner with the countenance of a Charles Laughton and the manners of a piranha. The head waiter had twice repaired to the booth to shush the gentleman, a specimen of distaste whose patronage would better have been spent at a swine trough.

It was obvious that the head waiter's mild chastisements had triggered only another expression of indecency from the gentleman, for as I wheeled by he flung his well-chewed cigar butt into the tureen of chicken soup, causing a few light noodles and a considerable amount of greasy liquid to rain upon my white shirt, laundered only the night before for my first day on the job as bus boy.

I swung at one of his chins and missed, connecting only with an on-the-spot firing by the manager, who had hastened to the scene to stop my second attempted haymaker in midflight.

The manager then ushered me to the cash register, where I received my small pittance and an admonition that the customer, no matter how gross and insulting, was always right.

Not having another place of employment to go, I invested the time on my hands in sentinel duty three doors down from the restaurant's entrance. There I waited out my churlish customer, accosting him as he hove into view.

We continued the discussion in an alleyway, where two good rights and a fast left disabused him of the idea that the customer is always right. It was a pleasure.

Water wasters

With all the noise about saving water, has our water company come out with any plan to reward people who conserve water? Do they plan to charge according to the amount used? To whom do we write to ask that pressure be put on our water company to do this? F.B.H., Long Beach.

There are no plans to reward individuals who conserve water, said a spokesman for the Long Beach Water Department, "but we are gradually approaching a single rate, which would treat all customers equally." No specific date has been set for this new rate structure, however.

He said the department also is developing a rationing plan "to have ready in case water conditions worsen."

Under the plan, all customers would be required to use 10 per cent less water than they used at the same time a year ago. Certain types of water use, now discouraged, would be forbidden, such as hosing sidewalks and driveways, watering during the heat of the day and running non-recycling fountains for display purposes.

Conservationists would not be rewarded, but violators would be penalized either by having to pay a surcharge on excess water used, or by having a flow restrictor installed in the water line. The restrictor would reduce water flow from 15 gallons per minute to one gallon a minute.

You can write to the Long Beach Board of Water Commissioners, 1800 E. Wardlow Road, Long Beach, Calif. 90807. Carl E. Gallman is president of the board.

Swarm

There is a swarm of bees that has set up housekeeping in a stucco fence on my property. Can Action Line find someone who will remove them free of charge? I live on a fixed income. Mrs. M.R., Long Beach.

Action Line has put you in touch with a local beekeeper who has promised to help you with the problem at no charge. The Long Beach Animal Shelter, 595-5419, maintains a list of beekeepers who will remove swarms of bees. If the bee-catching job is a simple one, there usually is no charge for the service. But if the swarm is not easily accessible and the job involves extra work, the beekeepers frequently will charge a nominal fee.

Landmark

I have heard that the management of the landmark Long Beach tavern, Joe Jost's, plans to sell the business. Will the establishment remain open? R.L., Huntington Beach.

The Jost family has no plans to sell the colorful bar at 2803 E. Anaheim St. "Three buildings nearby have been condemned and that apparently started the rumor and then when we had to post a new liquor license application because we were making some technical changes in the ownership records, that really started people talking, but we're not making any changes," said a spokesman for the tavern.

The bar actually started out in 1924 as a barber shop, pool hall and soda stand. It survived the March 1933 Long Beach earthquake undamaged and with the repeal of Prohibition later that year, Joe Jost's was on its way to becoming one of Long Beach's best known bars. Joe Jost, the tavern's founder, was born in Hungary in 1890 and came to the United States when he was 16. He died in 1975 at the age of 85, but the bar is still owned by his family.

With the original mahogany bar and furnishings still intact, Jost's has hundreds of regular patrons who enjoy the oldtime atmosphere. With its sawdust-covered floors, pool tables and simple fare (schooners of beer, sausage sandwiches and pickled eggs) the bar has long been a sanctuary for men, but since the 1960s, women have joined the crowds — Joe Jost's only concession to modern times.

Unclaimed

Can Action Line give me the name and address of the agency that governs the moving and storage business? I'm interested in contacting them about possible fraud in the sale of "unopened" cartons at "unclaimed storage" auctions. J.M., Long Beach.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, 12th Street and Constitution Avenue NW, Washington, D.C. 20423, regulates firms that transport goods from state to state, and the Public Utilities Commission, 107 S. Broadway, Room 5109, Los Angeles, Calif. 90012, has jurisdiction over moving firms that operate only in California. Spokesmen for both agencies said they investigate all the complaints they receive and try to resolve as many of them as possible.

These agencies, however, do not regulate freight outlets that advertise unclaimed goods auctions, but are not actually involved in shipping. If you believe such a firm is falsely advertising goods as unclaimed storage items, you can complain to the Federal Trade Commission, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90024, which enforces the federal laws prohibiting false or misleading advertising, but such cases often are difficult to prove.

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — A twin-engine Piper Navajo airplane, apparently leased from a Riverside, Calif., flying service, crashed and burned east of Grand Canyon Airport Saturday, killing five of the nine persons reported aboard, authorities said.

Coconino County Sheriff's Detective Jack Judd said the dead were badly burned and dental charts would be needed to complete identification.

THE FOUR injured, all from California, were taken to a Phoenix hospital for treatment.

Hospital officials identified the injured as Eckhardt Esil, 35, and his wife Christine, both of Del Mar; Elizabeth Luttom, 19, Norco, and Brad Anderson, 19, Santa Ana

The Esils were listed in guarded condition, Miss Luttom and Anderson in fair condition, all suffering second-degree burns.

Dick McLaren, assistant chief ranger for Grand Canyon National Park, said the aircraft apparently lost an engine, plunged into the forest and caught fire some 15 miles south of Hermit's Rest outside the park.

The Federal Aviation Administration Western Regional Office in Los Angeles said the aircraft was leased from the Riverside Air Service at Riverside Municipal Airport. The airplane departed for Arizona at 8:02 a.m., apparently en route to the Grand Canyon.

L.B. gun victims

2 youths' killers sought

Long Beach police continued to search Saturday for the killers of two teen-age boys slain Friday in separate shootings.

Police said autopsies conducted Saturday determined that both youths died from gunshot wounds.

In the first murder, Jerry Timothy Dixon, 18, of 2390 E. 15th St., was found shortly before 1 p.m. at 2184 E. 17th St., where he was visiting.

Homicide Sgt. R.M. Luman said Saturday that an autopsy showed Dixon had been shot once. He said he was not sure what kind of gun was used. On Friday, investigators thought Dixon might have been stabbed.

Luman said the Fire Department first received a call regarding a shooting but was given only sketchy details. When officers arrived, they found the wounded Dixon in the house. Dixon died at St. Mary Medical Center just before 5 p.m.

Dixon had last been seen by a friend 30 minutes before the Fire Department received the call. The same friend was the person who found the body, Luman said. He would not identify the friend.

Although neighbors interviewed Saturday said they thought the shooting was gang-related, Luman would only say that was a possibility.

He said there have been no arrests in the shooting.

In the second shooting, reported at 10:25 p.m., police are looking for two young men. They chased one man in his early 20s on foot but no one was arrested.

Homicide Sgt. D.P. Sallmen said that in the second shooting Adrian Pace Jr., 17, was shot once while trying to intervene in a fight involving his younger brother in front of their apartment at 2133 Elm St.

Sallmen said it was the second fight between the brother and one of the suspects. The first fight occurred about 10:05 p.m. and included "pushing and shoving," according to Sallmen.

The suspect left the apartment complex and returned about 20 minutes later with another young man. Another fight was about to start when Pace intervened and was shot once with a handgun. The gun was the only weapon used in either fight, Sallmen said.

Pace was taken to Memorial Hospital, where he died shortly before midnight.

There were about 15 people at the apartment complex during both fights.

Encino man, 24, drowns at Catalina

A 24-year-old Encino man drowned Saturday while diving in 90 feet of water off Casino Point on Catalina Island, sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said Mark Lank was pronounced dead at 11:55 a.m. at Avalon Hospital.

Lank's diving companion told deputies that when Lank experienced unknown difficulties while diving in Avalon Bay, he began swimming toward the surface and then made a rapid ascent.

Ships watch for overdue sailor

The Coast Guard has alerted vessels in the Pacific to be on the lookout for an Anaheim yachtsman who is overdue on a solo sailing voyage from Newport Harbor to Honolulu.

Dr. Fred Elesh, 55, of 1415 W. North St., left Lido Yacht Anchorage May 10, expecting to make a five-week crossing in his 26-foot yawl Isis, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Elesh's brother-in-law reported him overdue on Wednesday. The Coast Guard then began periodic harbor checks around the islands. A Coast Guard search plane saw no sign of the boat Friday.

Elesh was well-equipped when he left, with at least 45 days' supply of food and water, an emergency radio beacon, a navigation sextant, flares and 15 years' sailing experience.

Last contact with Elesh, according to the Coast Guard, was on June 5, when he talked with the crew of another sailing vessel, the Old Salt, about 800 miles east of Hawaii.

At the time, Elesh reported he had only about eight days of food left, but declined the Old Salt crew's offer for extra food, the spokesman said.

Muzzling police news

Long Beach police have long had a policy of keeping the public fully informed about crime in the city and about police operations.

That information is important. Most of us are concerned about personal safety these days. Can we walk the streets without being mugged? Will our homes or businesses be hit by burglars?

One of the major ways we have of keeping track of how the battle against crime goes is through reports in newspapers and on radio and television. To help provide the necessary information, the Long Beach police have traditionally made their records freely available to the news media.

Police confidence in the news media has not been abused. Certainly these newspapers have cooperated with the police. The I, P-T Secret Witness program has helped them solve crimes and catch criminals. The police have not complained that any investigation, or any prosecution, has been hampered by information published in these newspapers.

NOW CARL CALKINS, the acting police chief, has changed the policy of cooperation in making news of his department public.

In a directive issued May 20, the acting chief said news media representatives "will not have access to any police reports." Later the chief issued a clarification. He said reporters could see some police reports — but not those dealing with "homicides, suicides, dead bodies or discharge of firearms by police officers." He also barred press access to "arrest reports, stolen/recovered vehicle reports and follow-up reports."

The press will be shown copies of some reports — at the discretion of the police. Even these copies will be run through a shredder 48 hours later. If news of a crime was suppressed, the evidence of the suppression would be destroyed. Six months or a year later, if the news came out, the chief could claim that the information was offered to the press earlier.

The acting chief has also decreed that any police officer who provides "departmental information" to a reporter must write a memorandum to his commanding officer the same day. Regardless of Calkins' motive, this certainly will serve to cut down on information individual officers choose to give reporters.

CALKINS' RULES are far more restrictive than those in effect at any other California police department known to us.

Ironically, Calkins acted under a nine-year-old law designed, as the state attorney general put it, "to further the goal of maximum disclosure in the conduct of government operations."

The law contains provisions allowing police reports to be kept secret if the public interest calls for secrecy. But Calkins has in effect reversed the procedure intended by state law. Instead of making records available to the press except where there is a strong reason to keep them confidential, Calkins has issued orders that emphasize a desire to keep the public in the dark.

We do not know of any sinister motive Calkins had in imposing the new rules. But in light of the history of press and police cooperation here, the public and the higher powers in city government have a right to become suspicious regarding the action.

EVEN THOUGH many of us dislike reading crime news, it is important to our well-being to know what is going on. When police can decide capriciously to deny public access to news of homicides (that includes all murders), dead bodies, discharge of firearms by police officers, arrest reports, stolen/recovered vehicle reports and follow-up reports, serious questions regarding your right to know about public safety are raised.

These newspapers would like to continue to cooperate with a fine police department to see that the public knows the good things it does. We think the public has a right to expect that the police will not keep secret their errors or their problems. We think the public has a right to expect that the police will not decide to shield certain individuals or certain crimes from public scrutiny.

The acting chief said in one of his orders that he respects the public's "right to know" and seeks to "establish a cooperative climate in which the media may obtain information in a manner which does not hamper police operations." If he believes his own words, he will rescind his restrictive orders and return to the policy of openness and candor that has been a Long Beach police tradition.

Sierra Club announces campaign to 'fix blame' for economic ills

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — California's conservationists have served notice they are launching an offensive of their own in the battle to attach blame for the economic ills besetting the state.

The current Sierra Club publication, "Perspective," complains that, "In recent months, Californians have been exposed to a barrage of propaganda designed to level the public's commitment to protection of the environment."

The barrage, the publication asserts, "has been coordinated and financed by major developmental interests hoping to take advantage of public concern about the drought, fuel shortages and high unemployment."

EVEN THOUGH the public has not been taken in, "Perspective" states, "many elected officials are hastening to respond to its (the propaganda campaign's) special interest pressures."

And so, says the Sierra Club and a number of other environmental protection groups, to counter those pressures, "The environmental voice needs to be heard more clearly."

From the positions stated in "Perspective," that voice will articulate the "lower your expectations," "era of limits" and "Spaceship Earth" urgings of Gov. Brown.

The problems of water and energy shortages and unemployment can be overcome by emphasizing a "conservation economy" which would "mean more employment, less inflation and less dependence on imported energy," claim the conservationists.

But, they say, since such an emphasis "will also mean lowered profits for certain powerful segments of society, the public can expect the attacks on environmental standards to continue or increase."

The conservationists' counterattack, apparently, will come on two fronts.

First, they will argue that there are "common sense measures for dealing with ... shortages" of water and energy and for dealing with air, water and land pollution.

Second, they will argue that there has developed a curious and unhealthy coalition of labor and management which is willing to ignore long-term benefits for immediate and short-term illusionary remedies.

Taking the latter point first, the conservationists are going to complain that it is inconsistent for organized labor to complain about a loss of jobs threatened by expansion of Redwood National Park after not complaining about poor timber management which, "Perspective" contends, has left 43 per cent of commercial timber land in Humboldt and Del Norte counties unproductive, and after remaining silent while firms exported unmilled logs directly to Japan, thus taking jobs away from California mill workers.

"Have loggers who raise a storm of protest over the relatively small number of jobs affected by park expansion been similarly critical when management decisions on mechanizations, exports or reforestations displace or wipe out even greater numbers of jobs?" the publication asks.

Had labor complained when Bay Area chemical plants began reducing their maintenance efforts, thus increasing each plant's contribution to air pollution (and eliminating jobs), "Perspective" suggests, then the overall pollution level would not have been so high that the proposed construction of a Dow petrochemical facility posed such a severe threat to the area's air quality.

Some Sierra Club officials invited newsmen to investigate whether labor officials had agreed to let Dow use non-union employes at the proposed facility, in exchange for payment of an amount equal to the dues which would have been collected from union employes.

On the first front, the conservationists contend, there are available "strategies (which) emphasize conservation, rehabilitation, and labor-intensive technologies" which "will meet our economic needs better than the high-technology, supply-oriented and capital-intensive approach advocated by the developmental interests."

As an example, "Perspective" states, water conservation, storage and management techniques recommended by the Sierra Club "would enable California to make up all of the dramatic 10 million acre-feet deficit experienced (because of the drought) in 1977" at a cost of $65 per acre-foot.

BY CONTRAST, it argues, it would take 30 conventional storage projects the size of the proposed Auburn Dam to accomplish the same result, at a cost of $3 billion a year, or $325 per acre-foot.

Large-scale programs aimed at the installation of water-saving devices and energy-saving insulation in homes would mean thousands of jobs and a dramatic reduction in the usage of these resources, the conservationists argue.

Whether they are correct or not, only time will tell, but they seem determined to give time the opportunity. Californians are going to be hearing some interesting arguments in the months ahead, and the focus of the arguments from both sides, it appears, is going to be something very dear to the hearts of all of us — our wallets.

What others are saying

Energy: Rhetoric versus reality

By Milton Friedman
(Excerpted from Newsweek)

I do not know whether the Guinness Book of World Records recognizes a record for the divergence of rhetoric from reality. If not, I suggest that it do so, and I nominate as a candidate the debate over energy policy now raging in the U.S. Herewith some supporting evidence.

1. Pride of place must go to President Carter's use of William James' phrase "the moral equivalent of war" to describe the approach needed.

We do have a real energy crisis — no doubt about that. And, of course, every aspect of life has a moral dimension. But, for the ordinary U.S. citizen, there is simply no special moral issue involved in energy ... The problem is a strictly technical economic problem of adjusting consumption and domestic production to a drastic change in the world price of oil engineered by the OPEC cartel.

If there is any special moral issue, it is the failure of Congress and the federal bureaucracy to acknowledge the major role they have played, through ceilings on price, encouragement of OPEC and heavy-handed administration, in greatly exacerbating the crisis.

2. "The nation's most careless squanderers of energy" — a phrase used in one media report on an affluent suburb.

Are the residents of the suburb (and the reporters writing the story) also "squanderers of food, housing, clothing"? Is it either an actual or desirable policy that everyone should consume all items at some minimum sustainable level? ... What has happened to pride in our success in improving the living standards of our people? Today's lower-middle classes live at levels that would have been affluent "squandering" a century ago; and today's "squanderers" will set the pace for the less advantaged tomorrow — if ill-considered government meddling does not kill the goose that lays those golden eggs.

3. Gasoline prices have risen drastically and it is unconscionable to let them rise further.

Corrected for inflation, the price of gasoline in 1976 was 2 percent lower than in 1956! Gas prices did slightly more than double over the two decades, but prices in general rose even faster.

A major source of our energy problem is that government policies have been falsifying the true situation to consumers. As a nation, we are paying more for gasoline than two decades ago, but we are doing so through taxes that are used to subsidize the import of foreign oil, in order to hold down the price at the gasoline pump.

4. In a discussion of President Carter's proposals: "The biggest burden will probably fall on industry. Factories and utilities will be taxed heavily unless they shift to coal."

How do you "burden" industry or "tax" a factory? ... Only people can bear a "burden" or pay a tax. An industry, a factory or a utility can do neither ... The burden of the tax is borne either by the stockholders, or the employes, or the customers — and, in the long run, for a tax on a specific product, primarily by the customers.

We need more investment in the domestic production of energy. Taxing away the fruit of past investment is hardly a sensible way to encourage more investment. It is simply stupid of us to adopt the general policy of taxing away "windfall" profits reaped by farsighted individuals who invested in advance in order to be able to profit from high prices when a "shortage" occurs — whether because of a cartel or a drought or whatnot. That is a sure way to destroy private provision for emergencies and to transform our economy into a centralized corporate state.

5. A congressman about the President's program: "OK, as long as everybody is hurt equally."

What a sadistic philosophy. That is a prescription for universal misery. I thought true American philosophy was, "OK, as long as everyone has an equal opportunity to improve his lot."

6. The House energy committee's 40 members "were carefully chosen ... with a slight tilt toward consumer interests and against racial changes, such as the total elimination of price controls on gas and oil."

The truly radical element of present energy policy is the existence of price controls. The controls on natural gas date back only to 1954, on oil, to 1971. They are not only radical, but a major source of our problem.

7. "Gas-guzzling" cars.

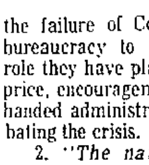
A combination of demagoguery, confusion about morals and bad economics. One man's gas guzzler is another man's necessity. If each of us has to pay the full cost of energy — which is what would occur if the market were allowed free rein — we would each have to choose how to meet the cost. One man would decide to do so by driving a large car fewer miles; another by buying a small car; a third, by conserving on other items of consumption, thereby releasing them for persons who had less urgent need for the gasoline.

Insofar as the problem is one of relieving persons in acute distress, we should do that by giving them general purchasing power, through a negative income tax replacing our present rag bag of welfare programs, not by trying to do something about gasoline separately, food separately, and so on ad nauseam.

Better late than never for Callaway vindication



James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of Harper's magazine, contributing editor Jim Hougan has done something almost unknown in the annals of Washington journalism: He has committed a kindness. In the matter of Howard "Bo" Callaway, Hougan has undertaken to right a wrong. Here on the banks of the Potomac, it very seldom happens.

Callaway, if you recall, is the wealthy and affable Georgian, the scion of a public-spirited family, who got into politics as a member of the House in 1964. In 1966 he was robbed of the governorship of Georgia. In May of 1973 he returned to public life as Secretary of the Army. He resigned that post in July of 1975 in order to become manager of Gerald Ford's presidential campaign.

And in March, 1976, the victim of a truly vicious smear campaign, Callaway resigned from the Ford organization. Shortly thereafter, he dropped out of sight. His reputation had been effectively destroyed, his political career put to an end.

A few members of the Washington press corps, knowing Bo Callaway as a man of integrity, defended him from the beginning of the ordeal he experienced. In the hurly-burly of the presidential primaries, our voices went unheard.

Harper's magazine ordinarily is regarded as a mildly liberal outfit, identified with causes that McGovern Democrats hold dear. It is an act of singular grace on the editors' part to resurrect a conservative Republican through Hougan's benedictory piece.

The charge brought against Callaway — if so flimsy a concoction of innuendoes may be dignified by calling it a charge — was that he had used his position as secretary of the army for private gain. The gist of it was that Callaway had put pressure on a couple of cronies in the Department of Agriculture to get special favors for his family-owned ski resort at Crested Butte, Colo.

If Callaway actually had done any such thing, it would have been a palpable violation of criminal law. As Hougan's long and definitive article makes clear, Callaway was wholly innocent. The worst that could be shown was that as secretary of the army, he had devoted a small fraction of his time to personal business interests — a practice universally accepted at the highest levels of both the executive and legislative branches.

Callaway was destroyed, in the event, by a nasty little lynch mob of Democratic senators, led by Floyd Haskell of Colorado, who summoned his subcommittee on the environment and land resources for the kangaroo trial of Bo Callaway.

The proceedings were pure travesty. Not one witness could be found to sustain a single substantive allegation. Under oath, 13 persons were asked if Callaway had pressured them in any way on Crested Butte. One by one, they gave their sworn answers: "No, absolutely not, none whatsoever. . ." So the Democratic majority of the committee of course convicted Callaway anyhow. Not of actual wrongdoing, mind you, but of conduct "at least translatable into the appearance of improper pressure."

Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson of Washington, chairman of the parent committee, could have stopped Haskell's irresponsible performance by lifting his hand. Jackson would not lift it. Sen. Frank Church of Idaho could have prevented the destruction of Callaway's reputation by refusing to give Haskell his proxy; Church gave Haskell his proxy. The subcommittee vote was 5-4 to issue the final sleazy report.

Hougan tells a small, revealing story. Some months later, Callaway happened to be in the city room of the Washington Post. He told his tale to Ben Bradlee, executive editor. Bradlee sighed. "C'est vrai," he said, "mais ce n'est pas une histoire." True, but no story.

By that time, Bradlee was right; I cannot fault his news judgment. But Hougan and Harper merit special thanks for reviving the story anyhow. Better their vindication than none at all.

Official offered Foster ride home before murder

One of my jobs was to get them to work better together — to understand each other, because there was so much turmoil at the time. I was trying to get the district to hire more minority administrators. I got a call from Oakland and flew up for the interview. Also, I had read in the paper that Oakland had hired Foster from Philadelphia and I was really impressed with what he had to say.

Q. Such as?

A. He said some newer things. He said some things about involving the community and how he wanted to choose principals by having community input.

Q. Why was the former [illegible] there murdered?

A. You know, I never got really get the right story, but that wasn't the cause of turmoil at the school. Prior to my coming, they had a major riot there that wasn't related to the murder. That school had gone through a major change. In the early '50s, it was almost all white. It was an upper-middle-class school. The district did what many districts do: they built a brand new high school up in the hills and when they redistricted, they put most of the white kids in that school.

Let's face it. I guess it was done on purpose but you couldn't prove that. Therefore, within a few years Castlemont was close to [illegible] per cent black.

Q. Was there racial tension when you were there?

A. The worst tension was before I got there. There was at least one murder on campus and a major riot and what they told me was that the teachers were really beaten up.

Q. By students?

A. By students, or outsiders. And the riots spread out onto the streets.

Q. What were the problems? Were black students not getting along with white teachers?

A. The way I see it, and this was all over the country, there were school administrators who weren't recognizing the needs of the kids, and I'm not just talking about black kids. There were very strict rules about hair, dress codes, and everything. Too many high schools were like prisons, and the kids weren't treated as growing adults. The black kids seem to lead the rebellion against this — they wanted black studies. They would go to the principal and usually would be told no they couldn't have certain programs and that would lead to a riot or a walkout. By the time I got there, the faculty was about 50 per cent black and 50 per cent white and they were divided. The situation was very tense.

Q. The white kids were the minority?

A. Yes, and I found myself protecting the white kids, which was different from what I was accustomed to. They were the minority so it was always kind of a cute twist because they would come to me and say, "Why can't we be on the student council— the same as what the black kids were saying when they were the minority.

Q. What is your race?

A. Well, I'm not black and I'm not white. My mother and father both had some black blood but it's tough to say what percentage I am. I've had people think I'm black. On my driver's license and birth certificate, it reads Caucasian.

Q. Did the kids think you were black?

A. That's tough to say. Some of the black kids would call me nigger, and I considered that a compliment when they did that. It was more a matter of attitudes about the persons, not whether he was black or white.

Q. You mentioned violence in the district. What sort of fears did teachers have?

A. You know, it's difficult to argue against fear or anxiety when you're teaching and a kid can come off the street and slug you. What led to Foster's death was that he approved for us to have community walkers — parents, who knew the kids and could walk around the campus and say, "Johnny, go to class." Some kids hated them and some parents and groups did, too. Some were saying that Foster was putting police in the schools. But at the same time, the teachers were hitting me up, telling me I had to protect them.

At one school, a teacher threw a guy out of the class. The police came, the guy got the gun away from them and killed both of them. At one of our games, someone fired a shot from a hill and killed a student's mother.

Q. What kind of precautions did you take at your school?

A. Every woman teacher had a necklace. She could press a button for trouble and every man carried a button. There would be a flash in my office and we could get there in two minutes. But the kids knew they had these things.

Q. Were the precautions effective?

A. I don't know if they were any more effective, but they made the teachers feel more secure. It's a horrible way to teach. It's just not conducive to learning. If you have to resort to this, it's a serious problem.

Q. What about specific cases on your campus?

A. I would just bluntly tell the kids, "I know that you fight and are in gangs. But if you're going to do something violent, don't do it on this campus. Do it at night, on weekends. Do it any place else but don't do it here."

Q. Was that the right thing to say? Were they violent off-campus?

A. What else could I say? Yes, there was violence off-campus. We read about our kids in the newspapers. Murders all the time. Sometimes, it was just a girlfriend problem or a stupid argument.

Q. You were with Foster the night he was murdered. Do you recall the events?

A. He asked me to come to a board meeting for a presentation on the proposed security measures because he was getting all this flack and he wanted to explain to the teachers why they needed the security. When I got to the meeting, the place was packed. He came over to me and said, "Dick, I don't want you to say anything. It's too dangerous today."

So I sat through the meeting and they had all these speeches by parents and others threatening his life for proposing these measures.

After the meeting, we walked downstairs together and talked a little.

He said he might not be able to get the security devices, but that he would try to bring them up at the next board meeting. I walked with him to the back door and I asked him if he had a ride because we had driven to meetings together before. He said he did. As I was driving home, I heard it on the radio that he had been shot.

Q. Was that the incident that triggered your resignation?

A. Oh yes, definitely.

Q. Had there been any talk about the SLA before?

A. No, nobody had ever heard about them. I was personally relieved when I watched that shootout (1974 shootout in Los Angeles with police in which six members died) on television — I'll admit it.

Q. What made you come to the ABC district?

A. I had to choose one of three jobs and I chose that one as one of three adult-class coordinators. I had some background in adult education and this looked like it would be a good challenge.

Q. Has the ABC district experienced any of the problems that the Oakland and Los Angeles school districts experienced?

A. No, I haven't seen the problems. I have to give the ABC officials credit. It seems to be one of the best districts in the state. ABC just has not seen a lot of the problems such as violence, and I hope it never does.

Navy copter crash kills 3

LEXINGTON PARK, Md. (AP) — A Naval board of inquiry is investigating the crash of a Navy helicopter on a training flight in which all three crew members died.

The men were identified as Lt. Walter S. Howdyshell, 29, of New Lexington, Ohio, Lt. Richard A. Creighton, 30, of Los Alamitos, Calif., and PO 2/C Robert M. Emery, Jr., 20, of Williams, Ore.

Howdyshell was the pilot, and Creighton was the co-pilot of the SH2F anti-submarine helicopter.

The men were assigned to the 1st Air Test and Evaluation Squadron, at the Patuxent Naval Air Station.

Letters to the editor

Lakewood Class of '77

Perhaps the real dangers of growing older are the failure to distinguish between opinion and fact and the failure to adjust to new situations. A society defined as "the establishment" is permanent and unchanging which lends itself to stagnation. A dynamic society is one that is vibrant, changing and always in a state of evolution.

I attended the 1977 Commencement at Lakewood High School and I, too, was surprised to find a group of graduates celebrating their own graduation. What had once been a solemn rite of passage has naturally evolved into a joyous celebration. Graduates marched onto the field; many were talking and laughing with one another, others were waving to members of the audience. One of the more humorous moments of the evening came after speeches when three of the graduates rated speeches on the scale of one to ten. But the real celebration began when the graduates received their diplomas. There were cheers from the audience and from the graduates themselves; graduates clasped hands and embraced each other; some even performed cartwheels. And when the last name was called, the traditional tossing of caps took place.

I graduated from Lakewood High School 11 years ago, and I am sure G. Lyon (letter 6/22) would have been more comfortable in 1966. When the Class of '66 marched into the graduation arena, we were magnificently in step, in straight little lines, just the way good robots should. We were very well behaved; only a few undisciplined and disrespectful whispers ruined the otherwise solemn and reverant occasion. After all, how could we openly defy authority? All my classmates were well aware the future of the universe, as we knew it then, depended upon us. Besides, the future of the Lakewood High School faculty was riding on our choreographical skills. Really! Who are the commencement exercises for, the graduates, or the spectators? 1966 was for the spectators and 1977 was for the graduates.

Certainly things have changed in 11 years, such as the graduates behavior, but many things remained the same: the Lakewood campus and wholesomeness of Principal Harold I. Judson. I feel sorry for those persons in attendance who were unable for one evening to break down their rigid barriers and guidelines of the sought-after Broadway reproduction, to enjoy the celebration. Surely those person who identify with "the establishment" and are told what car to buy, how to dress and how to smell by Madison Avenue would have a very difficult time appreciating or understanding the Class of '77.

One speaker, Dr. James M. Crawford, of the Long Beach Unified School District Board of Education, pointed out that the graduates of 1977 were the first of the third century of the United States of America. It should be apparent to all that King George III of England called the first generation of Americans (Adams, Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Washington and others) unduly disprespectful, crude and completely undisciplined, just as G. Lyon called the audience and Lakewood graduates. George lost his colonies. Parents may lose their children unless they take time to listen Bob Dylan, "The times they are a changin'."

A clarification

In my letter published June 15, I referred to local newpapers exposing the "big garbage ripoff" of taxpayers. Your paper inadvertantly added the word "Lakewood" taxpayers, which gave cause to be answered by a Jacqueline Rynerson, who charged I made false impressions.

I hope this letter clarifies that my statement was in general and my opening statement did not directly refer to Lakewood. The following paragraphs of my letter cannot be questioned as it was a direct quote by Mayor Pro Tem Jo Bennitt, as recorded in the adopted minutes of the May 10, 1977, council meeting.

If I were to give a personal opinion, I would certainly find fault with the city pocketing $45,000 a year in profits while passing the trash-rate increase onto the homeowner. This is a money-making operation — billing (by the city).

I may be the only one of this opinion, but the city government is here to serve the citizens of Lakewood and its duty is to provide the residents and businesses of Lakewood the best service at the lowest possible cost, and not be looking for ways to shaft the taxpayers in order to enhance the general fund.

LEANNA GEORGE
Lakewood

The Independent, Press-Telegram circulation area includes many cities. When letter writers refer to "the City Council" or "local" taxpayers, without identifying the city, we can only assume they mean the city in which they live, which we carry below their name at the end of their letter. — The Editor

Gay rights

In a highly charged, emotional campaign, Anita Bryant and her supporters have not only succeded in denying civil rights to gays, but in effect have succeeded in partially subverting everyone's right to freedom of choice by forcing their limited religious perspective on the rest of the public.

Mr. Whited (Editorial Page article titled, "Gays make a mockery of their own cause," June 22) with his "liberal attitude" toward the gay rights struggle, does not fool me. I can tell where he is coming from politically and I do not agree with him. His equation between the Bryant campaign to limit certain civil rights through her fundamentalist campaign to the struggle for gay rights is utterly ridiculous. Imagine how foolish it would be to use the same reasoning in connection with any other major civil rights movements, the American Revolution or even the advances of science (the Darwin theory is a good example).

Why would the I, P-T put an editorial (article) of such low merit in print? Does this reflect the attitude of the I, P-T? It seems to be that way. Evidently Mr. Whited has never dealt with the fact of male/male contact in any way approaching the poignancy expressed in the letter of Mr. Owens in the same issue of your paper. To be moved so strongly by a letter to the editor as I was by reading what Mr. Wilfred Owen has to say, and then read Mr. Whited's obviously biased (and not in favor of gay rights) simpering over poor Anita Bryant is really a turnabout.

I thank you for this glimpse at a real situation, real feeling as opposed to that of a fool. Enjoy your orange juice, Mr. Whited. Anita loves you, doesn't she?

I have been reading so much in the paper about gay rights, etc., I could climb a wall. What I could say about these people you would not print. In the first place, if they want to live the way they do, that's their business, but why advertise it? In the second place, if all boys growing up today felt the same as they do, then all girls would turn out to be either lesbians or old maids. That would mean no future generation — then what?

In the third place why do they insist on getting married? Why don't they live together as they are doing now and keep their big mouths shut. Just the thought of one man or woman wanting to get married to a person of the same sex is enough to turn my stomach.

In the fourth place, if I have a son old enough to go to camp and I knew the instructors were homosexuals, in no way would I allow that boy to go to camp.

I have nothing against these people living the way they want, but speaking for myself, I want nothing to do with them.

Fare is fair

I certainly do not agree with Ernest Smith as he states in "Unfair to seniors" about the 10-cent fare for riding the bus.

Doesn't he realize this is all government subsidized? I feel it a privilege to be able to ride for 10 cents and feel guilty when I take the Orange County transportation for no cost. I feel they, too, should charge 10 cents.

If the senior citizens who ride the bus would have their 10 cents and Medicare card ready, it would be no problem. But they wait until they board the bus, then have to search for their dime and Medicare card, thus keeping the bus driver waiting until they are seated.

I also think the bus drivers are the most polite and patient people I encounter as they seem to realize that many who board their bus have a difficult time getting on.

If Ernest Smith drove, how far does he think he could get for 10 cents?

Legal scalping

I read a small article in the Independent, Press-Telegram yesterday (June 20) where 14 people were arrested for scalping tickets at the "Led Zepplin" concert in San Diego. The scalpers price for the ticket was $25.

My 17-year-old son and four of his buddies purchased tickets for the same concert at the Troy Ticket Service in Anaheim. The price on the tickets was marked $9.75, but they paid $35 each.

Now I believe in paying a service charge for services, but $25.25 is outrageous. If my son had tried to sell his ticket for $25 in San Diego, he could have been arrested.

Ticket scalping is against the law, but the law doesn't seem to apply to the agencies that can afford to buy up thousands of tickets for under $10 each and rip off kids like this

Gee, I think I'll raise my son's allowance (he gets $5 a week now) and maybe he can get a license to become a legal ticket scalper

Slanted headlines?

This is in response to your front page article, "Poor get abortion aid blow" (Independent, June 21).

I would have rephrased it as, "Taxpayers may not have to pay for welfare abortions."

As a middle-class taxpayer, I have long resented having to throw money away on welfare recipients who don't practice birth control and end up killing a baby at taxpayers' expense.

The new ruling hardly discriminates against the poor, as contraceptive methods are available to rich and poor alike. In fact, the poor have access to low-cost or free help in the matter of family planning. So they have no excuse to commit legal murder (this writer's opinion) and dump the bill for it on us.

Dealing with aliens

President Carter has appointed a new head of the most messed up, incompetent agency of the government, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. The first speech he made was about amnesty for illegal aliens

The new head of the agency is Leonel Castillo. Remember the old saw about the man that put a fox to guard the chickens?

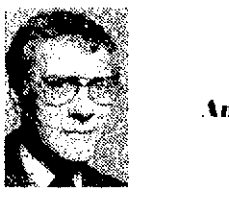
Hunter update: Story of crime, punishment

Humanity's greater and lesser tragedies and triumphs have life far beyond their time and place of happening. For better or worse these events become part of history, to be aired through the ages, told and retold by the scribes who keep the chronicles.

History can be an atom bomb falling on Hiroshima or a defeated Napoleon retreating through the Russian snows. History can be the Dionne quintuplets' birth or the coronation of a British queen.



F. C. Anderson

History can be a gunshot fired in the press room at the Long Beach police building on April 22, 1964. There were three casualties. Independent, Press-Telegram police reporter Bill Hunter, 35, was killed instantly; the police careers of Detectives Errol Greenleaf, 32, and Creighton Wiggins, 31, were wounded beyond repair.

That was a major news story in these papers in 1964, and understandably so. It was a senseless tragedy, the end product of horseplay with guns. It was an inane game of "quick draw," and Bill Hunter innocently became "it" forever when Wiggins' finger triggered the fatal shot.

The story of that tragedy was beautifully recounted by reporter Larry LaRue in our issue of Sunday, June 19. What emerged from his typewriter was not a mere recital of gunplay and victim, and horror but a document of crime and punishment, centering on the two police officers involved.

Neither officer served time for the shooting. But both paid dearly -- in remorse and remembrance of that awful night when Bill Hunter died and their careers as policemen died with him.

Reader Mrs. C. R. Thorn Jr. of Long Beach is highly critical of the LaRue story and of the newspaper for publishing it. She asks:

"What possible 'public service,' what possible benefit did printing the article have? ... How is resurrecting 13-year-old news of the unfortunate and unnecessary killing of Bill Hunter news now? If considered a 'human interest' story, it falls far short ..."

The story did not pretend to be a "public service." The story's intent was to show how two police officers have lived with the memory of Bill Hunter's death in the 13 years since it occurred.

History is about what happens to people. So is news. Indeed, news and history are indistinguishable in that they show how the past shapes the future. Certainly Bill Hunter's death 13 years ago had impact on the future lives of Wiggins and Greenleaf.

We mark that impact as a matter of historical record, a record kept by the scribes who keep the chronicles.

I regard Larry LaRue's story as a document of human interest made even sharper by the passage of time. The story was a news update of a celebrated case in Long Beach, not an invasion of privacy, not an attempt to lacerate old griefs.

Maybe there also is a message in the story for those who play games with guns and "didn't mean to do it."

The fatal shooting of reporter Bill Hunter is a part of our journalistic history in Long Beach. Like the other lessons of history, we can learn from it. I hope we will.

I, P-T MAKES HIT: A motion picture about the late rocket scientist Dr. Wernher Von Braun was entitled "I Aim for the Stars" — to which a wag appended, "But I Hit London."

That wag would have a field day with the Independent, Press-Telegram carrier who serves subscriber Louis Thayer, resident of an apartment building at 1404 E. Third St.

Thayer complains that the carrier must moonlight as a shot-putter, for he launches the paper from several yards away, missing Thayer's door and hitting the screen door of his neighbor.

"My neighbor's screen can't take much more of the carrier's shot. In fact, he's almost as frazzled as his screen. He's ready to blow his top."

The prospect of steam rising up from under the collar of Louis Thayer's neighbor is unsettling, to say the least. So, easy does it, Circulation Department, correct your range and your carrier's aim.

We want the I, P-T to be an editorial hit, but not at the cost of a new screen door.

Thursday deadline for NYC

$425 million, plus interest, owing

By Richard L. Worsnop
Editorial Research Reports

NEW YORK — Next Thursday, June 30, will be a day of painful significance for New York City. That is the deadline for repayment of money borrowed from the federal goverment during the previous 12 months under the emergency loan program approved by Congress in 1975.

The city repaid three loans totaling $600 million, plus interest, on June 16. It still owes the Treasury Department $425 million.

The federal loan program is a humiliating reminder of New York's loss of control over its own financial affairs. If the secretary of the treasury determines that the city is unable to repay its loans in full, Congress is authorized to withhold other federal assistance.

Without the federal loans, New York might well have been forced into municipal bankruptcy — a course originally favored by President Ford. In a speech at the National Press Club on Oct. 29, 1975, Ford asserted that the "primary beneficiaries" of a federal loan-guarantee program "would be the New York officials who would thus escape responsibility for their past follies."

THAT STATEMENT, and others like it, inspired the classic headline, "Ford to City: Drop Dead," in the New York Daily News.

New Yorkers expected better treatment under Jimmy Carter, who carried the city — and hence the state — by a substantial margin in last November's presidenial election. But while Carter has expressed sympathy for the city's financial plight, he has provided little in the form of relief.

Since welfare reform was one of Carter's campaign themes, New York officials stepped up their campaign to have the federal government assume the entire national welfare burden. Testifying before the Senate Banking Committee on May 17, Mayor Abraham Beame noted that the city's welfare costs in 1978 would be $490 million. If the federal government took over those costs, he added, the city would have a budget surplus and, therefore, no further need for Treasury Department loans.

But the Carter administration is not prepared to move as fast as Beame and other welfare-reform proponents would like. The President has indicated that major reforms cannot take effect before the budget for fiscal year 1981 is approved.

THE ADMINISTRATION has been vague about other types of federal aid to financially needy cities such as New York. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said last month, "We're working on a mechanism for economic development of central cities and will have it ready sometime this year," but he provided no details.

One program reportedly under consideration is an urban development bank that would provide loans for federally approved development programs in the central cities.

Clearly, then, New York's time of belt-tightening is far from over. Since the city's fiscal crisis broke three years ago, 52,000 municipal workers — police officers, librarians, teachers, sanitation workers — have been laid off. But former New York gubernatorial candidate Howard Samuels recently wrote:

"The $400-million increase in (municipal) interest (payments) since 1975 virtually cancels the savings we achieved by our layoffs."

In Samuel's view, "The only way to lighten the load is to convince the federal government to guarantee our debt." Perhaps, but the Carter administration so far has seemed reluctant to make firm guarantees where money is involved

"I'm only kidding! Andy Young didn't REALLY say that today!"

Roof falling down on first-time home buyers

American Dream soars out of reach in '70s

By Robert Lindsey
New York Times Service

James Minor, the U.S. Public Health Service pharmacist in Los Angeles is 28 years old, and his wife, Yvonne, is 26. For months, they watched the price of houses climb seemingly into the stratosphere while their $240 apartment rent left them with nothing but a monthly receipt.

This spring, Mrs. Minor went to work at a local savings bank, the couple plunged deeper into debt than either of them had ever imagined, and they moved into a 10-year-old home in San Pedro for which they paid $52,000.

"It was a tremendous price by the standards we were used to in North Carolina where we grew up," she recalled, "but we wanted our own home. It takes two salaries to keep a house going these days -- it's a necessity for women to work if you want to own your own home."

THE Minors, by some projections, may be an endangered species in America: the first-time home buyer.

But, at the same time, they are part of a generation of young people, which, by adjusting their life styles and making sacrifices that their parents could not face, are realizing the American dream — their own home — despite spectacular increases in the price of the dream.

America is in the midst of its biggest single-family housing boom in history. Most housing experts expect at least 1.5 million new homes to be started in 1977, about 20 per cent more than in 1972, the previous record year. And one question that has puzzled some economists is, where are the buyers coming from?

The boom is occurring in spite of price increases that have brought the median cost of a new home nationally to almost $49,000 and caused a steadily widening gap between home prices and average income.

A RECENT federal survey concluded that the median value of a single-family home had risen 73 per cent between 1970 and late 1975, while the median income had risen just 40 per cent. Some experts believe the gap has widened even more since 1975.

There are fewer first-time buyers today than there were even four years ago when, according to government data, the housing market was evenly divided among families who were buying their first homes, and families who already owned a home and were using its accumulated value as down payment on another house. This year, according to a survey by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, only about 35 per cent of purchasers are first-time home buyers.

The price trend has forced more and more young people out of the housing market at a time when members of the widely publicized statistical population bulge born after World War II has reached the age when they expect to have their own home. Some, it appears, will never be able to buy one.

STILL, many young families are buying homes at prices that only a few years ago seemed in the luxury class. How are they doing it? Interviews with developers, real estate agents and scores of young families in 14 cities during the past two weeks have indicated some fundamental changes in the living and home-buying patterns of the 20-to-35-year-old generation.

—More wives are working to buy a home; few young couples can afford a home on one salary; the need for the wife's paycheck is adding further pressure on the national trend of a reduced birth rate.

—Many younger couples are going more deeply into debt than their parents to support the mortgage payments, taxes and other housing expenses; while monthly payments equal to 20 to 25 per cent of income has been typical in the past, the average now is more likely to be 25 to 30 per cent.

—Proportionately higher payments are leaving more and more first-time buyers in financial squeezes that could get them into trouble if one of the two paychecks is lost.

—Many younger couples are having to lower expectations of their first house; instead of a bright new home in a sparkling suburb, more and more are buying older "fixer-upper" homes in the suburbs and, increasingly, more are moving into older homes within cities.

—Many younger couples can only find homes they can afford far from city jobs, which means longer, energy-consuming commutes to work.

—In California and other communities where housing costs are higher than even the national average, prices are increasingly prompting some younger people to move away — to low-cost rural communities or in other states where housing prices still are relatively low, such as in Arizona or parts of the Middle West or South.

Lending institutions once regularly refused to recognize a wife's income in computing eligibility for a mortgage, largely because of an expectation that she would become pregnant. Now, partly because of birth-control technology, and partly from fear of legal action if they do not, more and more banks give full weight to a woman's salary — even, in some cases, when the couple are not married.

Typical of today's first-home buyers are Robert McDonald, 25, and his wife, Diane, 26. He works for a bank in New York City and she works as a secretary for a company in Greenwich, Conn. After saving all of her salary for several years to accumulate a down payment and scrimping where they could, they recently moved from their apartment in Yonkers to a new home in Yorktown Heights.

"My mother comes from the old tradition where you get married and have kids right away," he said. "I tell her, 'Ma, there is no way you can do that.' "

"The most striking thing we've seen in the last two years," Richard Stattler, a realtor in Portland, Ore., said, "has been the increasing number of couples whose salaries nearly match — a husband, say, who makes $600 a month with a wife who earns $700 a month."

Despite this extra earning, the American dreams, increasingly, often turn out to be less in today's economy than young people expect them to be -- often, a small home in a remote suburb, a home considerably less fancy than the ones in which they were reared, an older home.

"They expect to start at the top," Sam Feldt, a broker said of first-time buyers in Houston. "They've never had anything less than comfortable and find it difficult to relate to some houses; they're not willing to start with a Volkswagen house, they want a Cadillac."

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board sees some benefit in the economic pressure on young people to take a second look at older homes. "To an increasing degree," the board said recently, "first-time home purchasers appear to be using existing homes more often for their first homes, and expenditures and remodeling and have been accelerating, thus, there is an important improvement in the quality of the existing housing stock that is not measured in looking at housing starts."

For all the young families who are managing to buy their own home, there are many particularly in one-salary, blue-collar families — who are looking at the housing market and despairing. If present conditions continue, some housing experts believe the large number of baby-boom generation Americans priced out of the American dream could become a political force to be reckoned with.

VFW sour on Sacramento

SACRAMENTO (AP) -- Blaming "jeers, muggings and abuse" from winos and teen-aged bicycle gangs, the Veterans of Foreign Wars says it may not hold another state convention in Sacramento.

The 5,000 delegates to this year's convention wound up a week-long session Friday with a resolution that said:

"The VFW is not coming back to the city of Sacramento until the winos and gangs are cleared from the (community) center and mall, and it is safe for our ladies and members to walk up and down the streets without being subjected to jeers, muggings and abuse."

Mayor Phillip Isenberg said he was sorry the VFW hadn't informed him earlier because he had been unaware of the problems.

"We might have been able to help them out," the mayor said.

He said police do patrol the mall and convention center area, and that Sacramento has no more public drunks than other cities.

Fiscal crisis feared when tideland oil funds expire

cent annual increase in the rate of inflation.

The result is what City Manager John Dever calls "unpleasant medicine."

Neither Dever nor James Phelps, his budget and research director, will speak of cutbacks, however.

Both believe they can maintain the current level of services in the city with a budget which, when inflation is considered, provides less money than last year's.

They propose to do this by reorganization — the number of city departments has been reduced from 24 to 14 — and by reducing the number of employes in city government.

"We aren't as productive as we ought to be. The city can stand these reductions and they can stand more," Phelps says.

In addition, the city is raising user fees to provide more revenue.

The austerity is necessary for two reasons:

First, last February the council members told financial planners they wanted the property tax rate stabilized or reduced. The city tax rate was held at $2.18 per $100 assessed valuation. But Long Beach's share of the property tax revenue brings only about $30 million to the city. Just about enough, as Councilman Wes Carroll observes, to pay for police services in Long Beach.

SECOND, the council decreed that increases in expenditures should not exceed the increase in the cost of living.

This might not have been difficult to live with except that the city, for years, has been underfunding its reserves for worker's compensation and vehicle replacement.

"We have to free up money to begin to develop reserves," Phelps says. "This is probably the only area in the city where we really need to have money." It will take two or three years to replenish the reserves, he says.

The sales tax, another major source of city revenue, has produced what Carroll calls a "shortfall of $2 million." He attributes it to the condition of the downtown commercial area and many auto dealers moving elsewhere.

The budget squeeze this year is undoubtedly the result of some free spending in the early '70s. "We had a lot of services considered to be luxuries . . . gourmet cooking classes, quilting classes and on and on and on," Phelps says. The per capita expenditure for recreation in Long Beach is 50 per cent higher than 90 per cent of the cities in California, he adds.

The problems with the tax-supported budget, though, do not represent a crisis in city government. City officials are convinced they can hold down spending long enough to build up reserve funds without increasing property taxes.

A fiscal crisis for Long Beach, however, is a distinct possibility 10 years from now.

That's when the tideland oil revenues, which currently bring the city $9 million a year, will be reduced as a result of a complex arrangement with the state to $1 million.

A report prepared last year by Phelps and then acting-City Manager Robert Creighton projected an annual deficit in the tidelands of $13.5 million by 1989. Next year the Convention Center and the Queen Mary are expected to lose $2 million each.

By 1989 there will not be enough money from oil revenues to pay the $4.1 million it will take to maintain the beaches that year.

What this means is that the city has been investing a dwindling resource and unless something is done to stop the deficit spending on the shoreline, in 10 years the problem will be dropped on the taxpayers of Long Beach.

SO, IN ADDITION to balancing its tax-supported budget, the city is marshalling its resources on the shoreline in an attempt to make those enterprises at least self-supporting before the money runs out.

Dever is aware that the city has invested $150 million in the Queen Mary, the Convention Center and other efforts to attract tourists. He is committed to a fiscal policy that demands that something be done to make the best of what some critics view as ill-considered investments.

"I think it's important that we utilize every dollar of tideland funds in a way that would pay off to the benefit of the people in this area so there would be a multiplier effect. Those funds are sort of bonus funds, and we ought to use them as investments that would bring us returns in the future," he says.

This means promoting the city as a convention town and making the Convention Center pay for itself. It means building a downtown marina which will show a profit. It also means doing something with the Queen Mary.

Dever says the city will promote the ship in an effort to turn the operation around. But because that seems unlikely he has been working with port commissioners, the State Lands Commission and the state attorney general to create an alternative — handing the ship to the Port of Long Beach.

If all of these enterprises were successful enough to avert a deficit in tideland funds 10 years from now, they would undoubtedly have other positive effects on the city.

Tourist dollars would create jobs and increase sales tax revenues, and the marina and other shoreline recreational facilities would draw investors in commercial and residential property downtown, swelling property tax rolls, according to planners.

Success here might be the springboard for the entire downtown redevelopment. Dever says, "The downtown is functionally and physically obsolete. It's in a very difficult position in terms of competition and the downtown is a key to the economic and social welfare of the community."

THE DOWNTOWN redevelopment has already begun, with $70 million proposed for a shopping mall and garage. Most of the money will come from loans to be repaid from increases in tax revenues the development is expected to produce. The hope has been expressed that the mall would generate an additional $60 million a year in retail sales.

In addition, Dever says the city will push for industrial development on the Westside, around the harbor, at the airport and in some of the outlying areas of the city.

What this all means is that the city is in no immediate financial trouble, at least none that's out of control.

But because tideland oil funds are running out, the city is running out of options. The decisions, good or bad, have been made and there is one decade left to make Long Beach an attractive convention and tourist center, to revive the languishing shoreline and save the downtown commercial district.

It all translates into a long-range fiscal gamble with waning oil revenues as part of the stakes. If we lose, Dever says, "the people of this community are going to be paying and paying heavily."

KEN LARSON LOOKS OVER A PIECE OF HIS LATEST RESTORATION PROJECT

A survivor lives to encourage future L.B. coronary patients

By Don Borst
Staff Writer

Ken Larson was a key mechanical engineering designer in the development of the Titan missile, the Gemini manned space project and the Trident submarine system before the autumn of 1974.

After he developed heart disease and suffered a series of coronary attacks that year, his ignorance and stubbornness in refusing to be hospitalized nearly cost him his life, the Long Beach resident says.

But emergency heart surgery saved him in October 1974. He recovered and became an activist with the Long Beach Mended Hearts Association to help save the lives of others.

"I had several heart attacks in the late summer that year," Larson recalled, the excruciating pain just a horrible memory.

"I GENUINELY thought I was extremely healthy, and while I knew others who had suffered from heart disease, I just knew it couldn't happen to me.

"There were pains — terrible pains," he said, wincing at the memory, "but I knew I would get over them. I did a damn good job of talking myself and my wife out of rushing me to the hospital several times.

"I guess it shows how ignorant I was."

In September, his 50-year-old heart gave way. It was so blocked at the right coronary passage that it was doing him more harm than good.

Doctors termed his heart "inoperable" just two weeks before the surgery, but when his condition deteriorated considerably, they had no choice other than to operate.

"I was extremely fortunate to have such a tremendous team of surgeons on my case," he said. "I've seen at least a dozen angiograms of other coronary systems which weren't damaged as badly as mine, but all of the other patients died."

Today, Larson is retired at 53.

When he's not tinkering around the garage or attending Long Beach City College, Larson can usually be found working as a volunteer with the association, visiting heart patients who are preparing for surgery.

"It is important for the heart patient to have someone to talk to and to answer questions — someone who understands his own fears and anxieties," Larson said.

ANOTHER of his personal interests is to encourage people who believe that they may have heart problems to look for a cardiologist.

"One of the biggest problems is that people like me won't admit to themselves they have heart problems when symptoms present themselves," he said. "Techniques now available are almost foolproof in determining whether one has a heart disease that can be treated.

"Seventy per cent of the people who have serious heart problems will have a normal appearing cardiogram if it is taken while they're in a resting state. Far more effective is the stress treadmill test," he added.

He noted that a "tremendous number" of the 600,000 to one million deaths from heart-related diseases each year could be spared if they are detected in the early stages.

Taking a class here and there at Long Beach City College has occupied some of his time, but, like most retirees, he has had to resort to hobbies to fill many of his hours, which used to be spent with executive-type decisions.

Instead of designing rocket engines and working on nuclear reactors, now much of his time is spent rebuilding inside and out special-interest automobiles.

He is finishing up his latest, most comprehensive project — completely overhauling the engine and interior of a 28-foot motor home.

It is the former traveling home of the Boraxo Racing Team, and is graced on each side with a huge painting of the 20-mule team that made Borax famous.

BORAXO'S Formula 5000 race team traveled all over the country in the motorhome for years until its transmission gave out and Larson picked it up for a nominal fee.

In the past two years, working with the parts he has, parts he can buy and parts he has to reconstruct himself, Larson has partially or completely restored a 1959 Fiat he found deserted in a field, now worth about $4,000; a 1963 Studebaker Gran Turismo Hawk; a 1959 Austin-Healy, and a 1962 Corvair van.

He says his lifestyle has naturally slowed down quite a bit since the heart attacks.

"Oh, I've learned not to run up stairs two at a time, and I make sure I pace myself during the day."

Church hears debate

Death penalty a deterrent?

By Dick Howland
Staff Writer

While working as a deputy district attorney assigned to Long Beach, Toni Friedenberg met relatives of brutally tortured murder victims.

She says killers with a history of violence deserve to die and she wants the death penalty restored. She explained her views Saturday during a debate at the Covenant Presbyterian Church in Long Beach.

G. William Dunn, a Long Beach attorney and a former member of the Long Beach Human Relations Commission, argued against the death penalty.

"You never know how many lives are saved by the death penalty, just like you never know how many ships are saved by a lighthouse," Ms. Friedenberg told members of the League of Women Voters and the National Association of Social Workers.

Ms. Friedenberg said that according to an affidavit filed by the wife of a shopowner who was robbed recently, one of the bandits put a gun to the shopowner's head and was about to pull the trigger when an accomplice shouted, "No, no, I don't want to die for murder."

The only thing wrong with capital punishment in the past has been that it hasn't been imposed often enough, she declared.

"Parents know that those who promise to punish a child but never do soon lose their credibility," she said. "Our laws lost their credibility long before they were declared unconstitutional by the courts because they were rarely employed.

"Statistics can prove either side, but one study showed there were seven or eight fewer murders for each execution," she said.

"Only five persons in California are blocking the will of the people, who have voted in favor of restoring the death penalty. Four of seven Supreme Court justices and one governor are stopping the implementation of capital punishment," she added.

(Gov. Brown recently vetoed a death penaly bill passed by the Legislature, and the court has struck down previous death penalty laws. Last week the State Senate voted to override Brown's veto.)

She did not advocate capital punishment for all murders — only when the convicted killer is likely to murder again, when a prison guard's life is endangered or when there has been a history of violence. A husband who beats his wife to death with a pressure cooker, for example, is not a candidate for execution, Ms. Friedenberg said.

"One example of a crime deserving the death penalty is a horrible sex crime I know of in which two lesbians cut off a man's penis and stuffed it down his throat," she said.

Dunn contested Ms. Friedberg's arguments. Standing in a church classroom below a framed print of Jesus Christ, Dunn stressed that justice is relative to contemporary standards throughout history.

"Every one in his own time thinks he's enlightened," Dunn said. "The Athenian lawgiver Solon decreed in 500 B.C. that murder trials should be held outdoors because any killer is polluted and the pollution could spread to jurors and witnesses in an enclosed courtroom. Even inanimate objects responsible for a death were tried, convicted and destroyed.

"In Jesus' days, adulterers were stoned to death. Now adultery is not considered a capital crime in our country.

"We used to burn witches in our country," he continued. "In 1927 two anarchists were convicted of murder and put to death, because of discrimination based on politics and religion. It could happen again in 1977."

He said the issue is: does the death penalty create a better society?

"Through capital punishment, the state condones the very acts it condemns and fosters the idea that killing is OK, which creates the atmosphere of violence which we seek to remove.

"People must think in terms other than violence," Dunn said. "Execution is the premeditated killing of a human. It is murder."

He said society must develop constructive channels for young people to expend their energy and stay out of mischief. Instead, we now graduate high school students with no reading skills and no training for jobs.

"If we improved our educational system, I assure you there would be less crime and fewer murders," he said. "We need a revolutionary new society to stop murder, not the death penalty."

He questioned the deterrent value of the death penalty in most cases. He said clergyman interviewed 167 thieves before their hangings in England during the times of public executions, and 164 said they had witnessed public executions of thieves before those interviewed committed crimes themselves.

"Execution is an illogical and senseless solution to try," he maintained. "Drunken drivers kill repeatedly on the highways, but should we execute them in order to stop people from drinking and driving? Is that the deterrent value we're talking about?"

He added that truth does not always emerge in court, but the death penalty is final and leaves no room for correcting mistaken convictions. One book outlines 57 cases across the nation in this century when convicted killers were later exonerated, Dunn said.

He pointed out that the appeal process is only a limited safeguard because an appeals court must uphold the verdict of a lower court unless it is proven that a technical error in legal proceedings occured during the first trial.

During a 10-minute rebuttal, Ms. Friedenberg said it is great to be an idealist, but society must be practical.

Exxon hit on Sohio pullout

A chief critic of Standard Oil of Ohio's proposed Alaskan oil supertanker terminal in Long Beach says the Exxon Corp.'s withdrawal from financing the terminal's $285-million transcontinental pipeline will have no impact on the project.

Tom Quinn, chairman of the California Air Resources Board (ARB), also hinted that Exxon may be acting in bad faith in its publicized abandoning of support for the 1,025-mile pipeline to Texas.

In withdrawing from a 20 per cent share in the project last Monday, Exxon cited strict California air quality protection and permit requirements as the reason for its withdrawal from the Sohio project.

Quinn said the state and Exxon have had a "stormy relationship" in the past few months.

"Exxon has refused to cooperate with the State of California," Quinn said, charging that the firm "was most belligerent" when dealing with a state commission charged with regulating cost of development.

"I think — in fact, I know — it (the withdrawal) will have no impact on the project," Quinn said.

The pipeline is proposed to transport Alaskan oil from the Sohio terminal in the Port of Long Beach to Midland, Tex., for subsequent distribution to Gulf and Midwestern refineries.

Robert L. Schaadt, a vice president of Sohio Transportation Co., said his firm intends to proceed with pipeline planning and hopes to start construction this year.

"We're optimistically hanging in there," Schaadt said.

As for Exxon's complaint that the ARB's permit requirements are too stringent, Schaadt said, "I guess we wouldn't be pursuing this with all our effort if we felt totally that way."

However, Schaadt said he believes Sohio "is being asked to do things that, as near as we can tell, others have never been asked to do."

Vote fraud figure loses Congress try

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Richard Tonry, who resigned from Congress in a vote-fraud scandal, was rejected by voters Saturday in the first step of an attempt to regain the House seat he gave up last month.

Just hours earlier, a federal court judge denied Tonry's request for dismissal of an 11-count federal indictment against him.

In the Democratic primary to choose the party's nominee for the seat Tonry resigned, State Rep. Ron Faucheux, 26, had 45,586 votes to 35,445 for Tonry with 90 per cent of 1st District precincts reporting.

A third candidate in the Democratic race, one-time League of Nations delegate Florence Tye Jennison, polled 1,420 votes.

Neither Tonry nor Faucheux made much primary campaign mention of the election fraud in last fall's Democratic race or the indictment charging Tonry with receiving illegal campaign contributions, obstructing justice and offering federal jobs to contributors.

Trial on the charges is set for July 5.

In the Republican primary on Saturday, New Orleans attorney Robert Livingston defeated James Moreau. Livingston had collected 4,082 votes to 958 for Moreau with 293 of 327 precincts counted.

The general election is scheduled for Aug. 27.

Tonry spent four months in Congress this year as successor to Democrat F. Edward Hebert, who did not seek a 19th term. But Tonry resigned May 4 in the midst of a growing vote fraud scandal, saying he wanted to win his seat again "fair and square."

A week later, a federal grand jury indicted Tonry on 11 counts of receiving illegal campaign contributions and trying to hide the deals. His court appearance Saturday was scheduled so attorneys could file pretrial motions in relation to those charges.

Moreau — a Democrat until earlier this month — was defeated by 184 votes in a runoff with Tonry on Oct. 2. That election was later proven fraudulent, largely because of Moreau's persistence in pressing a series of court actions.

Foreign oil threat feared

U.S. energy plan 'may not be strong enough'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's energy plan "may not be strong enough to prevent oil imports from reaching levels that could threaten national security and economic stability," a congressional report said Saturday.

The President failed to consider possible delays that could prevent domestic energy production from meeting his goals, the report said. The domestic supplies would offset dependence on foreign oil.

"If such delays occur, production of oil could fall short of the plan's goals by as much as .5-to-1.5 millions of barrels per day," said the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

"Production of natural gas may also fall below the goals by the equivalent of .5-to-1.5 million barrels of oil per day. Coal production could fall short of the goals by 200 million tons per year. Nuclear power plants could produce 15 per cent less energy than the plan anticipates."

While the report criticizes some aspects of Carter's plan, it says he's moving in the right direction with a national effort to combat the energy crisis.

"Without immediate action, the growth in world demand for oil could exceed the production capacities of exporting nations by the mid-1980's," the report said. "If that were to happen, intense competition among importing nations over scarce supplies of oil and gas they all needed to survive would begin to set the stage for worldwide economic and social upheaval."

The report says the potential delays are different for each source of energy.

Oil and gas production problems would most likely occur because laws and regulations may postpone access to frontier areas for exploration and development, particularly on the Outer Continental Shelf.

Additional coal production facilities would be constructed by the coal industry only if new markets for coal were ensured. Manpower and capital shortages could delay opening of new underground mines, and transportation bottlenecks could prevent coal from reaching areas that needed it.

The report also said:

—The plan emphasizes the importance of setting more realistic prices for energy so that consumers can see total costs more clearly and can make their choices accordingly.

—Given the seriousness of the energy problem, the conservation measures proposed in the plan could be more drastic.

—The plan anticipates higher-than-average growth in the gross national product, continued gains in environmental protection, and a move toward coal as an energy source. The goals are commendable, but the plan does not demonstrate that all three can be achieved simultaneously.

Power company 'game' irks environmentalists

NEW YORK (AP) — High school students who are playing an "energy environment game" distributed nationwide by the Edison Electric Institute as an educational aid are really being exposed to a "slick propaganda package promoting nuclear power," the National Audubon Society says.

In the July issue of Audubon, the society's bimonthly magazine, environmental writer Marvin Zeldin says the game portrays environmentalists as "unthinking fools who oppose all proposals for new power plants."

Utility executives, on the other hand, are portrayed in the game as reasonable people equally concerned about environmental and energy problems, he said.

"We think it's a sound educational tool," said Dr. Richard Scheetz, coordinator of educational services for Edison, a trade association of privately owned power companies.

"It's an instructional simulation that presents a complete diversity of points of view so students can decide for themselves," Scheetz said in a telephone interview when asked about the Audubon charges. "There are no predetermined answers."

The game was developed by Creative Studies, a Boston firm that designs educational simulations, and first distributed in 1974. Edison sells the games to utilities for free distribution to schools, or directly to the schools themselves. More than 5,000 of the kits have been distributed nationwide, the institute said.

In the game, students adopt the roles of environmentalists, utility executives, interest groups and residents who must determine the need for a power plant in a fictional area. Each group's recommendation is then considered by a commission, which rules on the need for a plant, what type of plant should be built, and which of three sites should be used.

Thirty-two roles are assigned to students. Zeldin charges that the role cards include biased descriptions of anti-utility groups. For instance, a student radical is said to be "known as an oddball in this area."

A city planner is told he believes more power plants mean more harm to the environment, "and if it takes blackouts to wake people up to the need for change, then blackouts it should be."

Scheetz responded that Zeldin excerpted the description out of context.

"The only ax we have to grind is to get a better informed public in response to demands for energy," Scheetz said.

The Audubon article quotes the designer of the game, Raymond Montgomery, as saying, "The last thing I wanted to do was promote nuclear power. My own personal bias is against nuclear power, but I bent over backward to keep my bias out. Perhaps I bent over backward too far."

Big Canadian iceberg called Russ spy base

PARIS (AP) — Three French newspapers said Saturday the Soviet Union is using a giant iceberg off northern Canada as a floating spy base, possibly for guiding Russian submarines to American waters.

The Russians say they are using the iceberg, code-named North Pole 22, for meteorological and oceanic research.

The Paris daily France Soir quoted North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) sources in Brussels as saying about 160 Soviets were stationed aboard the iceberg located north of Canada's Queen Elizabeth Islands and west of Greenland.

According to France Soir, the Pentagon has urged Canada to use discretion in monitoring the base because it said Washington also uses icebergs for surveillance purposes.

Two other papers, Le Figaro and L'Aurore, said the Soviets began using the iceberg station three years ago "like a novel by John Le Carre," author of "The Spy Who Came in From the Cold."

U.S. tries to show need for underseas research

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States took delegates from 54 countries on an Atlantic cruise Saturday in an effort to demonstrate the need for scientific research under the seas.

But not even Elliot Richardson, chief U.S. delegate to the U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea, was convinced the delegates had been persuaded. He said he feared that a general treaty on sea laws which the conference is drafting would have provisions crippling such research.

Scientists aboard the Researcher, a 2,875-ton ship of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, showed the guests instruments used to monitor the character of the weather, water and ocean bottom.

Twelve miles out of New York Harbor, the delegates watched the New York sanitation vessel North Sea dump sewage sludge into 60 feet of water. Then they went below and saw the descending sludge trace a brown cloud on a graph created by sound waves bounced off the ocean floor.

Scientists explained that the technique was being used to study the pattern of undersea pollution.

Richardson told reporters he thought the demonstrations were helpful for an understanding of "the worldwide relevance of science to all countries" and "an appreciation of the openness and straightforwardness" of the research process.

He said proposals before the conference that would hamper scientists grew in part from "the suspicion that scientific research is a cover for something else."

Among the proposals he mentioned were those that would let a country bar research within 200 miles off its coast that "unduly interferes" with its economic activities, to stop a research project judged to have strayed from the stated aim, and to veto publication of research findings on offshore resources.

He said the United States also wanted to remove the word "exclusive" from a provision that would declare 200-mile offshore areas the exclusive economic zone of the coastal state.

Carter OKs arms to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to recommend the sale to Israel of some $115 million in tactical military missiles and vehicles, an administration source said Saturday night.

The sale, first sought by Israel last December, involves 700 armored personnel carriers, 200 wire-guided anti-tank missiles and 15 tank bulldozers, the source said.

Carter's commitment to Israel's future military security has come under question recently from some American Jewish leaders. But the source called attention to Vice President Walter F. Mondale's unqualified promise of a continued commitment in a San Francisco speech June 17.

Mondale said the survival of the Jewish state is not a political question "but rather stands as a moral imperitive of our foreign policy."

New L.B. budget tries to end 'nonplanning'

This is more than an exercise in arithmetic. "We are now accounting for every dollar," City Manager John Dever said. And the implication is clear that this has not always been done in the past.

The second major change in the budget ties directly to the objective of long-range planning by the city. Money is allocated in terms of goals. It's called a programmatic budget and appropriations are directly related to stated objectives. Previous budgets listed salaries, other expenses and capital expenditures without tying them directly to projects and objectives.

"We've been very careful in this budget to clearly state what the total budgetary implications of a project are," says Dever.

Proof of that came dramatically during last Tuesday's budget hearing when critics launched a challenge to an item in the Port of Long Beach budget, $67.8 million in revenue bonds to finance the proposed Standard Oil of Ohio tanker terminal project.

If the item had appeared in last year's budget it would have been buried among proposals for other building projects listed under "capital outlay."

The programmatic budget, by clearly labeling the proposal, gave critics a chance to urge the City Council not to include the bonds in the 1977-78 budget. Council members approved it anyway with the assurance that they will have an opportunity to rule on the specific bond issue later.

MAYOR THOMAS CLARK says this is the beginning of an effort by "the city and the harbor to work more closely" with one another.

Sohio critics would have undoubtedly found another forum for their views. And as Councilwoman Renee Simon observes, "It's more than the budget, it's an increased level of public awareness." But, she adds, "This is the first time, to my knowledge, the harbor budget and harbor projects have been scrutinized by the public and the council."

The idea of budgeting for goals and objectives, some of them long-range, may be an expression of change that goes beyond budget considerations. The budget is a guide for expenditures and it is flexible enough to allow for change. What may be important is the new attitude on the part of the city toward the way in which money is spent and projects are planned.

It is difficult to assess because few people at City Hall want to talk about how things were done in the past.

No one wants to explain, publicly at least, why the city hired Sasaki-Walker Associates and paid them $800,000, nearly half of which was used to design an Aquatic Park the city cannot afford to build.

Few know exactly how the city managed to invest an estimated $80 million in the Queen Mary, which was purchased for less than $4 million.

Few care to admit to an understanding of the process whereby a $3.5-million remodeling of the Long Beach Arena grew, in a series of pieced-together, informal proposals, into a $50-million Convention Center complex.

City Auditor Robert Fronke thinks he knows how it happened:

—The Queen Mary: "You take one step at a time and each step is individually justified, and yet each one of them results in a total plan and, if people knew all about it to start with, they might have said, 'That's no good.' "

—The Convention Center: "It either grew like topsy or there was a master plan in somebody's mind or in somebody's desk and it unfolded one step at a time on the theory that this was the only way it was going to get developed."

Fronke says there was no opportunity to study alternatives to these two massive investments of tideland funds and concludes, "We were not geared to do the kind of long-range planning that should have been done." And there was little or no public participation in the development of either the Queen Mary or the Convention Center.

Dever avoids this kind of postmortem. Both enterprises were an economic reality when he took charge of city management eight months ago. And he intends to make the best of it.

"The citizens of Long Beach," he says, "have invested approximately $150 million in convention, promotion, tourism kinds of facilities. The money is spent. We are now in the most competitive business in the United States today. We are competing with New York, Anaheim, San Franciso and Las Vegas."

THAT MEANS the city has to promote and go after conventions, exhibits and other activities.

"Our citizens stand to lose, unless we're successful, upwards to $5 million a year beginning in 1980." That's when tideland oil revenues begin to run out for the city and losses, if there are any, begin to come out of the taxpayer's pocket, Dever explains.

"We've got to do better than anybody else in the country in promoting or the people of this community are going to be paying and paying heavily," he adds.

Dever is looking in part to the budget to help avoid the essentially unplanned nature of major undertakings.

He says it will provide two things:

—Maximum planning capability for the City Council.

—The greatest degree of control for the council.

"What the system does is force the City Council to look at each of their capital expenditures in terms of what the objective is, what the cost is and what the benefits are. It requires them to specifically authorize, at least for that year, expenditures so that, for instance, instead of appropriating $90 million for capital projects, they are required to look at each project and evaluate that expenditure."

It appears that tideland oil revenues, a major source of capital investment in the past for shoreline projects, will be given more careful study by the city, and the new budget process is moving in that direction.

But is has a ways to go, according to Fronke. "The budget doesn't say much to me. It is a budget in transition," he says. It is moving toward a system which will employ a commercial method of accounting, one that charges off all costs of operation, including depreciation, in enterprise departments — those that are supposed to be self-supporting like the golf courses, the marina, the water and gas departments and the Queen Mary.

These operations should be treated like private commercial enterprises from an accounting standpoint, Fronke says.

What it amounts to is this: If the golf course gets water from the water department, it should be charged to the golf course to provide an accurate picture of the recreational operation. It would also ensure that the cost of the water is reflected in greens fees and not in water bills. If not, it should be clearly stated somewhere that the water department is subsidizing the golf courses.

"The purpose of accounting," the auditor says, "is to provide management with informational tools to control the business and it is not appropriate, in my view, to try to control a commercial enterprise through a municipal appropriation budgeting process."

This type of accounting will be used more widely July 1 when the city's automated financial and management information system goes into operation.

Fronke is also critical of the "tendency to designate revenue by where it's going rather than where it came from."

He's referring to the more than $83 million designated "revenue for capital projects." This money includes bonds as one of its sources and Fronke says, "Borrowed money is not a source of revenue."

HIS CRITICISMS are mostly technical, but he believes good accounting methods are essential to a system which is supposed to provide a government with accurate, intelligible information on which to base decisions.

"It's not nearly the way it ought to be but it's a start," Fronke says.

It is an exaggeration to say a different approach to budgeting will, by itself, improve accountability, planning or control. But the attitudes suggested by changes in this year's budget, along with recent efforts by city government to improve long-range planning and increase citizen participation, offer hope that projects the size of the Convention Center or the Queen Mary will, in the future, be given more study, more thought and a better public airing.

No-smoke focus turns on young

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The federal government is planning to shift the focus of its antismoking campaign from middle-aged men to women and teen-agers.

The plan, disclosed by Joseph A. Califano Jr., Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, comes in response to statistics showing that, while millions of men have been persuaded to stop smoking cigarettes, much less progress has been made among women and young people.

Califano told of the plan in response to questions at a news briefing Friday in his offices here. At the same time he elaborated on his often-expressed opposition to smoking. He has been trying to end the seemingly inconsistent government policy of simultaneously discouraging smoking and subsidizing the cultivation of tobacco at a cost of nearly $80 million a year.

He said he hoped the Agriculture Department could find a way to end the subsidies while protecting thousands of small tobacco farmers against economic hardship.

"But I do think that when the evidence is overwhelming that cigarette smoking kills, we should look at the extent to which the government in effect encourages smoking," Califano said. "It is not the function of this government to make it less expensive to buy something that is going to give people lung cancer, heart disease and emphysema." He added that he was "not naive" about the difficulties of getting Congress to terminate the subsidies.

On the cost and quality of medical care, a subject that has embroiled him in controversy, Califano said his department would continue to publish lists of doctors, hospitals and nursing homes receiving federal funds such as Medicare payments.

"My strong belief is that one of the problems that plagues the health industry is lack of information," he said. "We intend to publish more and more of that information as time goes on." He added that "sunshine is going to be a great disinfectant in the health industry."

Agents arrest airline worker

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two federal Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents took an airline employe into custody after he refused to delay the departure of a Los Angeles-bound passenger plane so the agents could board, officials said Saturday.

Rodney Moore, a passenger service employe of United Airlines, was released after U.S. Atty. Sidney Lezak talked with the DEA agents by telephone.

The agents searched Moore and "rather roughly pushed him against a wall," said an airline official.

Greater role for women seen key to volunteer army

By Vernon A. Guidry Jr.
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — A new Defense Department study suggests that the future of the all-volunteer force may depend on expanding the role of women in the military service. The study is part of a "priority analysis" of manpower issues ordered by Defense Secretary Harold Brown and conducted in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for manpower, reserve affairs and logistics.

The work focuses primarily on the use of women to ease the problems and costs of recruiting, expected to increase in the 1980s with the dwindling pool of eligible 18-to-20-year-old males.

"The success of the all-volunteer force may well depend on reducing the number of young male high school graduates the department needs to recruit each year," the study read. "This is potentially the major benefit of using more women, but it is not without costs."

The study said the choice department planners face in the current recruiting market is between a high-quality female recruit and a low-quality male recruit.

"The average woman available . . . is smaller, weighs less and is physically weaker than the vast majority of male recruits," according to the study.

"She is also much brighter, better educated (a high school graduate), scores much higher on the aptitude tests and is much less likely to become a disciplinary problem," it continued.

"WHILE LACK OF strength is raised by the service leaders as the most common problem . . . no positions were identified in the service submission as being closed to women for physiological reasons," the study noted, adding that the question needs more attention.

It pointed out that many of the problems arising in using women in non-traditional positions were also faced when adapting American equipment and procedures to the use of male Oriental allied troops, who were also generally smaller than American men.

"The problems are not insurmountable, but the reality of these physiological differences should not be wished away in our efforts to avoid sexual discrimination or to substitute women for men in sustaining the all-volunteer force," the manpower specialists said.

Among the services, the Air Force has gone farthest in developing strength standards to classify positions without regard to gender.

"About 28 per cent of the women tested by the Air Force could lift 70 pounds to a height of six feet, which was the most stringent test. Virtually all women tested could lift 40 pounds to elbow height (which) would meet the strength needs of most non-combat jobs in the military," the study reported.

Another serious concern is time lost due to pregnancy and childbearing. The services report that pregnancy did result in considerable loss of time.

ACCORDING TO Army figures, about 8 per cent of its enlisted women members became pregnant each year, with about two-thirds of those giving birth. The average pregnancy completed caused 105 days of lost time. Some 40 per cent of women giving birth asked to be relieved from active duty following post-natal leave.

The Army said time lost for abortions approximated that for minor illnesses, averaging 10 to 12 days including just under five days of hospitalization.

The other services reported similar figures but the Navy compared total lost-time rates for enlisted men and women and found that male members lost more time. This was due generally to alcohol and drug use, unauthorized absence and desertion.

There was a catch to the comparison, however. "Both desertions and unauthorized absences may correlate with unpleasantness of an individual's job. Women are less likely to be in such jobs, especially in the Navy," the study pointed out.

The military-wide analysis found a vast difference among the services in the number of positions available for women after the exclusion of combat positions from which they are barred by law. For the Air Force the total available was 93 per cent. The Army combat exclusion was 50 per cent of its positions and the Navy, because of combat and shipboard prohibitions against service by women, excluded 60 per cent of its positions. The Marine Corps had only 27 positions of its slots available to women.

The picture is further complicated by what manpower planners call the "rotation base problem." Men who fill combat, overseas or shipboard duty closed to women must have alternate assignments to which they can rotate when their tours have ended.

THE AIR FORCE says it doesn't need any such positions. The Army says it must reserve 8 per cent of its non-combat jobs as rotation positions. The Navy and Marine Corps, with high shipboard and combat duty levels, experience the greatest problem. The Navy reports that it must keep open 55 per cent of its non-combat jobs for rotation and the Marine Corps must hold open 75 per cent of the positions remaining after combat.

Looking at these factors and others, the Defense Department analysis finds "the Air Force would appear to have a tremendous potential to use women." The study suggests also that some good-quality male recruits turned away by the Air Force might wind up with the other services.

The study identified a number of questions that must be examined before any final judgment on greatly expanding service by women can be made. These include what price the services will pay in flexibility, readiness and deploy ability if they put more women in combat-support roles.

Secret Witness cases, rewards are summarized

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 75 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $51,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P-T Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Camilla Stassi, 20-year-old coed found raped and stabbed to death in her Long Beach apartment in the 500 block of W. Eighth St. on the night of Jan. 17, 1977.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of two masked bandits who held up the manager and clerk at Eddie's Liquor Store, 301 Market St., at 7 a.m. on April 25, 1977, and fled with the loot in the manager's car.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Antonio Magallon, 39, shot to death by unknown assailants following an argument outside his Wilmington home in the 100 block of West D Street at 11:30 p.m. on April 1, 1977.

— Rewards totaling $6,000 to $12,000, depending on the offense, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the disappearance of Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, last seen Oct. 22 when he was checking on some property on Cedar Avenue. Secret Witness guarantees a $1,000 reward for a kidnaping conviction and $2,000 for a murder conviction. The victim's father, Dr. Allan Snider, has pledged $5,000 for a kidnaping conviction and $10,000 for a murder conviction.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Samuel Law, 23, formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrest, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a woman manager in another. Mack is a black man 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

SIGN OF TIMES greets visitors to Inverness in Marin County, which imposed strict water rationing. —AP Wirephoto

Golden State turns slow brown

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — On a hillside near the Pacific Ocean, sheep nuzzle the earth for a few dried blades of grass. A Bay Area hostess rents a portable toilet for a party, and a hotel on Catalina Island asks guests to bring their own linen

It's the drought, California-style — the effects of two years of unprecedented dry weather changing the life styles and landscapes of the nation's most populous state.

More than 100 cities and towns have been forced to impose mandatory water rationing, since rainfall for the 1976-77 rainy season dropped to about half of normal for the second year in a row.

Officials warn that many of the state's 1,000 reservoirs could dry up. On the caked bottom of a Marin County reservoir a bridge covered for years by stored water bakes in the summer sun.

The marks of the drought are not always apparent at first glance. In Marin County, which imposed strict water rationing in February, tenacious native plants and trees create a deceptive veil of green. But behind it are brown lawns and withered gardens.

The Nicasio Reservoir has dwindled to expose yards of cracked surface like a moonscape and the beds of small creeks and streams in the hills look like the bottoms of empty aquariums.

In Monterey, as in Marin County, San Francisco and Oakland and the surrounding area, officials report full public cooperation with mandatory water rationing. In some areas, officials said water consumption even has dropped below allotments.

Water rationing calling for a 10 per cent cut in use takes effect Friday in Los Angeles, where voluntary reductions didn't achieve the needed savings.

Beverly Hills, where water usually flows as freely as money, has hired a water cop to prowl the estate-lined streets and advise wasteful water users to mend their ways.

And in Hollywood, 20th Century-Fox said they carefully review any movie scenes requiring rain and are stressing shorter shampoos of the pampered hair of the stars.

Fresno in the San Joaquin Valley has set up a "snitch" line which people dial to report on wayward water users, and a local television station has started a "drip of the day" booby prize for water wasters complete with a rubber duck logo.

At Audrey Dodson's Mill Valley home, the sunburst locust out front bloomed this year, but the yellow clusters were tight and dull.

Mrs. Dodson and other customers of the Marin Municipal Water District can't spare much water for home landscaping because they are limited to 46 gallons per person per day. However, like many of her friends, Mrs. Dodson has kept her swimming pool full by buying water by the truckload.

She remembers the time when she wouldn't bother to turn off the faucet if she had to dash to answer the telephone.

"I won't do that ever again," she said. "It's surprising the things you become aware of, how to conserve."

The mountains guarding most of California's 1,072-mile Pacific Ocean coastline turn golden every year by the end of the summer. This year they turned to parchment by June.

For most people, the hardest part of rationing is changing their bathroom habits. It means no more long showers or luxurious bubble baths, shutting off water while brushing teeth and shaving

Tanker crowding fear discounted

Sohio, foes see little surplus

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

Predictions that the congestion of Alaskan oil tankers could make the Port of Long Beach look like a [illegible] Los Angeles International Airport are being discounted by some unlikely sources.

The forecast was made this week by Jim McJunkin, general manager of the Port of Long Beach, who told city officials that the anticipated flood of North Slope oil into West Coast ports later this year could jeopardize port safety.

McJunkin's comments came as he told the City Council time is running short for a decision on the proposed Sohio supertanker terminal to receive the Alaskan oil and ship it east through a 1,000-mile pipeline to Texas.

Unless the project is built, McJunkin claimed, "the port can expect a hazardous situation from the great number of oil tankers that can be expected to start jamming into Long Beach in August."

Opponents of the Sohio project — and even Sohio itself — say it isn't so. They discount the forecast as too much, too soon.

"This is just my prophesy at the moment," McJunkin said. "No, I haven't had any oil companies call me and say, 'We'll have 50 tankers in Long Beach in October.'"

They wouldn't call ahead, anyway.

"But the tankers will be anchoring inside the breakwater," he explained. "I'm saying this will be hazardous because of all that lightering traffic."

Lightering, he said, involves transferring some of a supertanker's cargo to smaller ships when the supertanker rides too deep to enter a port.

For example, a tanker drawing 65 feet would have to discharge more than 25 per cent of its cargo to float high enough to enter a port having a depth of only 45 feet.

"Consider the air pollution, too," McJunkin added. "Having to lighter those tankers will mean having to unload the same cargo twice — doubling the emissions.

"And the oil companies will use the larger tankers," McJunkin predicted. "More economical, and they'll come here rather than make the passage through the Panama Canal.

"Why? Because at the moment you can get the same price for that oil here as you could in the Gulf states. It makes sense to unload here.

"They'll want to anchor them in the harbor, and all that shuttling back and forth can't improve the safety situation."

He said he considers the potential hazards far more serious than those posed by a proper terminal with all its safeguards.

"It's imperative we develop the capacity to handle these tankers," he said, "because all that oil is coming. It can't be avoided."

Few others believe McJunkin's doomsday forecast.

There are only six berths on the West Coast that can accommodate the ships McJunkin has in mind. Three are in Long Beach — two operated by Texaco and one by Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) — while there is one each in Los Angeles, El Segundo and Cherry Point, Wash.

Sohio itself says McJunkin's presumed port congestion means more tankers would have to be arriving than could be unloaded.

"And that presumes the surplus — which is the whole reason we need to build the Long Beach terminal," said Bernerd Buttler, spokesman at Sohio headquarters in Cleveland.

"But there won't be a surplus this year," he said. "Initial output from the pipeline will be [illegible] barrels a day, and it will increase in the fall to [illegible] barrels.

"We already know the West Coast can absorb at least 600,000 barrels a day.

"It's not until December that the (Alaskan) pipeline will be approaching capacity — 1.2 million barrels a day," Buttler said. "So that surplus, if it ever materializes, is a long way off.

"And when there is one, there are still two ways to go," he went on. "Either take it through the Panama Canal to the East, which we've already said we'll do, or find some way to swap it with Japan.

"You have to understand," he emphasized, "that this Alaskan oil will 'backout' — replace — foreign oil now coming into California and Washington.

"So it's not that Alaskan oil comes in in addition to foreign oil; it arrives instead of the foreign product."

A spokesman for ARCO in Los Angeles agreed.

"There's only one thing to do with the oil," he said. "Sell it.

"We'll sell to whomever is buying — and the East is buying. Yes, we'll try to land as much on the West Coast as possible, but after that it goes East.

"The point is: We're going to move that oil."

Robert Kilpatrick, a young Long Beach attorney leading the fight against construction of the Sohio terminal, says he would agree with Buttler — to a point.

"Look," he said, "they want to sell that oil. If Sohio or anyone else can't get it off the ship in Long Beach, they'll take it through the canal and sell it east.

"Ships aren't going to stack up in Long Beach," Kilpatrick said.

"But as to this 'backout' argument. I don't believe it. Sohio doesn't have any contracts to sell that Alaskan oil in Southern California. The foreign sources do.

"So it's my guess that all of Sohio's oil will probably go through the canal — if Sohio doesn't first stampede Congress into approving sales or swaps with Japan."

Several government agencies will be involved in the landing of Alaskan oil in Long Beach, but to date they are noncommittal.

The State Air Resources Board says it won't be involved in this particular question of Alaskan oil because the issue involves existing facilities.

"It would be different if someone wanted to build a new facility or terminal," said Jean Cone, ARB spokeswoman.

"But because the terminals are already in place, it's a local air quality problem — if it's one at all."

The Coast Guard in Long Beach acknowledges it would have jurisdiction over this tanker traffic and density in the port, but spokesmen decline comment on specifics.

"We're making a study of this potential port problem," one Coast Guard spokesman said. "We'll know more later.

"Right now, we're involved with tanker traffic patterns through the Santa Barbara Channel."

McJunkin remains adamant.

"When it finally gets here," he insists, "I don't want people saying, 'Why didn't you tell us?'"

However, the tank farm would be adjacent to a proposed $62-million bulk-petroleum storage facility that would have a storage capacity of 8.6 million barrels.

That proposal, by Paktank Pacific Co., is being revived, according to Allen Goodley, chief of the engineering branch of the ARB in Sacramento. He said representatives of Paktank recently discussed the possibility of air quality tradeoffs for their project.

Last week Exxon Pipeline Co. withdrew financial support for the Sohio pipeline to carry Alaskan crude oil from Long Beach to Texas. The company cited as its reason "unreasonable permit requirements" being imposed by state air quality authorities.

Sohio is still proceeding with its $60-million terminal and pipeline. The State Coastal Commission has said it will review the project this summer.

IN December 1975, Long Beach Harbor was selected over Los Angeles Harbor by Sohio as its preferred site for the terminal that could handle 600,000 barrels of oil a day with storage for 3.7 million barrels at the harbor and additional inland storage capacity.

Goodley said the air quality effects from all petroleum-related facilities in the harbor area are being analyzed by his agency. Although he initially was unaware of the Western proposal, after checking he determined that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had been approached by Western last year but the project then went into the EPA inactive file.

Under the lease option agreement between Western and Los Angeles Harbor, Western pays $6,000 per month to the city to hold 55 acres for two years with the possibility of a one-year extension.

The low-sulphur facility located at the former Westoil refinery near Gaffey Street and the Harbor Freeway in San Pedro will be able to process 100,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

The current plans call for tankers to unload the oil at Berths 45-47, pumping the oil through an existing Mobil pipleine to Terminal Island and the tank farm site, south of Seaside Avenue and east of Ferry Street.

Western's parent company, Coastal States, owns refineries and is involved in natural gas transmission and distribution and the manufacturing of nitrogen chemicals. It employs nearly 5,000 workers and had a net profit in 1975 of $54 million on sales of $1.8 billion.

Carter doubts Russ thaw

By David Binder
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter doubts there will be a positive trend in the evolution of U.S.-Soviet relations in the coming months, a close White House aide said Saturday after the President had met for 75 minutes with his top foreign policy advisers.

The aide said Carter's doubts were based on his belief that the Soviet leadership needed time to adjust to his foreign policy initiatives and that Moscow was also preoccupied with serious domestic problems, principally involving economic shortcomings.

Over a longer period, the aide continued, Carter is convinced that the Soviet Union and the United States will find fruitful areas for cooperation.

Carter conferred on a wide range of foreign policy issues over breakfast with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Vice President Mondale and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's adviser on national security.

The discussion centered on Vance's report on President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's impressions of Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, who visited France for three days last week.

Other topics reviewed at the meeting were human rights issues, the Middle East conflict and relations between the industrialized nations and developing countries.

Rex Granum, deputy White House spokesman, said later that Carter intended the meeting to be the first of regular weekly reviews of international developments by the President and his advisers.

PRESIDENT CARTER'S short-term view of relations with the Soviet Union was conveyed in remarks made public Saturday by the White House following his meeting Friday afternoon with a group of American news editors.

Carter said his dispute with the Soviet leadership on human rights and other issues "has provided a greater obstacle to other friendly pursuits," as in the SALT, or strategic arms limitations talks, than he had expected.

He added, in regard to his attempt to curb and if possible to reduce the size and number of strategic weapons between the two major powers: "We have not achieved success yet in any of these efforts, and may not. I can't guarantee success."

The President told the editors that he believed some of the international questions were "going to take more time to resolve, if they are solved, than I had previously thought."

"There has been a surprising adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights," he added. "We have never singled them out. I think I have been quite reticent in trying to publicly condemn the Soviets. I have never said anything except complimentary things about Mr. Brezhnev, for instance. But apparently that has provided a greater obstacle to other friendly pursuits, common goals, like in SALT, than I had anticipated."

A Presidential aide, interpreting these remarks, said that the Carter administration had concluded that the Soviet leadership was going through a somewhat painful readjustment of perception of relations between the two countries.

THE ASSISTANT added that Carter had also concluded the readjustment was inevitable — that the Soviet Union had viewed the United States under the Ford and Nixon administrations, however skillful, as running a kind of defensive, rearguard foreign policy of retreat.

The Soviet leadership was therefore caught unawares, the aide continued, by Carter's challenges on human rights issues, his demands to curb arms sales, complete a total ban of nuclear tests, and demilitarize the Indian Ocean. These were all areas where the Soviet Union had felt secure and, in some, they felt they enjoyed a propaganda edge.

Carter and his advisers feel the Soviet leaders have been dismayed by the thought that their concept of the decline of the West might no longer be valid, the residential aide said.

This, together with Carter's belief that the Communist system is slow to shift perceptions also explains the President's suggestion that negotiations with the Soviet Union might take longer than he had expected, the aide went on.

The aide said Carter was well aware of the bumpy relationship pertaining between Moscow and Washington and said it would probably continue for some months.

What's Your Problem?

Home-owning, although gratifying, not for everyone to try

By Don. G. Campbell

What could be more satisfying than a comfortable house (which needs painting from time to time, and a host of other things), surrounded by a lush lawn (it needs mowing) and a picket fence (from which the slates occasionally fall)?

Well, a lot of people don't find it all that "satisfying." Home ownership, like eggplant, isn't for everybody.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: My wife and I are both retired and have a combined income of some $11,000 per year, all tax-free. In addition, we have approximately $11,000 in a credit union which pays us an additional $650-$700 a year.

Our home, valued at $45,000 is encumbered with a mortgage of $10,000 with payments of $158 per month. We are considering selling our home, investing the equity of some $30,000 in good tax-free bonds, and moving into an apartment on which the rent would be about $250 per month.

We are both near 70 and would appreciate your views. — T.N.B., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. You seem to be pretty dry-eyed about the prospects of giving up the old home so I suspect that your motives for selling it and moving into an apartment aren't entirely financial.

Actually, from a purely financial standpoint, you aren't going to end up impressively ahead. Most tax-free bonds are now yielding about 5½ per cent, so your $30,000 equity will bring you in about $1,650 a year.

Off-setting this to a large degree, of course, is the monthly difference that you will be paying between your present mortgage payments ($158 a month) and your anticipated higher rent ($250). This amounts to $1,104 a year, or a net gain of only $546 a year.

But, as a rationale — at your age — for getting rid of a house and going in for apartment living, I can't fault you.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: We contemplate the purchase of either a mobile home or a conventional house and lot. One can anticipate a profit on the resale of a conventional home. However, on the resale of a mobile home, it seems that they usually sell for less than when new. Can you give any facts or figures or percentages? — L.A.T. Oakland

A. It's an interesting question, and I put it to some friends who have been active in the financing (and resale) of mobile homes. The answer, it seems, is maybe yes, maybe no.

While the one-family residence has been appreciating in value nationally at the compounded rate of about 8 per cent a year, the appreciation (or depreciation) is more variable with mobile homes.

I am told that if the mobile home is a good, sound one, well maintained and in a pleasant location (also well maintained) there is no reason why it shouldn't appreciate in value at a rate comparable to the appreciation of a conventional home.

In other words, exactly the same factors that influence the resale price of a conventional home also influence the resale value of a mobile home. Sorry I couldn't come up with something a little more dramatic.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: The small apartment complex where I live recently changed hands and the new owner — who is very nosey and unpleasant — and I don't get along at all. I'd like to move, but have several more months to go on my lease.

Doesn't the change of ownership mean that my lease is automatically canceled? — W.G.F., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. I think you'd have a rough time in court trying to make a valid case for this interpretation. Unless otherwise specified in your lease, it was a part of the deal.

However, you might check with a lawyer on this since state laws will vary broadly on the subject.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I've just sold my home which had a swimming pool and a wet bar at poolside. The buyer is very angry because I removed the bar because I didn't consider it a part of the house, but a portable piece of furniture. Who's right here? He's being very insistent. — W.F.L. San Diego

A. Unless it's specifically excluded in the description of the property being offered for sale, anything attached to the house is a part of the house and included. The fact that this is a WET bar — with all of the plumbing that this suggests — makes it a part of the house sale in my book.

TWO GENERATIONS of the Warmington family were present at the grand opening of Hunters Pointe, the Robert P. Warmington residential development in Anaheim Hills. Host to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Warmington, was builder Robert P. Warmington. The family has built homes in Southern California for 50 years.

Hunters Pointe Grand Opening

Two generations of the Warmington family were on hand Thursday for the Grand Opening celebration at Hunters Pointe, a new Robert P. Warmington Co. residential community in Anaheim Hills.

Robert P. Warmington was host to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Warmington as well as to hundreds of community, civic and building industry leaders at a traditional English lawn party. Guests enjoyed a lavish buffet and the music of a string quartet.

The Warmington family has been building homes for Southern California families since 1926. Robert P. Warmington carries on the family tradition in his own company, a tradition of craftsmanship and caring.

Priced from $130,000 to $190,000, the homes at Hunters Pointe have the traditional look of yesterday. Styled in the French, English, Colonial and Early California traditions, the homes are a return to the look and quality construction of yesterday, employing today's modern technology.

THESE ONE and two story, three to five bedroom homes offer 2,000 to 3,206 square feet of living area. The homes at Hunters Pointe are distinguished by use of wooden banisters and spindle railings, oak cabinetry, wood framed windows and shutters.

The gracious homes feature wood-burning fireplaces, wall-to-wall plush carpeting throughout, wet bars, central air conditioning. Kitchens feature a full complement of RCA Whirlpool appliances.

The models were decorated by Mel Grau Designs of Newport Beach.

The first phase of these luxurious executive homes has been sold out. Information on the second and third phases is available at the sales office. The sales center is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

For information call (714) 998-4071.

Appraiser speaks

Gordan Kohlmeyer of the Los Angeles County assessor's office will be the guest speaker at the North Long Beach Real Estate Club's breakfast meeting on Thursday, 7:30 a.m., in the Park Pantry, 17511 Susana Rd.

Kohlmeyer of the principal appraiser for the Long Beach area.

Landlord/tenant law discussion Monday

"Landlord/Tenant Laws and The Courts" will be the topic of the June installation meeting of the Apartment Association of Orange County, Monday at the Quality Inn in Anaheim at 8 p.m.

Moderated by David Cossaboom, lawyer and legal consultant for the Apartment Association of Orange County, a panel of judges from the Orange County Municipal Courts will discuss landlord/tenant procedures as they apply to cases scheduled for the Orange County Courts. Speakers will include Judge John Wyatt and Judge Phillip McGraw.

The meeting also will include the installation of new officers who will be serving the association throughout the coming year.

Models ready in December

Forty-seven homes are now in the final stages of design to be built in Northwood, City of Irvine. This subdivision will be called "Crestwood Estates" according to Bob Gibbs, president of Patrician-Carlton Development Co. Three models ranging from 1,800 to 2,800 square feet in size will be ready for viewing in early December.

Gibbs said that Red Moltz and Associates are designing the plans for the project.

HEW to list doctors' pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A revised list of doctors doing $100,000 or more in Medicare business a year will include 214 who asked that their names be omitted, says Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano Jr.

"We will not let a doctor decide if he wants to be listed," Califano told a news briefing.

"The taxpayers of this country have a right to know who is getting federal money and how much he is receiving," be said. "We can't have a secret government payment system for doctors and hospitals when we don't have that for anyone else."

Califano said the listing did not invade doctors' privacy because of the public money involved.

The question of whether to list protesting doctors has slowed attempts to correct an error-riddled list published in March which named 409 solo practitioners, 1,752 group practices and 58 laboratories.

Asking not to be included on the new list are 214 of 469 physicians who complained of errors concerning their 1975 earnings from Medicare, the federal health assistance program for the elderly.

"I have been told that about half of the complaining doctors don't want to be listed and won't supply any other information," Califano said.

Without added information from the doctors, it may not be possible to correct all the errors.

But Califano said the physicians would be listed anyway, with a notation of the complaint and whether he or she declined to give further information.

Califano, who has apologized to physicians and the American Medical Association for the previous errors, said the new list should be out in a few weeks.

In other matters, Califano said he did not know if the Supreme Court ruling last Monday on abortion would eventually increase welfare rolls. The high court said states could refuse to pay for abortions unrelated to medical necessities with public funds.

He re-stated the Carter administration's opposition to using federal money for abortion unless the life of the mother is threatened.

Califano said there were many alternatives to abortion, such as sex education and trying to get at the roots of the teen-age pregnancy problem.

4th drowning victim found

LOS BANOS (AP) — Fishermen recovered the body of a young girl Saturday in San Luis Reservoir, apparently the last of four members of the same family who drowned when a boat capsized two weeks earlier.

Authorities said they were awaiting positive identification on whether the body was that of Jennifer Hanly, 2.

LBJ skin cancer reported; denied by widow, doctor

By Lawrence Altman
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The Reader's Digest reported Saturday that Lyndon B. Johnson had a secret operation for skin cancer when he was president, but his widow and physician cast doubt on the story.

The report in the July issue was based on an interview with Dr. Edmund Klein, a dermatologist and cancer researcher in Buffalo, who said, "It's been a closely held secret until now, but I can tell you authoritatively that President Lyndon B. Johnson had skin cancer."

Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson, responding to questions about the article, said she had no knowledge that skin cancer had ever been diagnosed in her husband.

Adm. George G. Burkley, physician to Johnson at the White House, said in an interview that small spots that resulted from chronic sun exposure and callus-like growths had been removed several times from the back of Johnson's hands.

Burkley, in California, said he did not have immediate access to his medical records on Johnson. But he said, "I don't remember that any of the lesions ever were diagnosed as a true skin cancer."

Klein said he was called by the White House as a consultant in the mid-1960s by Johnson's personal physician.

"I was informed in the utmost secrecy that the president had a moderately severe case of skin cancer and was asked for my opinion on how to treat it," he said in the article. He added:

"Since the president's advisers were afraid that any mention of the word 'cancer' in connection with the president of the United States might have a devastating impact, the operation was performed secretly in Washington — with satisfactory results."

Skin cancer is the most common form of cancer and generally the most easily cured. The overwhelming majority of the 300,000 new skin cancers diagnosed each year do not spread or cause fatal damage if treated early and properly.

Klein said in an interview that the diagnosis of cancer — even though a skin cancer — in a president would have led the public to have put far greater significance on the word "cancer" than was medically warranted.

Mrs. Johnson said in her statement:

"As far as I know, the spots on Lyndon's hands were never diagnosed as cancer, but their removal from time to time was a preventive measure. Sun spots are a common ailment in this part of the country where people live outdoors and in the sun as Lyndon did."

Deuk scores with crime bills

By Bob Houser
Political Editor

State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, has won one-sided Senate victories for three anti-crime bills which now go to the Assembly.

The measures would end the probation subsidy program, crack down on habitual criminals and provide for court-controlled electronic eavesdropping to combat organized crime and narcotics trafficking.

Deukmejian said the subsidy program, after 10 years' operation at a cost of $161 million, is a dismal failure. It rewarded communities for keeping convicted felons from returning to prison.

His bill would replace it with crime and delinquency prevention programs, putting more than $20 million into the "front end of the criminal justice system to help youthful offenders."

The second Deukmejian bill is a $1.5-million program aimed at "eliminating the manipulation of the criminal justice system by 'career criminals'."

The money would fund "career criminal units" in each district attorney's office in the state, "enabling each office to assign its best deputies to handle criminals who cause the most crime." The same deputy could handle a case from start to finish.

The bill also would prohibit plea bargaining on the most serious charge in each case, recognize the people's right to a speedy trial by barring the defendant from waiving his right to a speedy trial, and identify a career criminal as one who has committed one of the most serious felonies or two lesser felonies within the previous 10 years.

Both these bills were passed 32-0.

The vote was 21-10 on the eavesdropping measure.

Deukmejian said it provides careful protection against abuse by limiting court-ordered wiretaps to 10 days, requiring additional court action if they are to be continued.

The bill requires annual reporting on the number of wiretaps, why they were used and what effect they had on prosecutions.

The Senate earlier passed another Deukmejian bill providing that a witness may be compelled to testify through the granting of immunity from prosecution. However, the witness may still be prosecuted for any crime he may have committed if the prosecutor has evidence independent of the compelled testimony.

HOWE APPOINTED

Bettye M. Howe of Compton, a graduate of Long Beach State University, has been appointed by Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, to the State Advisory Health Council.

Ms. Howe, office manager for a Los Angeles physician, is a Compton planning commissioner and a former medical ward clerk of the University of Maryland department of psychiatry.

Boy, 7, drowned hunting pollywogs

SAN LUIS OBISPO (AP) — A 7-year-old boy drowned Friday night in a creek while catching pollywogs, authorities said Saturday.

Herbert Lee Carson was reported missing by his mother, Marilyn Carson, who was visiting friends at a nearby ranch. A three-hour search by the mother failed to locate the missing boy, and the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department was contacted. The body was found by divers in about 10 feet of water.

Postal job abuses to be curbed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is trying to catch employes at its Washington headquarters who take too much time away from the office.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has ordered that employes fill out cards whenever they enter or leave the modern 10-floor building on Washington's L'Enfant Plaza.

Bailar announced the step in a circular to headquarters employes that made clear the purpose of the program was to find those who are spending too much time during the working day outside the building.

"The action is necessary because of the continued unauthorized late arrival and early departure by some postal employes, as well as extended periods of absence from work locations during the day," Bailar said.

AS PART of the procedure, two of the three ground-floor entrances to the building have been blocked off. A checkpoint has been established at the third and employes must fill out a card when they want to leave the building or get back in.

Bailar's announcement said, "A periodic analysis of sign in, sign-out cards will be provided to each department. Managers should apply existing rules governing the assessment of charges to accrued leave when appropriate, or initiate formal action to correct any continuing abuses."

The issue of morale among postal service workers is one of the subjects expected to be dealt with at House hearings beginning next month on legislation to restructure the Postal Service.

ONE OF the sponsors of that bill, Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., said in a recent floor speech, "The need for such legislation has been underscored by several actions which have further heightened the degree of alienation between top postal management and the rest of the service's employes."

Wilson, chairman of a House Post Office subcommittee, said there is "a severe morale problem among those dedicated people who really make the Postal Service run."

Wilson criticized a program of sending out press releases telling the salaries of postmasters, calling this "a vindictive new program aimed at postmasters who have made critical comments about top management."

The Postal Service also has been involved for several years in controversies with its unions over involuntary transfers of employes. Bailar has said the transfers have made possible substantial savings for the financially pinched agency.

Reporters find other area law agencies 'open'

I,P-T survey rates news policies

A survey by I,P-T staff members reveals that 13 law enforcement agencies in areas surrounding Long Beach have news media policies less restrictive than the new Long Beach Police Department policy.

The agencies and their media policies as determined by the survey include:

—Los Angeles Police Department: The policy as stated by public information officer Lt. Dan Cook stresses "full cooperation with the news media." Crime and arrest reports, aside from those regarded as of security-sensitive nature, are available to accredited media representatives. Watch commanders, duty officers, and officers in the field are authorized to give information to the media without clearance by superior officers. Veteran police reporters stationed at Parker Center reported the cooperation is good, and they experience no trouble in obtaining prompt information.

—Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department: Deputy Anthony Silas of the Sheriff's Information Bureau quoted basic policy as "every sworn member of the Sheriff's Department has been directed to cooperate fully with representatives of the media." Police reports and arrest reports are available to accredited news representatives. I, P-T reporter Hal Lowe, covering the Lakewood, Norwalk, Carson, Downey and Lynwood stations, termed the cooperation "excellent, above and beyond the call of duty."

—Signal Hill Police Department: Chief Richard Denham expressed his policy as "absolute, unreserved and unqualified cooperation with any accredited media representatives," and says all crime reports, arrest reports, and any related paperwork are available to the media at any time. Denham said all Signal Hill officers have been instructed to follow this policy and provide any information, written or verbal, without necessity of checking with superiors. I.P-T reporters dealing with the Signal Hill department verified that the cooperation is as good in practice as it is in theory.

—Seal Beach Police Department: Capt. Sam D'Amico, queried in the absence of Chief Edward Cibbarelli, said the department's basic policy is contained in a general order signed by the chief which states general information may be given by any duty officer or officer in the field without clearance. Specific information involving major crimes or cases under investigation are handled by an officer of command rank. Crime and arrest reports are available to the media for cursory use, and a media log of activity over each 24-hour shift is kept at the station for telephone relay to five print and broadcast representatives who contact the department on a daily basis. Media representatives covering the Seal Beach department called the cooperation good.

—Torrance Police Department Lt. James Papst, speaking in the absence on vacation of Chief Donald Nash, said the basic departmental policy is contained in a general order which states watch commanders or their designates are responsible for release of news to the media. Police reports and arrest reports are available to accredited media representatives, and the station maintains a "press board" at the information desk with rundowns on cases and incidents believed newsworthy. Ranking field officers are authorized to give information without clearance. News media representatives covering this department rated the cooperation as good.

—Compton Police Department: In this relatively small department, most media relations are handled personally by Chief Joseph T. Rouzan, or by officers he designates in his absence. Police and arrest reports are not routinely available from station personnel but are not flatly denied on authorization from Rouzan. Cooperation in this department was termed by news representatives as the worst of the 13 agencies listed in the survey, but better than Long Beach under the new policy.

'Press have no access to any police reports'

The May 20 administrative directive signed by acting police chief Carl Calkins reads in full:

> "In keeping with the basic concept that the public has the right to know, the Long Beach Police Department seeks to establish a cooperative climate in which the media may obtain information in a manner which does not hamper police operations. However, certain information must be withheld in order to protect individuals' right to privacy, to avoid interference with investigative operations or because it is legally privileged.
> "The following News Media Policy adheres to the April 1977 City Attorney's opinion relative to media relations.
> "The Public Information Officer(s) will be assigned to the Public Affairs Section. The objective of media liaison is to establish an accurate, concise, and objective method of disseminating information.
> "The following policy guidelines are in effect regarding personnel releasing information to the media:
> "Members of the media will not have access to any police reports.
> "Members of the media will only have access to the departmental 24-hour crime synopsis sheets.
> "Members of the media requiring more detailed information regarding a crime or incident will contact the assigned investigator.
> "Personal information regarding juveniles involved in criminal acts will not be released. Release of general information regarding the crime, arrest, and/or prosecution is permissible.
> "Personnel at the scene of an incident will refer the media to the Press Information Officer (P.I.O.). In the absence of a P.I.O., the Senior Investigator present will act as media liaison. The Senior Investigator may delegate media liaison to the senior ranking member of the Field Operations Bureau. In the absence of a P.I.O. or Investigator, the senior ranking member of the Field Operations Bureau will assume responsibility for media releases.
> "Media personnel requesting information on access to the scene of an incident will be required to display press passes authorized by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, Los Angeles Police Department, or Orange County Sheriff's Department.
> "Section 409.D of the California Penal Code allows duly authorized members of the press access to areas closed to the general public. The areas include those closed due to riot, fire, flood, earthquake, or other disasters. This section does not entitle the press access to areas closed off for criminal investigation.
> "Departmental personnel should use the following criteria when releasing information to the media:
> "A. Consider if disclosure of information such as name, address, etc., would jeopardize the safety of the victim, witness, or suspect.
> "B. Consider if disclosure of information would hinder the investigation, apprehension, or prosecution of the suspect.
> "C. Personnel releasing departmental information verbally or in writing will file a memorandum to his Commanding Officer prior to completion of his tour of duty, with a copy incorporating the subject matter to the Commanding Officer Public Affairs Section. This is not to be construed as an act of censorship, but rather as a method to relay the information in order that appropriate responses can be made when necessary."

A memorandum issued by the acting chief June 15 modified the directive to make some crime reports available for review by authorized media personnel, but these do not include homicides, suicides, discharge of firearms by police officers, dead bodies, arrest reports, follow-up reports, or reports of stolen/recovered vehicles.

Despite this modification, the memorandum concluded:

> "It should be noted that Administrative Directive AD 10-77 (May 20) remains in effect."

The June 15 memorandum signed by the acting chief reads:

> "Effective immediately all crime reports, excluding homicides, suicides, dead bodies, or discharge of firearms by police officers, will be made available for review by authorized media personnel. Also excluded are arrest reports, stolen/recovered vehicle reports, and follow-up reports.
> "Crime report information authorized for news media review will be at the desk of the Report Review Sergeant, located in the Main Station Lobby. The Report Review Sergeant, or Business Desk personnel, will maintain security on the clipboard file and the duplication or removal of copies will not be permitted. The media will not have access to the Departmental Watch Report or any other police reports or files, other than the aforementioned crime reports.
> "Maintenance of the clipboard file will be the responsibility of the Records Division and will encompass an approximate 48-hour period. This procedure will alleviate Watch Commanders from the responsibility of having to release information on the aforementioned reports.
> "It should be noted that Administrative Directive AD-10/77 remains in effect."

Calkins clamps news blackout

"But not what the police have to do?" the reporter asked.

"Our job isn't making news," Calkins responded.

The chief also declined to accept the statement that under state law the burden is on a public agency to demonstrate a need for confidentiality and nondisclosure in a given case. He said he believed a police chief could rule that "there will be no information on crime given to any members of the media" except through court records.

The acting chief said he had not known of Chief Mooney's news media policy. He said he thought the department had no formal policy at all.

"Things were loosely run," Calkins declared. "We've managed to improve the operation of the department in the last year. The morale is up. Our crime rate for the first six months of this year is down over 10 per cent compared to the first six months of last year. I'm a stricter administrator than maybe the prior administrators have been.

"I speak in a different language, apparently, than the media — and I am different. I'm different than Mooney, and I'm different than Kortz."

The "right to privacy" issue cited in the Calkins directive was treated in a California Supreme Court case last year in which the court held that the right "does not prevail over the right of the public to an honest and impartial government."

In Loder vs. San Diego Judicial District, the court ruled: "A suspect's constitutional right of privacy is not violated by prompt and accurate public reporting of the facts and circumstances of his arrest."

Calkins' new policy changes a long tradition of open access to police reports in Long Beach and a longtime understanding between press and police which meant that some information was disclosed to reporters but not printed. Names of crime victims or witnesses were not used if they could be in jeopardy, and stories were not printed which would jeopardize an investigation, a search or an arrest.

The clearest explanation of that working relationship in recent years came in 1972 from then Chief Mooney. In an April 27 memorandum to the department, he wrote:

"Press relations are important to each and every one of us as law enforcement officers. . . . Members of the press operating in the city of Long Beach can be identified by a press pass issued by the sheriff of Los Angeles County. . . . Members of the press approaching any officer and asking direction or assistance should be helped in any way possible, as the news media are certainly an asset to law enforcement and have a powerful influence in creating a good image between the police and the public we serve."

Inmates sack N.M. prison

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Much of a New Mexico state prison maximum-security cell block was in ruins Saturday after an inmate riot which erupted when an apparent escape attempt was thwarted.

Warden C.J. Malley said a squad of specially trained and equipped guards quickly restored order. No injuries were reported.

"Porcelain commodes were ripped off the walls and broken to pieces, beds were taken apart where they could be used as weapons, and (rioters) stopped up the commodes and caused three inches of flooding," Malley said.

Prison guard Larry Mendoza was making a routine patrol through Cell Block 3, a segregation unit, about 10:30 p.m. Friday when he was grabbed by inmate Manuel Maldonado, 21.

Border Patrol tracks flying drug suspects

HANFORD (AP) — With border patrolmen keeping track of the suspects from an airplane, authorities captured two men early Saturday for investigation of smuggling $750,000 worth of marijuana.

Border Patrol agents in the observer plane had followed the suspects' airplane from Mexico to a landing strip in Kings County. They notified the California Highway Patrol and sheriff's offices in Kings and Kern counties that two cars were leaving the area.

The ground chase took officers over rural, unpaved roads looking for cars running without lights in the early morning darkness. The Border Patrol agents kept watch from the air and alerted the ground crews whenever they saw one of the suspect vehicles.

Finally, Darrell Lee Tarkington, 35, of Hanford, was arrested at an intersection near Wasco in Kern County. And Richard Ellis, 47, of Lemoore, was captured in Kings County. Officers said they confiscated about 2,400 pounds of marijuana.

150 Tijuana police dismissed for abuses

TIJUANA (AP) — More than 150 police officers here have been dismissed in recent months for allegedly assaulting, robbing and extorting bribes from Mexicans as they crossed illegally into the United States.

The latest firings occurred Friday after a group of officers and Mayor Fernando Marquez Arce, all masquerading as persons about to cross the border illegally, arrested two other officers.

The 150 dismissals are part of a campaign by Police Chief Antonio Escobedo to rid his force of corruption.

More than 320 officers, including the 150 suspected of the attacks on border crossers, have been fired since Escobedo took office 18 months ago.

Officials said veteran police officers, including Subcommander Martin Esquibel, have been dismissed in the past 10 days.

Esquibel, appointed as Escobedo's second in command about 18 months ago, was asked to submit his resignation after Escobedo held him responsible for failing to stop officers under his command from assaulting the border crossers.

Lynwood woman and son found strangled

A 23-year-old woman and her 8-year-old son were found strangled in their Lynwood apartment early Saturday, Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said the bodies of Linda Brown and her son, Johnny Cannon, were found at 12:10 a.m. at 3141 Euclid Ave. by relatives.

No one was in custody in the case, but deputies were trying to locate the woman's husband for questioning.

There was no apparent motive for the killings. The bodies were fully clothed, deputies said. It was not known whether the apartment had been ransacked.

Bicentennials—'plural, please'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration is going out of business this week with the request that the 1987 bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution not be neglected.

Because the government agency which orchestrated the 200th Independence Day festivities last year closes its doors Thursday, there will be no national coordination or promotion of the bicentennial dates of the many important events in the nation's early years.

The 200th anniversary of the United States flag already has passed this month virtually unnoticed. Coming up later this year with local preparations at best are the bicentennials of George Washington's encampment at Valley Forge, the arrival of Lafayette and the battle of Saratoga, which were among the most important events of the Revolution.

Later are the bicentennials of the exploits of John Paul Jones and Molly Pitcher, the perfidy of Benedict Arnold, the diplomacy of Benjamin Franklin, the victory of the backwoods patriots at Kings Mountain and the final victory at Yorktown, to name just a few.

In her farewell letter to President Carter, acting ARBA Administrator Jean McKee urges that he appoint a task force to begin studying a proper commemoration for the Constitution, hinting that it fits Carter's oft-expressed concern for citizen participation.

"It surely follows that a better knowledge and understanding of this document of democracy is an integral part of encouraging citizen participation, from voting on election days to influencing day-to-day decisions at all levels of government," Miss McKee wrote.

THE SAME recommendation will be made in the final report of the American Revolution Bicentennial Board, which oversees the ARBA.

A draft of the board's final report says the ARBA did a good job of drawing attention to the Declaration of Independence and its bicentennial last July 4 but said that isn't enough.

"That great document represents the beginning, not the end, of the creative process which brought into being the United States of America," says the draft report.

Referring to the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, the report says: "It would seem appropriate as we approach the 200th anniversary of these basic documents that the years 1987-89 provide an opportunity for a focus of attention on and an appraisal of the great principles embodied in them which have supported our form of government and democratic way of life through two centuries."

The Constitution was drafted in the summer of 1787 in Philadelphia in the same room where the Declaration of Independence had been produced.

It was ratified by most of the states over the next two years and became effective in the spring of 1789, with George Washington as the first president under the Constitution.

The Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments, was added in 1791.

Commemoration of these documents on their bicentennials would still leave out the last five years of the Revolution, which made all the rest possible. By comparison, the Civil War Centennial a decade ago celebrated every battle and skirmish from Ft. Sumter to Appomattox over a five-year span, compared to the 16 months given the Revolution's Bicentennial.

Other area law agencies 'open to reporters'

—Garden Grove Police Department: Chief Francis R. Kessler said his department has a directive ordering "an open policy of full cooperation with the media, respecting all rights of print and broadcast media representatives." Kessler said the department goes further when possible by initiating press contacts on newsworthy cases. Crime and arrest reports are available to accredited media representatives, and all sworn personnel directed to cooperate. Newsmen called the cooperation adequate to good.

—Fullerton Police Department: Chief Wayne H. Bornhoft said the basic departmental policy is "prompt and courteous cooperation with the media, with the reporting officer using his or her own discretion on aspects to be withheld if the safety of victims or witnesses is threatened. Crime and arrest reports are available to the media, and there are no directives requiring personnel to clear general information with superiors. Working newsmen said the cooperation ranges "from adequate to very good."

—Newport Beach Police Department: Lt. Arb Campbell, speaking in the absence of Chief B. J. Glavas, said the basic departmental policy is contained in a general order calling for cooperation with the media. Station commanders, duty officers, and personnel in the field are authorized to give general information to accredited media representatives without necessity of clearance. Crime and arrest reports are available to media representatives. Press contacts rated the cooperation in practice as about the same as in Fullerton and Garden Grove.

—Huntington Beach Police Department: Chief Earl Robitaille said a general order directs all officers under his command to supply information promptly and courteously to accredited media representatives. Crime and arrest reports are available to media representatives, and a press log containing summaries of newsworthy cases and events is maintained. Station officers and officers in the field are authorized to give general information to the media without necessity of clearance. News representatives contacting this station rated the cooperation as good.

—Santa Ana Police Department: Lt. Ted Weatherly, speaking in absence of Chief Raymond C. Davis, said the department has "a basic policy of completely open relations with the media. All sworn members are directed to follow this policy." Further, he added, officers are furnished press release forms and asked to fill them out in cases involving major crimes as well as human interest stories so they can be turned over to media representatives. Weatherly said the department makes sure that media representatives get copies of supplemental and follow-up reports in major cases. Long Beach and Santa Ana newsmen contacting this department agreed that the cooperation is good.

—Anaheim Police Department: Chief Harold Bastrup summarized his basic media policy as "close cooperation, extending all the help possible." Files of crime and arrest reports are maintained exclusively for accredited media representatives, and newspeople are welcome to use the watch commander's report file if someone else is busy with the pressroom files. Duty officers and officers in the field are authorized to give any desired information to the media. Bastrup added: "We are proud to say we have excellent working relationships with the media. We've never had problems of any kind." Orange County and Long Beach news representatives verified Bastrup's latter statement.

—Orange County Sheriff's Office: A deputy who desired to remain anonymous, after efforts failed to reach Sheriff Brad Gates or designated policy spokesmen, summed up the basic policy as "cooperation qualified by circumstances." He said crime and arrest reports are available to accredited members of the media, and duty officers and officers in the field are authorized to give information to accredited representatives of the media. Long Beach and Orange County news representatives customarily dealing with this department agreed that the cooperation extended in practice "is at least as good and more often better" than the policy voiced by the deputy.

Car thief unloads sleepy passenger

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Nearly six hours after a young man stole a car at a hamburger stand and sped away with an 8-month-old baby asleep in her toddler's seat, the infant was found alive and well, abandoned outside an apartment house Saturday morning.

"When someone steals a car, the only thing he is looking at is the ignition. He could have been completely unaware of the baby beside him," a police spokesman said. "He did leave the baby off as soon as possible."

Sgt. Dennis Davis said a tenant in the apartment building notified police after becoming suspicious because a baby had been crying most of the night.

Kristina Marie Seidell, hungry and wet, was already in the arms of the tenant when officers arrived, Davis said.

"It was plenty warm outside and the baby was just fine," he said.

A short time later, police found the car abandoned nearby.

The baby had been taken along with her mother's [illegible] Friday night when a young man stole the car, which had been left unattended for a few minutes, Davis said. As the car sped off, the baby's mother, [illegible] Seidell, threw herself at the door trying to rescue her child.

Police said that Mrs. Seidell had left the baby asleep in a toddler's seat and the keys in the ignition [illegible] up a food order.

Croat bombing sifted

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Investigators sifting through rubble at the suburban home of the president of the Croatian Fraternal Union found fuse-like parts Saturday that may have been part of a detonator.

Stephen Abbate, an agent of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said two explosions Friday night heavily damaged the split-level Penn Hills home of John Badovinac, 69.

He said Badovinac and his wife, Catherine, were en route to St. Louis for a Junior Cultural Tamburitza Festival when the explosions occurred but returned home immediately.

No injuries were reported.

Badovinac heads the largest organization of Croatians in this country, and some people believe the bombings may have been the work of radicals supporting an independent Croatia, now part of Yugoslavia.

One of the bombs was placed outside a bedroom window, the other near a bathroom window. The explosions blew out walls on the left side and rear of the Badovinac home and caused slight damage to neighboring homes.

ARMED AND READY to join search for girls' killer are three members of Oklahoma Highway Patrol SWAT team. —AP Wirephoto

Killer hunt goes on amid fear in Ozarks

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — They think he's still out there, wandering the densely wooded limestone foothills of the Ozarks. The posse doggedly hunts the man accused of sexually assaulting and killing three Girl Scouts nearly two weeks ago.

Saturday morning, about 150 lawmen and a handful of volunteer citizens continued their search for Gene Leroy Hart, an escaped convict who has been charged in the deaths. Officers have said Hart is a native of the area and is an experienced backwoodsman.

On Friday, about 400 persons — including the father of one of the victims — helped in the search. But most of them were sent home later because authorities said inexperienced hunters were hindering professional efforts to find clues that might lead to Hart.

Police have advised residents of farms, ranches and homes to stay in their houses and keep their doors locked. Many are frightened.

"If they don't catch him, what's he going to do next?" wondered one housewife in this northeastern Oklahoma area. "What do we do next? Where do we go from here? We can't just hibernate."

And, from the locked security of her nearby home, Mrs. Jim English said:

"You feel more conscious of this thing at night. At night you don't know what's coming through the woods."

The manhunt is in a 10-square-mile area about three miles from the Girl Scout camp where, with his footsteps muffled by a thunderstorm, the killer struck on June 13.

On Thursday, three counts of first-degree murder were filed against the convicted rapist who escaped nearly four years ago from the Mayes County Jail at nearby Pryor.

More than half an inch of rain fell late Friday, washing out old tracks but also helping by making new ones more visible.

Temperatures rising toward 90 and humidity above 80 per cent made the tick-infested woods a steam bath for the searchers and those standing by at Camp Scott, where the girls were slain.

About 50 patrol troopers, along with State Bureau of Investigation and FBI agents, awaited developments at the camp, ready to move in with tracking dogs and aircraft should any sightings be reported.

Hart, 33, was linked to the case through two tattered photographs found near the death scene, an annual retreat for hundreds of Oklahoma Girl Scouts.

"You don't know what to do. There's nothing really you can do. But we keep our pistols on the bar all day and a shotgun by the bed all night," said Mrs. Wayne McCartney.

Not far away, at the R. L. Stamper quarterhorse ranch, Randy Stamper said several families gathered in his father's house and kept an armed radio vigil deep into the night. He declared:

"There are a lot of people sitting up at night listening to their CB radios. They've got their doors locked and their guns loaded. The women are afraid to go into the yards by themselves.

"Police and patrol cars have been buzzing around telling people to keep their doors locked and stay away from the windows. Everything is kinda sealed up."

One newsman drove up to a farmhouse to use a telephone. A screen door slowly opened, a grizzled old man stepped out, pointed a shotgun at him and said:

"Listen, around here, in these times, if you want to come up to my house, you honk first, step out of the car and wave your hands so I can see what you got."

Mayes County Dist. Atty. Sid Wise vowed to continue the hunt:

"First, we're going to catch Mr. Hart, and then we're going to determine to our satisfaction whether he killed the girls. And, if not, we'll look for somebody else."

Relatives of Hart said they believed he had nothing to do with the killings and that authorities were searching for him as a scapegoat.

"I think it's crazy, because anytime anything goes wrong they always go to him," said Hart's half-brother, Millard Johnson, 21.

A cousin, Ruby Leach, said Hart was accused of the killings because of his Cherokee background.

"I think they're after him because he's an Indian," she said.

Victor Auxier, a 63-year-old farmer, believes he may have accidentally stumbled across Hart on Thursday while walking his dog along a fence line.

"I was just walking along that fence about noon and all of a sudden my dog started growling, and when I looked up there was this fellow sitting under a small cliff," Auxier said.

"He was on the other side of the fence about 10 feet away. I knew he saw me.

"Well, I didn't know what to do. After hearing all the news about this killer running loose, I just pretended I hadn't seen him and said something sorta to myself about fixing the fence and walked on.

"As soon as I got back to the house, I called the law."

4 held in brutal S.F. slaying of homosexual

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Four young men have been arrested in the beating and stabbing death of a homosexual whose murder ignited a furor.

Police said the accused were apprehended on the basis of information from two citizens after reward offers reached $13,000 in the death of Robert Hillsborough, 33.

Hillsborough's roommate, Jerry Taylor, 27, was badly beaten.

Arrested on murder warrants early Saturday without incident were John L. Cordova, 19, of Daly City and a 17-year-old Daly City boy whose identity was withheld because of his age.

Michael Chavez, 20, of Daly City, and Thomas J. Spooner, 20, of San Bruno, had been booked Friday at city prison for investigation of murder, Lt. Daniel Murphy said.

Chavez was being held without bail. Spooner and Cordova were being held on $50,000 bail each. Arraignment was scheduled for Monday.

Municipal Court Judge John Figone signed arrest warrants late Friday night for Cordova and the 17-year-old in connection with the slaying.

A $5,000 reward had been offered by Mayor George Moscone for the capture of the persons responsible. The Tavern Guild, an organization of gay bar and restaurant owners, also put up a reward.

Gay community leaders blamed the slaying on hostilities generated by singer Anita Bryant and others in recent campaigns against gay rights.

Hillsborough, a city gardener, was stabbed repeatedly after four young men taunted him and his roommate with shouts of "faggot" on Wednesday night in a gay neighborhood. The roommate was beaten but escaped into a friend's residence during the attack.

Moscone ordered City Hall flags lowered to half-staff in memory of the slain city employe.

Investigators said a five-inch knife found at Cordova's home was the size described by coroner Boyd Stephens as inflicting the fatal stabbing.

'Gay Pride' Seattle march draws 2,000

SEATTLE (AP) — More than 2,000 persons joined a downtown parade Saturday to kick off Gay Pride Week proclaimed by Mayor Wes Uhlman in honor of the city's homosexual citizens.

Many of the parade participants, who were mostly young men, carried signs protesting the recent repeal of a Dade County, Fla., law which made it illegal to deny housing or job opportunities to homosexuals.

The parade was organized by the Washington Coalition for Sexual Minority Rights and was supported by 60 organizations.

On Friday, an Uhlman aide said public reaction to the mayor's proclamation was mixed. Uhlman was out of town during the weekend.

The aide said the proclamation drew dozens of telephone calls and letters

Made to Order Custom Designs

Fresh water Baroque Pearl of unusual shape, highlighted by four 8 point top quality diamonds. Mounting is pierced free form design of delicate 14K yellow gold.

Larry Smith

Truly personalized custom jewelry created by Larry from a wax carving to the finished beauty of gold and precious stones. Larry will begin your special desire with an illustration. Then he will handcraft a wax design of fine detail. After your approval, the wax design is cast and finished to the beauty of gold and precious stones. You have a truly personalized custom piece of jewelry. You also save money because there is no middle man. Prices are surprisingly low. Larry can also redesign your present mountings.

Man found guilty of murder in bar

MERCED (AP) — A Stanislaus County man has been convicted of second-degree murder in the shotgun shooting death of a man during a dispute over a bet in a pool game at an Atwater tavern.

Sentencing of Isabello Rivera, 21, of Patterson, was scheduled for July 18 after a Merced County Superior Court jury issued its verdict Friday.

Rivera was convicted of killing Rene Saenz, 27, of Atwater on March 7.

An earlier trial ended in a hung jury as the panel agreed Rivera was innocent of first-degree murder but could not decide whether to convict him of second-degree murder or manslaughter.

. . . it doesn't make sense . . . but working for an employer that does not recognize your contribution does not make much sense either. Working for Pioneer does make sense. We recognize our company is made up of people and people deserve the credit.

The following jobs are available due to recent promotions and our continuing growth:

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT
Become our President's right hand! You should have decision-making abilities and a talent for dealing with a wide variety of people both inside and outside the company. Requires 5 years executive secretary experience plus 70 WPM typing, 80 WPM shorthand and ability to operate 10 key adder

DATA ENTRY OPERATORS
Part time openings on morning and evening shifts ... hours are flexible. You'll be entering and proofreading data for our computer system along with maintaining sequence and batch control of source documents. At least 50 WPM ACCURATE typing required.

RECEPTIONIST/SWITCHBOARD
We need a personable and efficient individual familiar with standard switchboard equipment. You'll greet our visitors, handle incoming calls and some light clerical duties as required.

GENERAL FILE CLERK
Varied duties make this a non-routine position for an individual with some general office background. You'll set up and maintain files, provide relief for switchboard and mail room staff

We offer excellent salaries and a generous package of benefits.

Heroes have no regrets

By John Barbour
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Where most would hang back, these people stepped forward and risked life and limb to save a stranger. They paid a heavy price. Do they have any regrets? And what makes for unselfish bravery in a world where indifference often is the norm?

CONNEAUT, Ohio — They stepped out of the shadows of ordinary life into the glare of danger, and they carry the scars they earned for being Good Samaritans. It changed their lives.

Not one of them regrets it.

Not Dorothy Kochs in her wheelchair, nor Alex Patitsas on his artificial legs, nor Don Hemphill with his crippled hands and tissue paper skin, nor Christal Lynn who taught himself to walk again.

Don Hemphill says it best. He dashed after a gasoline truck that was being dragged by a train, through a sea of gasoline. He tried unsuccessfully to pry the driver from behind the steering wheel before it blew. The explosion threw Hemphill through the air, afire.

"No sir, no regrets," he says 23 years later, many of those years spent in pain. "If I had to do it over, I'd try a little harder, I believe. If I'd been a little quicker, maybe I'd have done it. I had a brother driving a bus at the time. If that had been my brother in there, I'd want somebody to do something.

"I CAN'T understand anybody who can just stand by and do nothing. I didn't know the man driving the truck. But he was a man. And likely he had a family. And if it had been me in that truck, likely he'd have done something."

People like Don Hemphill have always been the exceptions, but in recent years the reluctance of people to step forward — risking danger or merely becoming "involved" — has been a subject of much social comment.

However, while there are no statistics to prove it, there are some indications that the tide of indifference may be turning. More often now, New York police arriving at the scene of a crime find the culprit in the hands of bystanders. In Washington, D.C., police say, it's more common now for bysuanders to tail armed robbers until they find the police, to thwart a pickpocket on a bus, to flush a robber looting a store.

THERE ARE signs, a New York police official says, that "the public has had enough," that more people answer calls for help.

Why do ordinary citizens step forward? Each has his own reasons. Hemphill, who delivers mail and farms in Union Mills, N.C., shares the produce of his farm with his neighbors. "I was brought up that way. I had a good mother and father. And the Bible tells you to love your neighbor as yourself."

Dorothy Kochs, who now lives quietly in a small white farmhouse outside of Conneaut with three immense German shepherds, grabbed the arm of a gunman to deflect his aim, saving the lives of two policemen. But she was paralyzed from the waist down by a police bullet. Regrets? "No, none."

Alex Patitsas (rhymes with "vicious," he says smiling) lives in a tiny home in a working class neighborhood of Gary, Ind. He outran a seven-car train to throw a body block on a man in the train's path. He saved a life, but he lost his legs. The man he saved never came to thank him. Regrets? Only that he can't go back to railroading.

CHRISTAL LYNN of Bainbridge, Ga., answered the screams of an 11-year-old boy, found himself facing a drunk-crazed man with a shotgun, took shotgun blasts at close range in his left foot, his right leg, his right chest, still staggered forward pleading with the gunman. Then he lay there for 4½ hours bleeding and praying, dissuading the gun-wielding drunk until help arrived. Regrets?

"No sir, I do not. The things that bothered me most when I came to was the expression on that child's face, and the look on my wife's face when she came to the emergency room."

All these Good Samaritans are winners of Carnegie Hero Fund awards that were established in 1904 by Andrew Carnegie with these words:

"We live in an heroic age. Not seldom are we thrilled by deeds of heroism where men or women are injured or lose their lives in attempting to preserve or rescue their fellows; such the heroes of civilization."

The Carnegie commission investigates hundreds of heroic acts each year, gleaning the most deserving. Last year it made 57 awards, 11 of them posthumously.

Dorothy Kochs is 54 now. Her hair is gray and frizzed, but her smile is bright and her features recall prettier days. She was a night club dancer in Cleveland, a tough and independent girl who grew up in the depression in Chicago.

From time to time she ponders that awful moment of decision in 1956 when she threw her 5-foot-3 frame and the future of her baby daughter into a wrestling match with a menacing gunman.

"There isn't much time to think. It's just knowing that this terrible thing is going to happen and trying to prevent it from happening. And many ridiculous things come into your mind. A lot of ideas that don't make sense . . .

"The last moment before I made my move, the realization that I'm going to die came in. And that's when I said, 'Dear God,' almost like a prayer, and 'Jody forgive me.' Because a sudden emotion went through me: 'Gee, what a rotten deal I'm giving this kid. I divorced her father, and she has nobody but me, and I'm taking me away.' "

Alex Patitsas is 56 now. He was a lean 225-pounder in 1965, an athletic man who liked to fish and hunt, who earned the name "rubber legs" as a halfback in high school. He prided himself on his speed afoot.

"Why did I do it? I don't know. It was just a reaction. To be honest with you, if I'd known I was going to be hurt, I certainly wouldn't have done it. I'm not the hero type. I just reacted. I was always the type of person who looked out for the underdog. But would I do it again? I don't know. If it meant saving somebody's life, maybe. I just can't answer the question."

3 cops 'beat driver to death'

New York Times Service

BUFFALO — Three Buffalo policemen were ordered Saturday to appear in a lineup in the investigation of the death of an 18-year-old boy who was dragged from his small sports car and stomped and beaten by a group of men.

Chief Leo J. Donovan, the head of the Buffalo police department's homicide bureau, said the victim, Richard Y. Young, a recent graduate of the Tennessee Military Institute who was planning to attend the State University College at Buffalo in the fall, had been forced to the roadside early Saturday by a larger car after a chase of about six blocks.

Donovan identified the three police officers, who were off-duty and in civilian clothes when the incident occurred, as Philip Gramaglia, Samuel Fusco and Gary Atti.

Donovan said that according to witnesses, the chase had started after Young attempted to turn through an intersection into the path of the larger car and both drivers had slammed on their brakes to avoid a collision. Shouts were exchanged, the homicide chief said, and Young sped off with the larger car in pursuit.

Young was forced over, almost in front of his home, the homicide chief said, and was set upon by seven to nine men.

His roommate heard the commotion, and hollering and swinging a club, managed to break up the attack as neighbors rushed into the street.

As the assailants piled into the larger car and raced off, one witness took down the license plate number, later traced to Samuel Fusco, a 27-year-old policeman who had been on the force for six years.

After the death, Donovan was called to the hospital. A short while later he was approached by Philip Gramaglia, a 30-year-old officer with seven years on the force, who asked about Young's condition.

"When we told him the victim was dead," the chief said, "he became visibly shaken. He was asked to give a statement and he refused."

Clouded past of Laetrile movement leaders bared

False or exaggerated claims of scientific competence made

By Richard D. Lyons
New York Times Service

LOS ALTOS — With states legalizing the use of Laetrile at an increasing rate, an inquiry into the background of some leaders of the movement to promote the purported anticancer drug shows they have frequently been the subject of exaggerated claims about their scientific and medical competence.

The inquiry, which dealt with four men, also disclosed various brushes with the law, including a number of convictions stemming primarily from their efforts to promote and distribute Laetrile.

The leaders include:

—Robert W. Bradford of Los Altos, president of the largest organization seeking to legalize Laetrile, the Committee for Freedom of Choice in Cancer Therapy Inc., which claims a membership of [illegible] persons.

—Ernst T. Krebs Jr. of San Francisco, the committee's "science director," considered by many to be the chief theoretician of the Laetrile movement.

—Dr. John A. Richardson of Clear Lake, one of the first physicians in the United States to openly espouse Laetrile as a cancer cure and whose arrest for doing so led to the committee's formation.

—Andrew R.L. McNaughton, a Canadian citizen now living in Mexico, who helped promote Laetrile to prominence and is a fugitive from justice.

Ten states already have legalized the use of Laetrile, a substance extracted from the seeds of fruits such as apricots. Before the end of the year, other states probably will permit its use, although the interstate manufacture and sale of Laetrile in the United States has been banned by the federal government and the substance has been condemned by the scientific and medical community as being ineffective in treating cancer.

On the second floor of a small office building in this San Francisco suburb is the headquarters of the largest organization devoted to promoting the legalization and use of the chemical, the Committee for Freedom of Choice, as it is known.

Bradford, 46, a poised spokesman for the group, has at various times described himself as a scientist, an engineer who attended Georgia Tech, and an electronics specialist who helped develop guidance systems for missiles. Each point is open to question.

Asked in a recent interview if he had attended Georgia Tech, Bradford answered, "Yes, for two years."

Yet employees of the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta said a search of their registration and alumni records failed to turn up the name Robert W. Bradford.

RECORDS on file with the U.S. attorney's office in San Diego, where Bradford was convicted earlier this year of conspiracy to smuggle Laetrile into the country and was fined [illegible] indicate that in [illegible] he attended San Jose Community College for one semester, studying police administration.

John McLean, a spokesman for what is now San Jose State University, confirmed that Bradford had attended the institution. He added that the records indicated that "he wasn't a very good student."

After leaving the college, Bradford enlisted in the Air Force. David Borsik, a freelance journalist, has said that Bradford described himself as having "helped develop the guidance system for the first United States tactical guided missile" during his service at Cape Kennedy and as having directed "the Air Force electronics and guidance systems program."

Yet the records indicate that Bradford's highest rank was that of staff sergeant, which would hardly have qualified him for such important positions.

After leaving the Air Force, Bradford was employed by several defense contractors in the San Francisco Bay area and in the early 1960s was hired by Stanford University, then developing one of the world's largest linear accelerators for research into subatomic physics.

Bradford described himself as an engineer and was listed on the Stanford employment records as such. Yet his supervisor there, Carl Olsen, said Bradford's duties would be more accurately described as those of an expert technician.

FEDERAL and state investigators have testified that Bradford had taken part in Laetrile sales transactions involving hundreds of thousands and even millions of dollars; he said, however, that he had only a modest income. He would not be specific.

Grant Leake, an agent of the California Food and Drug Bureau, estimated that Bradford, who has openly conceded that he was a distributor of Laetrile, takes in $150,000 to $250,000 a month on Laetrile sales.

Attempts to reach Bradford for elaboration on some of these points were unavailing. Employes at the committee office said he was out of the state.

Krebs, 66, is the son of Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Sr., who patented Laetrile in the 1940s and who in the ensuing years was arrested several times for using the chemical in violation of state law. Dr. Krebs was convicted in 1962 and 1966 of selling illegal medicines including Laetrile and fined $4,000. He died in 1970.

One recent day Krebs served luncheon guests tunafish sandwiches, coffee, and apricots in syrup dusted with a flour made of pulverized apricot pits.

His polka-dot tie sported the gold leaf pin of the John Birch Society, whose members include many in the Laetrile movement, including Bradford and Richardson.

WHEN an interviewer noted that the telephone directory listed him as "Dr. Krebs" and his staff referred to him as "Dr. Krebs," Krebs said he had received an honorary doctorate from American University, a well known institution in Washington.

The degree actually was awarded in 1973 — not by American University but by American Christian College, a small Bible school in Tulsa, Okla. Yet Dr. Dan Hobbs, an official of the Oklahoma State Board of Regents, said the school is not empowered to award any degrees other than the bachelor's.

Over the years Krebs has stated that he completed three years of study at the Hahnemann Medical College in Philadelphia, but that he did not finish the fourth and final year.

Asked by an interviewer why he had not completed his senior year, Krebs replied that he had been hounded out of the school because of his belief in unorthodox medical treatments.

BUT Dr. Joseph R. DiPalma, the dean of Hahnemann, said Krebs had failed his freshman year at the school in 1939, had been allowed to repeat it, and had successfully finished the freshman course on his second try.

DiPalma said Krebs then failed his sophomore year and was expelled. "The letters in the file show that he pleaded and begged for reinstatement but that the officials at the time refused," DiPalma said.

Krebs, who has at other times used the initials Ph.D. after his name without further elaboration, has had a circuitous academic career. At various times he has attended Memphis State Teachers College, the University of Mississippi, San Mateo Junior College, UC Berkeley and the University of Illinois, which awarded him a bachelor of arts degree in 1942.

Transcripts of his college records indicate that he was a lackluster student, having been awarded low or failing grades in some of his scientific courses, including chemistry. Yet Krebs has repeatedly referred to himself as a biochemist and a nutritionist.

REGARDING his finances, Krebs told an interviewer that "neither myself nor any member of the Krebs family has ever made a cent from Laetrile."

Yet records seized by state and federal agents in 1972 indicated that Krebs and his brother, Byron Krebs, a medical doctor, had an income of $250,000 in 1970 and 1971, primarily from the sale of Laetrile and other substances not recognized as valid drugs.

In 1974, Krebs and Dr. Byron Krebs pleaded guilty to violations of state health and safety laws and were fined $500 each, given suspended sentences of six months and placed on probation. Last month Krebs was ordered by a San Francisco court to serve the suspended sentence because of violations of the conditions of his probation. Dr. Krebs' license to practice medicine was revoked after the original trial. He died later that year.

IN recent years, one of Krebs's close associates has been Richardson, co-author of a book dedicated to the Krebs's brothers and their father, to be published Monday. It is called "Laetrile Case Histories: The Richardson Cancer Clinic Experience."

The 390-page book contains dozens of detailed case histories of persons supposedly aided by the use of Laetrile, with the names of the persons missing; and a few pictures of persons purportedly aided by Laetrile, with the names used.

Also missing from the book are the names of seven cancer patients whose case studies were described last September in a hearing of the California Board of Medical Quality Assurance, at which Richardson's license to practice medicine was revoked.

Among the charges against Richardson was that he had "aided and abetted the unlicensed practice of medicine by permitting unauthorized persons, to wit: Angela Jenkins (a nurse), Steve Richardson (his son) or Ralph Bowman (his business manager), to treat and care for" seven patients.

ACCORDING to the board's documents, Richardson "also permitted an unlicensed person, to wit: Ernest (sic) T. Krebs Jr., to examine Helen D. Schneck."

The board also found that Richardson "personally and his agents, advised and discouraged Helen D. Schneck, Kapitan P. Zema, Poul Olsen and Margaret Baldock from seeking conventional cancer therapy.

The board noted that the treatment for cancer with the unrecognized drugs had started even before Richardson had either diagnosed cancer or been "privy to prior medical records reflecting such diagnosis."

Four of the seven patients either paid or were asked to pay $2,000 each for a course of Laetrile treatments. Data on the total amounts paid by the others were unavailable.

Financial records indicate that until Richardson started prescribing and administering Laetrile in the early 1970s he was barely making ends meet through his medical practice. After becoming involved in the Laetrile movement, the income from his practice rose more than tenfold.

THE records are on file in the San Diego Federal Court where Richardson was convicted last month of conspiracy to smuggle Laetrile into the United States and fined $20,000. His co-defendants were Bradford, Bowman, who was fined $10,000, and Frank Salaman of Redwood City, Calif., the vice president of the Freedom of Choice committee, who also was fined $10,000.

For 1972, Richardson reported on his federal income tax return that he had netted $10,100 on a gross income from his medical practice of $88,000. By 1974, however, he was reporting a net income of $172,981 on a gross income of $783,000.

Herbert Hoffman, the assistant U.S. Atty. who prosecuted the case, told the court that Richardson took in $2.8 million from January 1973 to March 1976.

The size of the smuggling operation in recent years had been estimated at $20 million by the federal authorities.

RICHARDSON is a graduate of Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., and the University of Rochester School of Medicine. He is 54 and served as a sergeant in the Marine Corps.

He began practicing medicine in the San Francisco Bay area in 1954, first at Kaiser Hospital, then in a series of group practices. He said in an interview he was a general practitioner who also performed surgery, obstetrics and eye, ear, nose and throat work.

Asked specifically if he had been the target of any malpractice suit, Richardson said there had been only one and that it had "fizzled out a few years ago."

Court records indicate, however, that in 1964 and in 1968 the American Mutual Insurance Co., which covered Richardson for malpractice, had paid claims against him totaling $77,000. The cases involved his treatment of two infants. One died, the other was disfigured.

THE arrest of Richardson in 1972 for espousing Laetrile as a cancer cure, together with the publicity surrounding the raid on his office, helped trigger the formation of the Freedom of Choice committee. In 1974, the doctor was one of 16 persons indicted with three Mexican corporations on charges of conspiring to smuggle Laetrile into the United States.

Also indicted was McNaughton, the fourth of the Laetrile leaders, a Canadian citizen now living in Mexico, who has yet to be tried and probably will not be since the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service has refused to allow him back into the country.

McNaughton, 61, is a member of a distinguished Canadian family. His father, the late Gen. A.G.L. McNaughton, was the commander in chief of the Canadian Armed Forces in World War II, and after the war was a delegate to the United Nations Security Council.

Laetrile patient's case history

New York Times Service

Helen D. Schneck, a California woman who died of breast cancer in 1973, was a patient of Dr. John A. Richardson. What follows is her case history, which is illustrative of several others. It was compiled by the California Board of Medical Quality Assurance, which last fall revoked Richardson's license to practice.

FROM March through October 1972, Schneck underwent a series of Laetrile injections of 10cc each, prescribed by respondent (Dr. Richardson) as a preventative treatment for cancer. In addition, respondent prescribed vitamin therapy including various enzymes, pangamic acid (another outlawed chemical) and Laetrile tablets. The cost of said injections was $20 each plus $20 for said Laetrile tablets and an additional amount for said vitamins.

In November 1972, Schneck developed a small lump on her neck. Respondent advised that Laetrile injections would cause said lump to disappear and prescribed a series of 15 such injections at a cost of $25 each.

By December 1972 Schneck had developed a rash with bumps on her left shoulder. In January 1973 said rash extended to her left breast. Respondent advised that Schneck undergo a biopsy at Albany (Calif.) Hospital.

ON Jan. 23, 1973, adenocarcinoma (cancer of the soft tissues) was diagnosed by her attending physician (not respondent). Respondent had administered approximately 16 injections of Laetrile during Schneck's hospital stay. Although her attending physician recommended conventional therapy, Schneck opted to continue with respondent, who recommended tripling the injection dosage of Laetrile to 30cc, at a cost of $70 per injection to control the cancer. Said injections were administered by respondent and his agents, including one Ralph Bowman.

By February 1973, said rash and swelling had spread. Respondent (Dr. Richardson) made an appointment for Schneck with one Ernest (sic) Krebs Jr., a biochemist located in San Francisco, who examined Schneck and advised that she did not have cancer but rather a serious skin infection.

Respondent thereafter treated Schneck with antibiotics and administered injections of 10cc of Laetrile. On Feb. 14, 1973, with no demonstrable improvement in Schneck's condition, and upon being advised by Schneck that she had years before eaten raw meat, respondent diagnosed her condition as trichinosis. Respondent continued to administer Laetrile.

ON Feb. 24, 1973, Schneck was unable to leave her bed. A physician, called by her husband, ordered her immediate admission to Marin (Calif.) General Hospital. Schneck was diagnosed as having inflammatory cancer in the left breast ranging from her collar bone to jaw, and an enlarged liver, presumably cancerous. The primary site was inflammatory carcinoma of the breast.

Schneck died on Oct. 4, 1973, from her condition.

Knight-Ridder Service
(c) 1977, The Philadelphia Inquirer

For many years before his death on April 5, 1976, Howard Hughes was illegally given massive doses of narcotics, tranquilizers and other pain-killing drugs that often left him dazed and destroyed his kidneys — the ultimate cause of his death.

The drugs were obtained with prescriptions issued in the names of Hughes employes. Personal aides, after getting the prescriptions filled — on his orders, it was said — then gave him the drugs. It is unlawful to purposely have prescriptions made out to one person but then give the drugs to another. Hughes aides have testified that at least some of the prescriptions were written by one of the industrialist's four personal physicians.

Details of the illegal use of drugs are contained in secret memos from the Hughes organization and in secret testimony of his long-time personal aides given as part of legal proceedings in Los Angeles in connection with the administration of Hughes' estate.

Other new findings in a continuing investigation into the life and death of the industrialist and his vast estate include:

—The drug Empirin Compound No. 4, a pain killer, was supplied to Hughes for nearly 25 years, even though it has long been known that prolonged, steady use of the drug, which contains phenacetin, can cause severe kidney damage.

—Hughes began taking drugs in the late 1940s, starting with Empirin Compound No. 4, which also contains the addictive narcotic codeine. Hughes then began taking straight codeine tablets and Valium, a non-narcotic, non-addictive tranquilizer. By his last years, Hughes was dissolving codeine tablets in water and injecting himself with a syringe. Codeine, a weaker form of morphine, is a pain killer and a sedative.

Hughes injected self with syringe

—For the last 15 years of his life, Hughes never left his bedroom except to move from a house to a hotel or from one hotel suite to another. He spent most of his time sitting in a chair. Sometimes he wore pajamas; very often he wore nothing at all.

—Despite accumulating evidence of state and federal criminal law violations by one or more Hughes employes, not a single local, state or federal law enforcement agency has initiated criminal proceedings. The statute of limitations on any offenses committed began running the day Hughes died.

—Some attorneys involved in the administration of Hughes' estate, including the Houston, Tex., law firm of Andrews, Kurth, Campbell & Jones, which represented Hughes and his father for half a century and is now representing the administrators of the estate in Nevada and Texas, have attempted in depositions and other proceedings to limit questioning about the possibility of negligence on the part of Hughes employes.

Nonetheless, it is known that Hughes, who dazzled the world in 1938 by flying around the globe in the then-record time of three days, spent his last years chained to a drug-dependent routine. And when he died at age 70, this man, who was linked romantically in his earlier years to some of Hollywood's most famous beauties, was an emaciated scarecrow of a figure, having shrunk from a height of 6 feet 4 and a weight of 150 pounds to 6 feet 1 and 94 pounds.

Excerpts from the logs maintained by the half dozen close personal aides who were with Hughes during his last 15 years show the pattern of the life Hughes led and the amount of drugs he consumed.

The log for Sunday, Nov. 7, 1971, is typical.

11:15 a.m. Hughes awake.

11:35 a.m. Watches movie, "Situation Hopeless — But Not Serious."

1:30p.m. Finishes movie and takes 10 codeine tablets.

1:50 p.m. Goes to bathroom.

2:10 p.m. Returns to chair and watches movie, "The Killers."

3:30 p.m. Eats chicken.

4:20 p.m. Finishes eating. Again watches "Situation Hopeless — But Not Serious" and then watches movie, "Do Not Disturb."

It is not clear when Hughes began taking codeine tablets orally. But testimony from aides indicates that sometime after 1971 he started dissolving the tablets in water and injecting himself with the solution.

In an interview, a physician who specializes in internal medicine estimated that codeine taken orally is only about two-thirds as effective as codeine injected into the bloodstream.

The log for Saturday, Dec. 18, 1971, recorded another fairly typical day for Hughes:

Prolonged usage ruined kidneys

1:30 a.m. Dinner of chicken and dessert.

3:30 a.m. Finished dinner

3:40 a.m. Went to bathroom.

4:30 a.m. In bed and asleep.

9:20 a.m. To the bathroom.

11:30 a.m. Sitting in chair.

11:45 a.m. Consumes 10 tablets of Empirin Compound No. 4.

Pharmacologists interviewed said prolonged usage of Empirin Compound No. 4 would cause a painful inflammation of the kidneys and permanent kidney damage.

"High doses of phenacetin over a long period of time are definitely going to destroy the kidneys," one said.

The report of the autopsy performed on Hughes revealed that one kidney weighed 110 grams and the other 90 grams. The pathologist who performed the autopsy said a person of Hughes' size should have had kidneys weighing between 150 and 200 grams.

The log for Monday, June 26, 1972, shows Hughes' life style unchanged.

1:15 a.m. Eats a dinner of chicken and dessert.

2:30 a.m. Finishes dinner.

2:55 a.m. Goes to bathroom.

3:35 a.m. Returns and sits in chair watching movie, "Inside Daisy Clover."

6:20 a.m. Goes to bathroom.

6:55 a.m. Back in chair watching movie, "The Grasshopper."

11:15 a.m. Watches movie, "Shanghai Lillie."

12:05 p.m. Eats dessert and watches "The Guns of Navarone."

2:50 p.m. Takes four Blue Bombers. (This was the name Hughes aides gave to the 10-milligram blue Valium tablets that Hughes took regularly.

5 p.m. Takes five Blue Bombers.

6 p.m. In bed and asleep.

At 2:45 a.m. the next day, Hughes took eight more 10-milligram Valium tablets — a total of 170 milligrams of Valium in 12 hours.

A pharmacologist at a major hospital told interviewers that he doubted a physician could justify allowing a patient to take even four 10-milligram Valium tablets at one time.

"Medically, it would be difficult to justify," he said. "The patient receiving that much at one time should be re-evaluated to determine if he should be placed under psychiatric care."

Another pharmacologist said that although Valium is a relatively safe drug used by many persons, prolonged, heavy usage can cause "adverse reactions — depression, constipation, double vision, slurred speech."

In his last years, Hughes lived in a succession of hotel rooms in Las Vegas and in the Bahamas, Canada, England, Nicaragua and Mexico. During his last 15 years, only about a half dozen close aides saw him regularly. These are the men who are testifying in Los Angeles in connection with the Hughes estate.

Hughes began taking Empirin Compound No. 4 shortly after he was critically injured in a 1946 crash of an experimental photo reconnaissance plane that his firm, Hughes Aircraft Co., was building for the Air Force.

For years there has been speculation that Hughes suffered pain caused by crash-related injuries until the end of his life and that he took Empirin Compound No. 4 to relieve that pain.

But aides have now testified that their reclusive boss never complained of chronic pain.

They also have testified that from the early 1950s until Hughes' death some of the prescriptions for Empirin Compound No. 4 and other drugs were issued by Dr. Norman F. Crane, now 72, a Los Angeles physician who once cared for a number of Hollywood starlets under contract to Hughes in the 1940s and 1950s.

Roy E. Crawford, 60, one of Hughes' aides, testified that the prescriptions were not written in Hughes' name. When he was asked in whose name they were written, Crawford's attorney advised him not to answer on the grounds that the answer might incriminate him.

Crawford said the prescriptions were filled at a number of drugstores to avoid attracting attention

Other aides questioned so far also refused to say what names were on the prescriptions.

In fact, Hughes' aides have been vague about almost all the details of Hughes' drug usage.

For example, Howard L. Eckersley, 52, who, like all of Hughes' aides, spent considerable time with the industrialist, testified that he never bought drugs for Hughes and could not even say who did.

He testifed also that at the insistence of the aides, the chore of giving Hughes his medicine in the last year of his life was assumed by doctors. Eckersley added, though, that he did not know who was directly responsible for ordering the change in procedure.

When Clarence A. "Chuck" Waldron, 42, another aide, was asked earlier this month how Hughes received medication, William M. Bitting, a Los Angeles attorney representing Waldron and other Hughes aides, instructed him not to answer on the grounds the question was irrelevant.

Bitting made the same objection when Waldron was asked whose name appeared on the labels attached to the medication. Waldron did deny that he ever obtained or administered medication or saw anyone give medication to Hughes.

Waldron's testimony was in sharp contrast to a memorandum, written to Hughes by one of the aides, which has surfaced in the investigation and which indicates that Waldron was giving drugs to Hughes.

"Chuck told me that he gave you the bongers (10-milligram Valium tablets) and did not know whether you actually took them or not," says the memo. "He said you were so sleepy and groggy that he did not want to awaken you to try to find out. He did not try to keep you from taking them.

"Of course no one wants you to take any, but we don't try to keep them away. When you use words and phrases such as 'putting you to sleep,' 'permitting you to go to sleep,' etc., you imply that we have some kind of control over what you or your mind tells you to do.

"The fact is re: the bombers . . . you slept more today without any than you did yesterday with six. And that has happened many times in the past. You seem to delight in blaming us if you do not achieve the sleeping results you want, which vary. Sometimes you are happy with 10 and sometimes you are not happy with an overall 'down' period of 20 hours."

Another memorandum reveals that the aides were well aware of the possible legal consequences of assisting Hughes in his use of drugs.

"You seem to have forgotten," an aide wrote to Hughes sometime during the last few years of Hughes' life, "that several months ago, not only Norman, but also Wilbur and Homer decided that they would not want to talk through a third party such as the six (personal aides) of your staff.

His aides feared for their security

"The reasoning was because of possible testimony which we might sometime be required to give. With doctors, it is privileged information, and they cannot be forced to testify unless it is in a criminal case.

"They suggest that your staff be in the position of saying that your doctors see you occasionally and that what they talk to you about or administer to you is not known to any of us.

"That is also the reason that we six should not only not view any medication you have, but not be in the position of giving or handing you any type of medication, even Excedrin."

Questioned about the memo, Waldron denied ever seeing it but did identify Norman, Wilbur and Homer as three of Hughes' personal physicians.

The "Norman" mentioned in the memo apparently refers to Dr. Crane.

"Wilbur" and "Homer" apparently refer to Dr. Wilbur S. Thain, 51, of Logan, Utah, and Dr. Homer Hone Clark, 55, of Salt Lake City.

Soupy on 65th floor: no pie in sky

NEW YORK — Soupy Sales warns the world it had better not try to surprise him by hitting him in the face with a pie when he takes his comedy act to the Rainbow Grill, 65 stories up, this week.

Soupy said he has received 19,970 pies in the face in his pie-faced career but that every pie-throwing was planned and expected and had a reason.

"Oh, if anybody tries it, I'll kill 'em," Soupy said the other afternoon.

"But wouldn't it be a good publicity stunt if you walked on stage and were promptly hit with a pie?" we asked.

"NO. If anybody tries it, I'll hit 'em with a club! I'm gonna duck, and it'll go on somebody else. That stuff splatters and it burns, especially if it's a real pie."

Back in the 1960s — or was it the 1950s? — Soupy made it an honor to get hit in the face with a pie. Celebrities asked for the privilege of going on his popular TV show to get splattered.

"Frank Sinatra came on twice," he said. "Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis. We couldn't get George Burns because of his toupee, nor Fred MacMurray. Cary Grant was a fan of my show, but I couldn't get him to do it. I said, 'Listen, this pays $150,' and he got hysterical. People used to offer me money to hit somebody with a pie unexpectedly. Some musicians wanted to pay me $100 to hit their famous bandleader. Of course I wouldn't do it."

SOUPY made it easy for his guests. The "pie" was really shaving cream. Nevertheless the guests became a gooey mess and had to dig shaving cream out of their shirt collars. Soupy became the hottest thing in show business, and in Easter week 1965 he headlined the Paramount and brought back some of the hysteria of the '40s.

Remember the Mouse dance? The kids loved that invention of Soupy's. Ed Sullivan set a precedent by booking Soupy for two shows in a row.

SOUPY SALES
"I'll kill 'em"

Milton Suttman from Franklinton, N.C., and Huntington, W. Va., (hometown of Dagmar and Peter Marshall) probably borrowed the name Sales from the late comedian Chic Sale. He had his own TV shows in Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland before going to Hollywood and New York. Next he went on "What's My Line?" and played nightclubs around the country. He believes he's done more TV than any living survivor.

SOUPY'S ready for New York nightclubs. "I've been woodshedding this act for several years," he says. "Red Skelton, guys like that, get nervous before going on. So do I. I go to the bathroom two or three times. But I'm prepared.

"The worst job is the 1 a.m. show at the Playboy. There's a guy sitting there trying to get his date drunk, and the girl's trying to stall him off from taking her home. They sit there hating you and hating each other. And they show it, and your act can go right down the toilet."

Soupy — divorced now, father of Tony, 25, and Hunt, 23 — plays numerous telethons during the season. He says his comedy is physical. He has a morning TV show on ABC, "The Junior Almost Anything Goes Show." He has been known to permit a pie in the face if a telethon donor makes the contribution big enough to be of huge assistance to a charity.

In Ft. Lauderdale a boy threw a frozen pie at Soupy — he'd forgotten to thaw it.

WEEKEND windup: Dorothy Loudon of "Annie" (and Claremont, N.H.) was made an honorary member of the New Hampshire legislature. ... Gordon McKellen Jr. and Kathy Malmbert of Toller Cranston's Ice Show at the Palace, a Broadway hit, will wed Aug. 23, and producer Dennis Bass wants 'em to marry on stage, on skates. ... Singer Jeanne Napoli's first pop album, "Jeanne," was released by Vigor Records.

Jules Feiffer's "Carnal Knowledge," written as a play before it became a hit movie, may finally get to Broadway in '78. ... The Mummenschanz mime troupe sometimes does its routines in the street during intermission of their show — and occasionally drawing as many viewers as they have in the tiny Broadway theater.

Something new in benefits: A swimming pool will be set up at the Copacabana for the multiple sclerosis "dance-dine-dip-&-disco" party Thursday. ... Inflation note: Leon Uris' first paperback, "Battle Cry" (1952), cost 35 cents; his latest, "Trinity," sells for $2.75.

TODAY'S best laugh: Scott Carter mentioned a friend who changed careers: "At first he wanted to be a veterinarian. But then he thought, 'After all, how many wealthy animals are there?' "

REMEMBERED quote: "No home is complete without children — or intact with them." — Franklin P. Jones, Quote.

EARL'S PEARLS: "With my lousy luck," sighed Jesse Kaplan, "if I were a politician, I'd be honest."

A man told a cafe maitre d' he wanted a table where he could order a couple of drinks: "And make it a sidewalk table — I promised my wife I was going out for some fresh air."

In spite of all the plans for world peace, there'll probably be the usual number of June weddings. ... Larry Bonko says some fat people are suffering from the "Noah syndrome" — when they eat they take two of everything. ... Dumbest crook was the guy who held up a carload of people on their way back from Las Vegas. ... Despite jets and missiles, they still haven't come up with anything that goes faster than a two-week vacation. That's Earl, brother.

Children's album stirs controversy

Anne Murray, who a year ago gave birth to a boy, just recorded an album of children's songs which might not see the light of day on her Capitol Records label.

People at Capitol are not so sure they want their super singer to release songs for children. They'd much rather she continued singing pop music.

THE ISLAND OF DR. MOREAU

Sweet tooth

Not your average matinee idol is "the Great John L." Clark, who plays half-human Boarman in T-shirt titled "The Island of Dr. Moreau" and movie of same name. Here he gets bit of refreshment from Sheri Bernstein while promoting the film, to be released July 13.

Fans make tracks to Luckenbach

LUCKENBACH, Tex. (AP) — This hill country hamlet has one parking meter, one fireplug, one store and a nationwide hit country song named for it.

It also has a horde of tourists, who started arriving a few weeks ago after Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson released the song "Luckenbach, Tex."

Hundreds now brave the back roads of central Texas seeking the place with the funny name, where, as the song says, Waylon and Willie go to get back to the "basics of life."

Most stay long enough to fall under Luckenbach's lazy-day spell and leave only after they can't hold another bottle of beer. Some took time last weekend to carry off the town's beer-drinking chicken and every sign that said "Luckenbach."

But not everybody likes the hoopla. Mrs. Armin Engel, who lives in one of Luckenbach's two houses, calls it "foolishness."

"The elderly people used to play cards at the dance hall on Sunday, but the local people don't go there anymore," she said.

The biggest thing before Waylon and Willie was Mud Dauber Day, when thousands of Texans sodden with beer annually flood Luckenbach to celebrate the return of the first mud dauber wasp during the spring.

Luckenbach was established in 1849, but few people paid it any mind until reporters and columnists took a fancy to Hondo Crouch, the late part owner of the store and post office.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: While striving [illegible] your nature [illegible] personal [illegible] but eventually rewarding. Plan [illegible] a six-month holding pattern during the last quarter of your year plus the first quarter of next. Today's natives put up their best scrap when faced with adversity. Those born this year will create structures of lasting importance as in architecture. If born late evening, will make advances in science.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): [illegible] step with your own team [illegible] Keep a keen eye [illegible].

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): As you barge in with big ideas, realize that your new challenge is someone else's old grievance. Hilarious [illegible] are reason enough to switch appointments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Likes, dislikes, state of health, moods figure in how you fare. Nobody notices or makes allowances. Unplanned incidents are useful later, not [illegible] now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your best intentions bring mixed, generally irritating results. You're obligated to dip into your savings. Keep it at minimum. Avoid [illegible] more.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Let others spot problems, propose their solutions. You can legitimately [illegible] carry part of the burden [illegible] share of the reward, and be welcome [illegible].

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In search of perfection, you overdo. Concentrate on getting a few positive items right the first time. Associates [illegible] the job if you pass the buck.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Review of spending habits, use of money, thrift isn't exactly happy, but you'll be ahead long run. Skip placing blame, doing post mortems on recent misadventures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): [illegible] at work is [illegible] every step needs attention. If there's opposition, you stir it by [illegible].

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): News sounds distressing, shouldn't trigger alarm. It's the corrective measures. It's not your job to save the world, simply [illegible] local symptoms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Leave resources intact, not lent or staked as collateral for deals. Otherwise don't be [illegible]. Enough stress exists without adding [illegible].

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Patience with people [illegible] their minds is well worth whatever it costs you. Let a good story [illegible] with your [illegible] version [illegible].

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accept promises [illegible]. Knowing nothing will [illegible]. Let others turn the wheels, find out the work involved. Relief from tension comes [illegible].

Bad Company tries to be good company to fans

By Christine Brown
Knight-Ridder Service

Bad Company — the name carries with it suggestions of evil, of musical excess, of a certain perversion, perhaps. But in rock Bad Company means good, unpretentious music delivered well in concert, and, members say, concern for the fan.

As lead guitarist Mick Ralphs says, "We don't just want to take the money and run." It's a standard reassurance from rock performer to fan, designed to make the concertgoer or record buyer feel he's turning over $6 or $7 to an entertainer who really cares about him. In the case of Ralphs and Bad Company, musical evidence makes the statement convincing.

Ralphs, singer Paul Rodgers, bassist Boz Burrell and drummer Simon Kirke all played with other groups— namely, Free, King Crimson and Mott the Hoople. They are on a long tour — mid-April to late August — which Ralphs describes as "a backwards tour."

"We started this tour on the West Coast," he says. "We always looked forward to going towards the sun, ending the tour in California. But we had some good shows early at the L.A. Forum. It was like going off the deep end early; it set a high standard."

Ralphs says this tour has been markedly different from the first time Bad Company ventured out as a headline act, nearly four years ago, on the strength of a debut album that rocketed to the top of the charts.

"The first tour, we were trying to make a statement. Now, the wave of newness is gone. It's the most nontour tour we've ever done."

Bad Company has its own jet for transportation on the nontour tour, but Ralphs insists that the plane and other tour accoutrements are not used for flamboyant effect.

"Our plane is more homey than Led Zeppelin's. We're more down-to-earth. We take limousines because in the United States it's expected. I'd be just as happy to walk, but then they'd think I was a hick. It's an image. I care about an image on stage, but, as for myself, I don't care about going to the right parties or dressing in the right clothes.

"We will always have simplicity. It's inherent in the way we play. We've never been a great production band — with horns, strings. We're into touring, and we want to be able to play everything on an album. Who wants an orchestra on the road? But we can play other stuff, if people will hear us out. We don't want to play it safe. That's definitely not the object of Bad Company. We do what we want to do, even though there's lots of pressure to deliver.

"With our first album, there was no pressure. But then, with our fast success, it was, 'What are you going to do this time?' What I care about is what we're putting out. I don't want to get into a commercial cop-out. I don't want to be sucked in by that."

To reassure themselves that they could just enjoy playing for people without the vast machinery of the record industry — touring, promotion and the like — they gave a Christmas show at a tiny hall in England where they first got together. They were billed as Rough Diamond (another group has taken the name now), and they did things like Sam and Dave music, rock 'n' roll classics like "Sweet Little Sixteen," Ralphs recalls.

"We're in a good position, and we don't intend to let it slip. The live show is better than ever. We were never into production like Pink Floyd. We didn't want it to take away from the music. That lasts. Floyd is just four anonymous men with special effects. It could be a record playing up there. We put ourselves across, rather than a laser.

"The next album must be the best we've ever done." (And they've done four — "Bad Company," "Straight Shooter," "Run With the Pack" and "Burnin' Sky," their latest.) "Rock groups come and go in a year now. We want to stick around, like Led Zeppelin. We can't overdo it — Elton John did, and it became shallow for him. And we can't rework old formulae — we must broaden to last."

Broadening for Ralphs means "writing things that are more meaningful musically and lyrically." The recording of "Burnin' Sky," he says, was not done under conditions conducive to meaningful writing.

"We'd just come off a 77-city tour, and when you finish a tour you don't want to see the others for a while. Two weeks later we were in the studio with only sketchy ideas. I enjoyed it, but on the next album I want to do broader things."

So far, the album hasn't sold as well as the first three and it drew mixed reviews — partially, Ralphs says, because many critics misunderstood parts of it.

"The reggae number, 'Everything I Need,' was tongue-in-cheek, a sendup. Everyone else was trying seriously to do reggae — the Rolling Stones' attempt on their 'Black and Blue' album was pathetic. I'd been to the Caribbean and heard the real thing, so we decided to do it with humor. Lots of things we do with a nod and a wink. With the awards and acclaim, you could get your ego blown up; but we bring each other back down."

Ralphs says he's happy now, personally and professionally, but the success hasn't come free:

"Bad Company is what I want. It's hard to get the right chemistry together, and we don't have any internal problems. It's done me more good than bad.

"I've had to sacrifice my personal life. My marriage broke up. It's hard to do two things properly at once, and the group needed 200 per cent. I would never do that again. Now I value my personal life — it's important to be happy. You have to make sacrifices to achieve your ambitions, so it's very gratifying when people cheer you."

Ralphs has a farm about 40 miles from London, where he likes to "go out and look at my field." He rides a dirt bike and hangs out at the pubs with friend Alvin Lee of Ten Years After, and he revels in the history of the region — he once lived in a cottage built in 1475.

And if Bad Company's good fortune should end soon — though all signs are against that happening — what would Ralphs do?

"I'd always write and perform. I'm strong enough that I wouldn't do anything like withdraw into drugs. We've had the groupies, the drugs, all the rest. We don't need them anymore. If it ended, I'd just go home. I'm a survivor."

4 soloists interesting if uninspired

By Jim Cox

Four soloists provided an interesting, if not inspired, performance Friday of concertos by Franz Joseph Haydn,

REVIEW

Frank Martin and Francis Poulenc at Saint Cross Episcopal Church in Hermosa Beach.

Backed by a proficient 27-member string orchestra (with two oboes and two French horns added) under the direction of John Wright, the featured musicians included harpsichordist Malcolm Hamilton, organist Jack Miller, pianist Sherryl James-Voss and harpist Lou Anne Neill.

The most cohesive performance was of the program's opening work, the Haydn concerto in D for harpsichord and orchestra.

In the other two compositions, the often mechanical conducting of Wright resulted in performances that were at times strained, dragged out and expressionless.

The performance of the Martin "Petite Symphonie Concertante," written for double string orchestra, harpsichord, piano and harp, was dull. James-Voss and Neill both performed well, but Wright's conducting gave no shape to the work.

The program concluded with an on-again, off-again playing of Poulenc's D-minor concerto for organ, orchestra and tympani. Again, the soloist was restricted by the constraints of the conductor.

At times the playing was effective, mostly when the tempo was fairly quick. However, the slow passages were too frequently dreary and disjointed.

Throughout the concert the members of the orchestra demonstrated their versatility and ability to perform with precision and in tune.

Beatty paging Robert Young

Warren Beatty wants Robert Young as his co-star in the remake of the movie "Here Comes Mr. Jordan."

It's the title role he's offering, that of an angel called Mr. Jordan who comes down to earth. The role was originally played by Claude Rains.

Is Young interested? He told Warren: "There's one thing I've learned. I never say 'yes' until I've seen the script. But if the script is as good as you say it is, send it to me, and I'll do it."

Crops 'pushed' to human limit

New basic farm research urged

By Boyce Rensberger
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In recent years American farm productivity has leveled off or even declined in some cases, and experts say the reason is that the applied research that once led to steadily increasing yields has nearly depleted its storehouse of basic knowledge of how plants grow.

It is time, experts say, to learn more about the fundamental aspects of how plants capture solar energy and use it to assemble atoms of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen into food. Only then, they say, can scientists find new ways of manipulating the inner workings of corn, rice, wheat, soybean and other plants to push yields above present levels.

After more than a quarter-century of spectacular increases, the average national yield per acre of corn began declining dramatically in 1972, according to statistics compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Sorghum yields have fallen similarly. Yields of wheat and soybeans have largely failed to gain for most of this decade.

ACCORDING to a major report on overcoming world hunger, submitted to President Carter last week by the National Research Council, an essential step toward such a goal is an increase in both the funding and scope of research sponsored by the Department of Agriculture. The department's research programs have been criticized as slow to take advantage of new avenues of scientific inquiry.

The report also urged a major change in the way the department's money is spent.

The panel of top agricultural scientists who produced the report, entitled "World Food and Nutrition Study: The Potential Contributions of Research," said the department needed a $120-million increase (20 per cent) for its research expenditures for the first year and additional $60-million increases in each of the following four years.

The panel also recommended that half the increased funds be given out in grants for which any scientist could compete. This is the predominant method by which the government supports other areas of research. In agriculture, however, experiment stations at land-grant colleges have done most of the publicly supported agricultural research since 1887, when the system was founded.

Although these stations and the department's in-house laboratories are responsible for much of the spectacular growth in American farm productivity of past decades, the panel felt they were not adequately exploiting new research opportunities.

BY OPENING food and nutrition research to the entire scientific community on a competitive basis, new ideas are more likely to be developed, said Dr. E. T. York, who headed one of the panel's study teams, in an interview.

"Over recent years we've been depleting our basic storehouse of knowledge," he said. "We need to bring into food and nutrition research segments of the scientific community that haven't considered themselves part of this effort." York, who has been department administrator and head of a land-grant college of agriculture, is chancellor of the State University System of Florida.

The panel also urged that the department broaden its outlook from the needs of American farmers to problems of worldwide food and nutrition. Such an approach, York said, would be of benefit to the United States as well as to other countries.

The report notes that cooperative research with scientists in developing countries has yielded new plant varieties that proved beneficial for American farmers. Among examples cited in the report were the introduction of a virus-resistant grass from South America that has restored pasture lands in the southeastern states, the adaptation of Nigerian beans of high nutritional quality by Wisconsin farmers and the discovery of two soybean varieties from China that promise to permit large-scale soybean farming in Southern states.

One of the major directions in which new food research should move, the panel said, is toward crops and farming methods that require little or no added resources to exploit. In the past, many of the new "green revolution" plant varieties required fertilizers or irrigation on both to perform their best. Such costly inputs excluded many poor farmers from the benefits.

New advances, the report said, should rely more on built-in plant capacities such as photosynthesis and the ability to convert atmospheric nitrogen gas into fertilizer.

Such advances would also benefit American farmers, many of whom are already pushing plant growth to the maximum possible with fertilizer. Also, since nitrogen fertilizer is made from fossil fuels, its supply is limited, and its price is certain to rise over the long run.

Among the promising new avenues of research that the panel said should be pursued were the following:

— Increasing the amount of atmospheric nitrogen converted by plants into nutrient.

— Increasing the efficiency with which plant leaves use sunlight to synthesize food.

— Identifying plants with resistance to disease, drought, acid soils, temperature extremes and other environmental stresses.

Parents reaching out with love

THE GERDISES, Michael and Katherine with their three children John, left, Becky and Paul, founded Thursday's Child as a way of coping with the problems of raising a handicapped child.

Monday's child is fair of face.
Tuesday's child is full of grace.
Wednesday's child is full of woe.
Thursday's child has far to go...

It's just a familiar aphorism, an ordinary nursery rhyme that has some truth to it.

Everyone knows that not all children are born complete with all of their fingers, toes, arms and legs, with sound hearts and gifted minds. Many are born with physical, mental or a combination of both handicaps.

Their problems make even an ordinary achievement something special. They are among Thursday's children.

And in the Long Beach-South Bay area, Thursday's Child is also a support group for the parents of handicapped children who find their roles as parents even more challenging and pressured than those of parents of "normal" children.

Devoid of doctors or other medical professionals, the group brings together parents trying to overcome their own fears and angers so that they can accept, help and love their imperfect children.

Much as Alanon works with the families of alcoholics, Thursday's Child deals with the stress placed on families because one or more members is handicapped. And they are the first to admit they are not therapists or experts on handicaps.

THEIR GOAL is to see and love their children as people first, and handicapped, second.

Started two years ago at Children's Hospital in Los Angeles, the organizaton now has chapters throughout the area. Although the Long Beach group presently is composed of only four couples, it is growing.

"We just see a need to help parents," say Michael and Katherine Gerdis of Long Beach. "Parents plan for a baby and expect a cute little Gerber baby. When something happens, it throws them."

At Thursday's Child meetings, couples share their individual problems in coping and caring for a child who has a mental or physical disorder. They role play, they educate themselves to increase their awareness, they bare their thoughts and feelings knowing that everyone there has been down the same painful path.

Founders Michael and Katherine Gerdis, for example, started the group because of the difficulties they encountered as parents.

Now the parents of two sons and a daughter, another daughter, Jennifer, was born five years ago with Down's Syndrome and congenital heart defects.

DOWN'S SYNDROME, also known as Mongolism, is mental retardation often accompanied by physical aberrations such as slanted eyes, a broad skull, large tongue and unusual creases on the palms of the hands.

Experts attribute the condition to the presence of an extra chromosome in the blood cells. Most Down's children never reach more than a 30-60 IQ. Normal children have 90-110.

A Lloyd's Bank branch manager, Michael Gerdis is a gaunt, restive man with fair features that contrast his wife Katherine's dark hair and full figure.

Their home in eastern Long Beach is a modest tract house almost swallowed up by the lush, leafy trees and flowering shrubs. Inside, the living room is sparsely furnished, but comfortable and pictures of their four children grace a shelf near the front door.

The wheat-colored carpeting pads the feet of toddlers Becky and John as they scurry about dressed in pajamas-with feet. Ten month-old baby Paul sleeps in a crib a few steps away.

Eventually, Becky and John are reluctantly led off to bed, but an occasional giggle or muffled sniffle can be heard from the other side of the hall door.

IT IS HERE that the Gerdises elected to bring their daughter, Jennifer, five years ago against the advice of their doctor.

In the past, most parents have been advised to place their children in an institution and go on with their lives. The Gerdises say Thursday's Child encourages parents to bring their children home first for a trial period and then make a decision.

Employer rates federal job program

By Linda Zink
Staff Writer

Cautious optimism might be the best way to describe Stan Wood's feelings about his involvement with an on-the-job training program for disadvantaged Long Beach residents made possible by federal funding through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Wood, president of Coin Meter-West in Long Beach, is cautious because in his opinion "a month is too soon to tell how things are really going to work."

At the same time, however, Wood is hopeful his experiment will be a success and says that thus far he has been "reasonably happy" with the employes referred to him through CETA.

"The fact is that it's tough to find people who are willing to take any initiative no matter where you get them," said Wood, who explained that high turnover among employes was one reason he decided to participate in the CETA program.

"So when I heard about the program, I thought 'Why not give it a try? It sounds like a pretty good deal.'"

WOOD, WHOSE COMPANY installs and maintains coin operated laundry equipment, said he first learned about the program through a radio spot announcement which promised pre-screening of applicants by a CETA contracting agency and federal funding of half a successful candidate's salary for the first two to six months of his or her employment.

For his part, Wood, as an employer, would guarantee training for the new employe and would supply the CETA contracting agency with a weekly report of the employe's progress.

Additionally, spokespersons for CETA said, jobs filled through a CETA contracting agency must be permanent positions which do not end when funding is discontinued and which require only minimal skills and little prior work experience.

"The jobs I had in mind aren't difficult jobs but it does take time to learn them," said Wood, whose contract with the Community and Human Resources Agency (CHARO) Career Center in Long Beach provides for 14 weeks of federal funding. "I'd say it takes a good six months of training before a man is really capable of being out on his own.

"When you consider the time it takes to train the person, plus the cost of uniforms, health insurance and other fringe benefits, you realize you've made a sizeable investment. Offsetting some of that expense was one of the reasons the CETA program appealed to me."

Wood's call to the CETA Intake Center, 222 E. Third St., led to a visit by a representative from the Long Beach CHARO Career Center, which is a regional branch of an East Los Angeles-based community action agency and one of three local groups with major contracts to develop on-the-job training positions with Southland employers.

IN THE INITIAL interview, Wood outlined his needs and the type of work that was involved. A short time later, six candidates referred by CHARO were interviewed for the jobs.

"To be perfectly honest with you, I wasn't impressed at all with a couple of them," said Wood. "They just weren't the type of people I had in mind.

"But at least two of them looked pretty good. And as I said, I haven't been too disappointed."

Wood acknowledged that while involvement with the CETA program has necessitated some additional paper work, he believes the requirements haven't been excessive.

"I guess having to deal with a lot of red tape is one of the reasons people have turned off on federal programs. But I haven't found that to be the case. All I've had to do is tell the two supervisors involved to fill out a brief work progress report every week."

As things look right now, Wood is optimistic that the two CETA-referred trainees will develop into productive, long-term employes. A while back, he explained, "I had some problems with one of them. But I think we've gotten things straightened out now and I think things are going to be OK."

Wood, whose firm has grown from four employes four years ago to 28 today, said the pre-screening offered by CETA contracting agencies can be a real plus for a small firm like his, which does not have the manpower to do recruiting and interviewing on a continuing basis.

He tends to think he might use the program again — and that he would probably recommend it to another employer.

"MY PERSONAL FEELING is that the best way to get a good employe is by word of mouth — you know, someone who works for me knows somebody who wants to work here.

"But you can't always fill a job that way. And I've had no success at all with advertising in the newspapers. So this is probably a pretty good deal."

Mike Froke, project manager of the the CHARO Career Center in Long Beach, said many employers cite the screening and referral aspect of the CETA program as a strong selling point. Froke added that

WHY a career at REX L. HODGES REALTY COMPANY

BERNIE JONES
Vice-President, Gen. Sales Mgr.

WHY A CAREER AT REX L. HODGES REALTY?

Answer: You have more going for you. "IT IS JUST THAT SIMPLE," stated Bernie Jones, Vice-President/General Sales Manager. Rex L. Hodges Realty has been in business since 1929. That's over 48 years in the Long Beach/Orange County basin. We are a "Family of Companies." Today more than ever before we all value a family relationship. Our family extends from Robert C. Westmyer, owner of Rex L. Hodges Realty, to one of our newer salespersons Steve Smith, who recently joined Rex L. Hodges at our Westminster Village office. Steve formerly owned a large hamburger franchise. Everyday we are striving to make "Our Company" a better Company.

The Real Estate market is pretty well saturated in every city, so there has to be reason to choose REX L. HODGES REALTY and after 48 years in this business we know what the differences are: We also feel the programs we offer to salespersons, and also to the customers, who will be selling their homes, and the persons who will purchase homes in 1977 will enable you, the salesman, to provide 100% coverage. When Rex L. Hodges Realty offers the services, we are aware we have that extra edge coupled with 48 years of sound, confident service. A solid family atmosphere and you have a winner.

JUST LOOK AT THE DIFFERENCES

Growth: We recently opened our new Seal Beach office on Pacific Coast Highway. Juanita Newman, the manager, is a fine example of the great opportunity at Rex L. Hodges company.

If management is in your plans, plan a career with Rex L. Hodges Realty.

In 1976 Rex L. Hodges Realty purchased Pacific Bay Real Estate in Northern California serving the East Bay area including Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond. Now! That's growth, and we are negotiating with others at this very time.

Equity Loans! Your customers can take advantage of a "no payment" part of their equity loan and repay when their home has sold.

Training and Counselling: A professional never stops training and retraining. A license allows you to sell. Rex L. Hodges Realty shows you how to match the right buyer and the right home, and how to market that owner's home to get it sold. Real Estate is a very rewarding profession and yet there are many different problems that arise, and when a Company has fellows like Earl J. Christensen, Vice-President, and Terry Mulholland, Vice-President, you have two of the finest minds in General Real Estate in the State of California. When you join Rex L. Hodges you join our family and families seem to have a way of overcoming any or all of the difficulties that arise.

Trade in Program: An absolute must in the 70's. Our Trade-In Program is not some hit or miss proposition. It works. We pioneered "Trade-Ins" in 1929. Think about it.

H & H Development Co. H & H Development Co. is a subsidiary of Rex L. Hodges, a part of our family. We build apartments, condominiums, shopping centers and medical offices. We will also build for your clients on their buildable lots. All H & H properties are covered by a Builder's One Year Warranty. Another good reason to start your career at Rex L. Hodges.

HOME WARRANTIES:

When you purchase your next home specify you want an American Home Shield Warranty. (*This one year warranty protects your home against the defects or malfunction of the major systems, appliances, and hot water heater, garbage disposal, dishwasher and last but not least waste and drainline stoppages). So call the nearest Rex L. Hodges office and specify that you want an American Home Shield One Year Warranty and leave the shopping to us.

When you sell your home please remember that when your home is listed with Rex L. Hodges Realty, if you so desire, your home will be covered by American Home Shield Warranty. Ask the salesperson about the details. Better still call and we will deliver the brochures with information. Well, we ran out of space, but I hope that maybe we have told the Rex L. Hodges story and remember there is a difference when you join our family.

Cordially yours,
Bernie Jones

COMIC Mel Brooks — he and Alfred Hitchcock have an understanding about his new film spoof.

AUTHOR Lillian Roth of "I'll Cry Tomorrow" — former actress not finding success in marriage.

Q: Is it true that Mel Brooks is doing a spoof of Alfred Hitchcock movies? If so, what does Hitchcock think about it?

A: "Hitchcock seems very pleased about my tribute," says Brooks of his film, "High Anxiety." "He realized that I'm not making fun of him or his films."

In the movie, Brooks will portray "a psychiatrist with a fear of heights who heads the Psycho-Neurotic Institute for the Very Very Nervous. A bellboy attacks me in the shower with a wet newspaper, and birds are always following me. They don't harm me, but they leave little greenish white messages all over me."

Q: Is it true that someone has invented a dripless ice cream cone?

A: Here's the scoop, and it's a double-dipper: Michigan State University researchers, by altering the emulsion content and the stabilizing system of ice cream, have slowed the melting rate from a maximum of 20 minutes to a maximum of 40 minutes. They are now seeking a patent for their product.

Q: I'm curious about Eva Gabor's new fashion line — did she really design the clothes herself?

A: Although Luis Estevez did the actual designing, the Hungarian star says she had a hand in the final product. "I suppose these tall skinny models are beautiful to look at," she says, "but most customers are not six-and-a-half feet tall, hipless and bosomless. Most women are just like me — size 8, with a bosom and a fanny, maybe a little too much around the hips — so the clothes were cut accordingly. My figure tells the world I'm a woman."

Q: I remember reading about some farmer who put vitamins in his chickens' drinking water to get bigger eggs. Was he successful?

A: One of his hens laid a 5½-ounce egg but the Columbus, Ohio, farmer found people were rather chicken about buying giant eggs so he withdrew the vitamins. The hen which laid the super egg, incidentally, was unable to stand for several days after her extraordinary feat.

Q: I read recently that Glenn Ford had finally married his longtime girl friend — then read elsewhere that he hadn't. What gives?

A: The rumor about the marriage started in Europe, where Ford began introducing Cynthia Hayward as "my wife," and was later published as fact in many U.S. newspapers. Later, he admitted, "It was just for fun — and because we had less trouble registering in European hotels."

Ford, 61, and Cynthia, 29, have lived together for seven years and might have been married, except that Ford's mother and his son, Peter, are said to disapprove.

Q: Is the new California law limiting the amount of water in toilets going to save enough water to be worth the hassle?

A: Flushing a conventional toilet, invented in 1872 by Thomas Crapper, requires an average of 6 gallons of water, compared to 3½ gallons per flush in the new toilets. Californians flush away an estimated 27 billion gallons a year — enough to flood 840,000 football fields a foot deep.

Q: Whatever happened to Lillian Roth?

A: The tempestuous star of the 1930s who chronicled her battle with alcoholism in "I'll Cry Tomorrow," doesn't have too much to laugh about today. She was divorced from four husbands before marrying fellow AA member Burt McGuire in 1955. McGuire has since walked out on her, and she now lives in a small town outside New York with nine dogs. She is also writing another book, "And Now The Final Song."

TWOSOME, actor Glenn Ford and Cynthia Hayward — reports of their marriage grossly exaggerated.

Q: Is it true that Rock Hudson has agreed to a $2 million out-of-court settlement because of an auto accident?

A: Although Hudson's former chef was behind the wheel of the actor's sports car when it missed a turn at 100 m.p.h. near Palm Springs, Hudson and his insurance company have reached a massive settlement with a 31-year-old schoolteacher who was permanently crippled when he was ejected from the passenger seat. Totally paralyzed, the teacher requires $5,000 a month for constant care.

ACTOR Rock Hudson — probably won't loan out his car to employes again.

ACTRESS Eva Gabor — uses own figure as model to create clothes for new design line.

Melina Mercouri is back working in Greece

ATHENS — Melina Mercouri is in jail. It's not what you think. No, she's not a prisoner. Only the jail is real. Melina is making a movie here, directed by her husband Jules Dassin, the first film they've made in Greece since the fall of the military dictatorship.

And here's the irony: they're making it in the fortress-like Koriadalos Prison, where the colonels who made their lives a living hell for eight years of exile are themselves behind bars. It's a final retribution, and the feeling is so eerie Melina is almost stoic with awe.

Melina is sitting on an iron cot in the concrete cell that once belonged to Patakos, the same colonel who took away her citizenship and forced from her those tearful words that have now become part of Greek history: "I am born Greek. I will die Greek. You were born a Fascist, you will die a Fascist!"

Across the hall, a tiny ray of light emerges from the door of another cell, where Papadopoulos, the dreaded leader of the junta, was jailed. Melina cannot rest until she sees that one, too. A jailer with a ring of iron keys unlocks the door and she peers inside. It's just like the other cell. She smiles wryly.

"It's like a third-class hotel room. Except for the bars on the windows. I don't think it's enough punishment for the colonels. I am very nervous here. For me, I could have been in one of these cells like a snap of the fingers."

MEMORIES flood the prison. Koridalos is in the heart of Piraeus, where Melina ran for a seat in Parliament in the Greek elections. It is the same prison where she attended the trials of the colonels on a journalist's pass after returning to Greece when her citizenship was restored with honor two years ago. The colonels have been moved to another prison across the street.

Now, the wing of cells where Melina is filming are empty, but in the distance you can hear the wails and moans of women prisoners. Some of them are Americans, arrested for dope smuggling. Nobody visits them except a priest from the American Embassy.

The woman who serves Melina coffee is a trustee, serving life imprisonment for bashing in her husband's head with a mortar and pestle until it was the size of a pin. She smiles warmly, then shuffles back down the empty corridor until her footsteps disappear inside the echoing halls of the prison.

Melina shudders. "Every day when I was in exile, I had the fear of going to prison. Then I learned from the others who stayed behind to be tortured that prison was a relief. It was the end of torture. The real terror was the military police.

"Now they are all out free. Only a few of the colonels, the leaders, remain behind bars. They have television. They will probably be paroled in a few months or a few years. And life goes on. It doesn't seem fair, somehow."

Melina shrugs, then returns to the first cell. It has a stand-up toilet, a sink on the wall, a shelf for a newspaper, and an iron cot covered with an army blanket.

There is a small filing cabinet that holds a comb, a mirror and a thermos for water. The only window is set in heavy steel casement, and the only color in the drab cell comes from religious pictures, crucifixes, icons and the Virgin Mary on the wall.

rex reed

"ONCE YOU'RE locked in, you either blaspheme — or you pray!" says Melina. Through the bars of the cell, one sees only grim buildings the color of dirt. And in the distance, a guard with a rifle in the tower.

Beyond, the purple sweep of the Greek mountains. It looks a bit like the backlot of a Hollywood studio. "Let's lock the door and see if it opens again," says Melina, mischievously.

An electrician closes the door. We are flooded with darkness. The Virgin Mary's eyes seem to light up in the gloom. Then the door is opened again and the light comes in. "Ah, you see — I would survive!" She seems relieved.

Ellen Burstyn pokes her head in the door. "It doesn't seem as bad as the cells we see in American jails, but once they lock the door shut, you could get claustrophobia real fast." Burstyn is Melina's co-star.

When she arrived, she shocked the Greeks when her chauffeur pointed out the Parthenon and Ellen asked: "And where is the Acropolis?" It made the Greek newspapers. Now things are running smoothly. All is forgiven. The two co-stars get along like sisters. And if the rumors on the set come true, they could both get Oscar nominations for this one.

THE MOVIE IS tentatively called "Maya and Brenda." It's about a famous Greek actress who returns to her native country, after reaching international stardom, to play Medea on the stage.

As a publicity stunt, she is persuaded to visit an American woman who has been imprisoned for murdering her two children, Medea-style, as revenge against an unfaithful husband. The actress is at first compassionate, but then becomes obsessed by the other woman's personality, until the two persons intertwine with dramatic and tragic results.

If it sounds like Ingmar Bergman's "Persona," the resemblance is not entirely coincidental. Jules Dassin admires him greatly. "Bergman was born to make guys like me sorry we didn't take up plumbing," he says modestly. There's a small homage to Bergman in the film where footage from "Persona" is projected, and Dassin is even toying with dedicating the film to him.

But admiration is where the imitation ends and reality begins. The film is entirely original, based on a real case in which a real American killed her children and was imprisoned in Koridalos in 1960. She was kept four years, then released. Now she lives in America, where she's remarried and has two new children.

The names have been changed to protect her, but the prison matrons remember her fondly, and some of them even write to her. This is the part Ellen Burstyn is playing.

GREEK actress Melina Mercouri and her husband, producer Jules Dassin, are making first film in her homeland since her triumphant return after years of exile under the military dictatorship.

MELINA INSISTS she identifies more with the American prisoner than the Greek film star. "I understand how you can love something so completely that you kill for it. I loved Dassin and, ever more, I have loved Greece more than my own life — with an idealism that has become pathological," she says.

Ellen says she doesn't identify with any of that, but does "identify with the pain of being betrayed." She was in India attending a film festival in New Delhi when Jules Dassin contacted her by telegram. Then he called her at her hotel in Paris and discussed the role. Then he sent the script to her home in New York.

"I wanted to like the script because I was dying to go to Greece. Also, it's part of the new revolution that's going on in films. Here at last is a chance to make a movie about two women relating to each other. Melina is really the star.

"My role is small in comparison. I only have two weeks' work. But we should all be able to do big parts, small parts, not be locked into stardom. It's very limiting to do only big parts. I did a tiny part in 'Harry and Tonto" with Art Carney after I was nominated for two Oscars. I don't give a hoot about billing, money or percentages."

She closed in Chekov's "Three Sisters" in Brooklyn, and flew the next day to Athens. The noise from the American Express tours was too much for her in her plush hotel on Constitution Square, so she moved to a bungalow at the beach, an hour from the city.

After she finishes her big dramatic scenes, she travels to the Berlin Film Festival, where she'll be on the jury, then to the Moscow Film Festival, and then to the States, to begin the movie version of her Broadway hit, "Same Time Next Year" with Alan Alda.

Melina has no travel plans, except to bring her wildly successful "Medea" to America for a limited run. "Listen to me," she says soberly. "My life is in Greece now. Dassin was offered more than that to do a revival of 'Can-Can' in Hollywood. Why?

"IN ALL MY life, I have never done anything to prove my talent. For me, 'Never On Sunday' was a contribution because it brought Greece to the world. 'Phaedra' was a small contribution.

"But what else? The world has not seen my 'Medea,' which the critics said revolutionized the Greek theater. The world did not see my 'Streetcar Named Desire.' Only in Greece do they know how to appreciate me.

"Jules is 62. I am 51. At 51, I'm going to move to Hollywood? No, I AM Greece. We have not much money, but I don't want cars and houses and jewels. If I come to America, they want me to sing and dance and give up politics. I can't give up politics. I fear something will happen and — poof! — I will be away making a film and never see Greece again."

Dassin, who after 20-something years with this Greek fury has finally started taking Greek lessons just so he can understand what's going on in his own house, is returning to his old style of filmmaking on the cheap. He has no distributor yet, although the word is out that the film is a winner and he's already getting calls from film festivals.

"I didn't want to turn this film over to the executive auctioneers of Hollywood or the university-bred Scheherazades on Madison Ave. Agents and lawyers are running the business now. My last American film was 'Up Tight' in 1968. My last Hollywood film was 'Night and the City' with Gene Tierney and Richard Widmark in 1949. All those years when I was blacklisted, I learned to make better films for less money in Europe.

"THIS ONE is being made with Melina's money, my money and loans from two friends in France and Switzerland. I financed it in one night. The last film I wrote, about the Lockheed scandal, took me two weeks just to get Ryan O'Neal on the phone. It still has not been made.

"This one is strictly a family film. If the film makes money, our friends who are working on it will not be forgotten. If it fails, we lose everything, but we're all in it together."

It's a far cry from Hollywood moviemaking. Melina goes to the set in a yellow Fiat. An actor friend's BMW is used by Ellen Burstyn. Melina's longtime companion and makeup artist, Anna, is playing her maid in the film. Her best friend Despo is playing her arch-rival. The budget is modest. Melina calls it "Never on Sunday with inflation."

"Never On Sunday" was made for $120,000. The new one will cost $400,000. The production office is downstairs in the apartment building where the Dassins live. Every room in Melina's apartment is used as one of the different sets.

Dassin edits each day's footage on an antique Movieola in the basement. One hundred thousand dollars of the budget goes to Ellen Burstyn. Melina and Jules are working for nothing. The risks are high, but so are the rewards.

"We're doing this one for love," says Dassin.

"And," adds Melina triumphantly, "we're doing it for Greece!"

Training program helps unemployed find jobs

employers also cite the financial benefits as a reason for participating in the program.

"Now, some of the employers we have contracts with aren't interested at all in getting reimbursed for half the employe's wages," said Froke, who explained that assistance with affirmative action problems and the desire to do something positive for individuals and the community are two other reasons employers give for participating in the program. "But I'd have to say that most of them are."

According to Froke, contacts with employers are typically initiated by CETA-funded job developers from either the CHARO Career Center, the Employment Development Department or the United Auto Workers' Long Beach CETA On-The-Job Training Program Department. Experiences such as the one they had with Wood — where the employer made the contact first — are rare.

In most cases, Froke said, job developers "have to do a lot of ice breaking" before they can even arrange for a meeting with the employer.

"There's considerable mistrust of federal programs," Froke said. "Employers have either had bad experiences themselves or have heard about others who have had bad experiences. A lot of our time is spent just making contact."

EVEN SO, AGENCY spokespersons report they've had better-than-average success in developing contracts with employers. Of greater concern right now, in fact, is expanding the trainee referral list so they will be able to meet the needs of the employers with which they have contracts.

"It's really a two-way street," Froke said. "If we had more contracts — and hence more positions to fill — we'd probably have more success in filling them. And if we had more people to send out on interviews, we'd also have more success. It's really a matter of numbers."

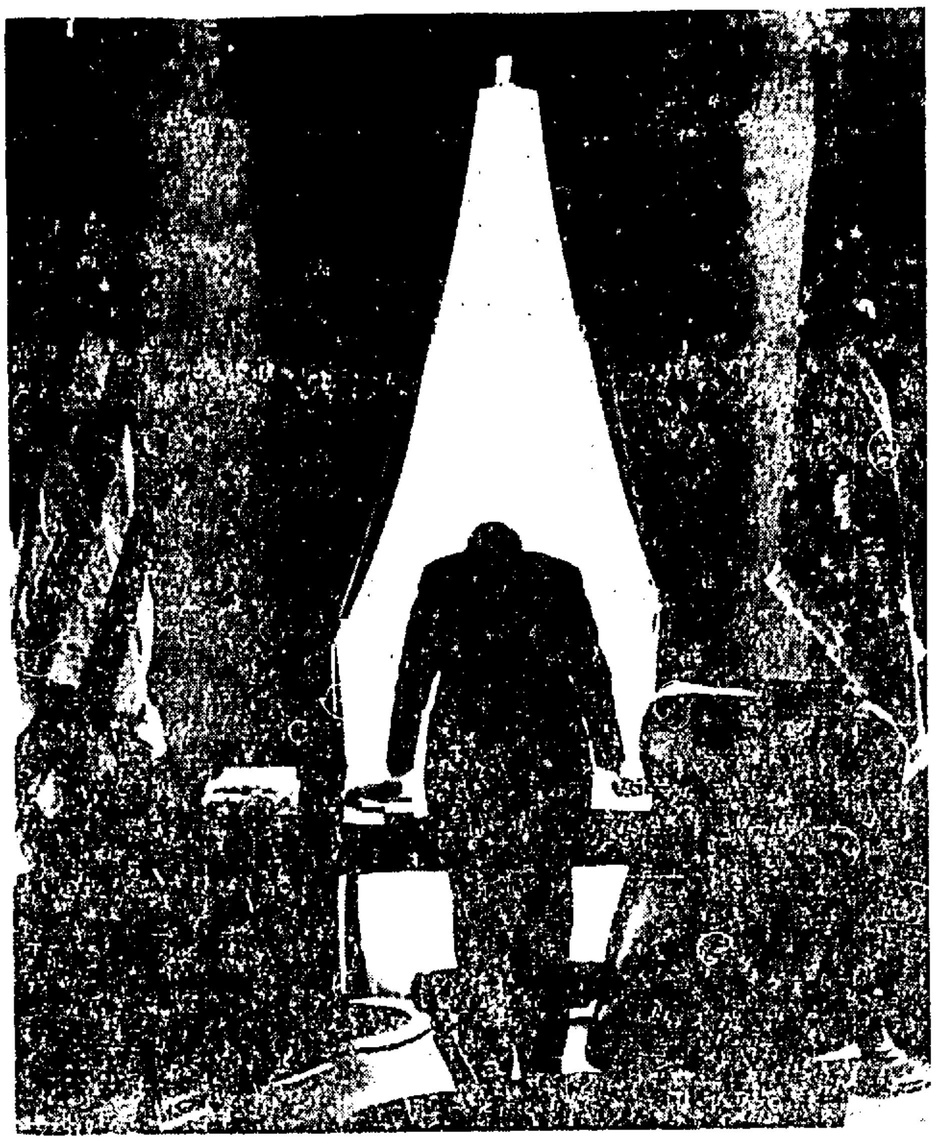
Spokespersons for the agencies agreed that a major problem seems to be that eligible Long Beach residents are not taking advantage of the CETA program.

They estimated that there are approximately 10,000 Long Beach residents who are at or below the poverty line but that only a small percentage — perhaps three per cent — have applied at the CETA Intake Center to participate in any of the several programs being offered.

"And not all of those who are screened at the CETA Intake Center are referred to us," Froke said. "And of those who are referred to us, there is a certain percentage who really don't want to work, can't deal with the transportation or child care problems that may be involved or would rather be enrolled in one of the classroom training programs offered and are just waiting for a place to open up."

One solution to the problem has been for agency representatives to go out in the field to "drum up business," Froke said. Visits to parks and neighborhood centers have proven moderately successful. Froke is optimistic that further effort will continue to pay off.

"In the meantime, on any given day, there might be a dozen or more good jobs open for which employers have agreed to consider our candidates," Froke said. "We know the people are out there who want work. It's a matter of reaching them."



At that moment

Alone at the top

The moment will come to symbolize what he is only beginning to learn now.

Thomas Jefferson called it "a splendid misery"; Harry Truman, "the big white jail"; William Howard Taft, "the loneliest place in the world."

Kidding about the presidency, John F. Kennedy said the job was good, the pay was fine, the working and living conditions were superb, and, besides, it involved only a small commute between home and office.

Not kidding, he said, after two years: "The problems are more difficult than I imagined them to be. The responsibilities placed on the United States are greater than I imagined them to be, and there are greater limitations upon our ability to bring about a favorable result than I had imagined them to be. . . ."

On Feb. 10, 1961, Kennedy has been in the job only three weeks. On this day, which begins at 9 and ends at 8, he sees more than 100 people, singly or in groups, cabinet members, agency heads, diplomats, congressmen, staff assistants, a variety with a variety of purposes, ranging from the Mardi Gras queen to the director of the CIA.

At 5:01 p.m., awaiting the French ambassador, the President rises from his desk. Sitting in one place for more than 15 minutes makes him restless because of his back brace. He goes to the window overlooking Dwight Eisenhower's putting green and opens a newspaper to the editorial page.

George Tames, who is shooting a day in the life of layout for the New York Times, moves in from an open doorway where he has been watching his prey. He is not thinking of the ages or the burdens of the presidency but only that here is a dramatic picture, the man silhouetted against the twilight and framed by the drapes and the flags.

He shoots three versions. The president looks up. "George," he asks, "where do you suppose this columnist gets all this junk?"

COUPLES Jack and Clare Miller, left, and Tick and Charlotte Featherstone talk over their problems as parents of handicapped children at a Thursday's Child meeting.

Group aids families of the disabled

sion,'' says Katherine. "But it's necessary to take the child home and try the best you can. If it's not possible, then you have to place the child and let go.

But at least the parents are the ones to make the decision and don't get pressured to do it right after birth."

In the case of her daughter, Katherine Gerdis says she never considered doing otherwise.

"I did mention it (placement in an institution) once for the record, but Michael knew I would never do it," she explains. "Jennifer was my child. We decided to take her home and that if it was too difficult, we would consider an institution."

The Gerdises are quick to explain, though, that not all children with handicaps can make it at home in the family situation.

MANY CHILDREN are so severely retarded and handicapped that their presence places too much of a strain on other family members. In addition, most families cannot give the kind of specialized care often needed.

The adjustments the Gerdises made to their infant daughter were mixed.

"Adjusting is hard," they agree. "At first, just the shock of it, that the baby you expected isn't perfect.

"It's like the whole world turns on end," adds Michael Gerdis wistfully. "You run the whole gamut of emotions."

"And immediately, you start thinking way into the future about the child's life. I know I did," says Katherine.

Mrs. Gerdis had an easier time accepting her daughter. Married eight years before she got pregnant, Katherine Gerdis says she was hungry for a child.

"We started with husband-coached childbirth and I had been to a La Leche League meeting," she explains. "It (breast feeding) was the one thing I could do for Jennifer. It is a good bonding for mother and child.. and father."

(La Leche League is an organization which encourages mothers to breast feed their children to promote good mothering.)

ANOTHER ASPECT that helped, they say, was the intensive care nurseries at Children's Hospital where they were able to help care for their daughter during the month Jennifer was there.

"We were able to hold and touch her. I didn't hold her for the first time until she was six days old," says Mrs. Gerdis. "And until that time, she was just 'that' baby."

But even all of those elements couldn't help Michael Gerdis with the inner turmoil he felt. It was not until Jennifer was 15 months old, after the birth of their second daughter Becky, that Michael Gerdis says he finally accepted his daughter and her handicaps.

"It was eight years before Katherine became pregnant and by then I was quite comfortable and I wasn't overjoyed.

"Then I got excited during the pregnancy. But when Jennifer was born retarded, it just compounded everything."

Katherine Gerdis left the hospital the day after Jennifer's birth because she felt the atmosphere was too depressing. On the way home, she and her husband stopped at a library to find material on Down's Syndrome that might give them hope. Instead, they found the books badly outdated, featuring pictures of children so grossly deformed that they sunk into even deeper depression.

"For a long time after that Michael refused to read and educate himself about our child," says Katherine. "I wonder if we had had some positive input if he would have accepted Jennifer sooner. There was no group when she was born and it was several months before we talked to other couples."

What Katherine and Michael Gerdis went through was common for parents who have been told their son or daughter is handicapped.

THURSDAY'S Child terms it a "grieving process," a seven-stage emotional trauma ranging from the initial shock and confusion to anger, guilt and eventually, understanding. The time spent in each step varies from a few minutes to a few years.

"The key is to keep moving," says Katherine. "Not every step is taken."

During the grieving process, anger and guilt are normal. An aggressive partner usually vents the anger on the spouse or doctor while a passive partner turns the feelings inside as guilt.

Thursday's Child deals with these feelings offering parents sympathy, empathy and support. Although the group deals with parents whose children are beyond the newborn age, they try to provide positive input as early as possible to hopefully decrease the grieving time.

"It's important that the parent relate to the child," says Michael Gerdis. "For me, it was impossible to ignore the fact that Jennifer was retarded. Her retardedness always loomed up."

Eventually, by working out his feelings, Michael Gerdis says he learned to love his daughter and enjoy her life with the family.

"Jennifer was really a neat little girl," he says fondly. "And if Becky had been born retarded, I know I could have managed it.

"I hadn't really wanted children and when Katherine became pregnant with Becky nine months after Jennifer was born, I wasn't enthusiastic," he continues. "When John came, I was still upset. But by the time Paul came, I had found that children were a joy. I had come full circle."

THAT FULL circle brought the Gerdises and their family a deeper understanding of life, they say. They had felt that they had beaten the handicap and its limitations.

Then Jennifer Gerdis died in March 1976 after heart surgery.

When she died, the Gerdises found that despite their understanding, they were undergoing the grieving process again. Jennifer's death was unexpected and sudden.

"We've only had the one experience and since Jennifer's death, I've done a lot of reading," says Michael. "I had avoided death; it's not a popular subject and I didn't know what to do because it's not dealt with openly.

"We see death on TV all of the time, but it's not real. It doesn't have the same depth of emotion and I wasn't prepared for that."

Katherine says that following Jennifer's death she and her husband felt stress in their marriage. She wanted to talk about Jennifer, he couldn't. "We were in different places with our grief."

Finding that Thursday's Child wasn't enough to help them through their daughter's death, the Gerdises activated a second group, an extension of one they heard about in Detroit called First Sunday.

FIRST SUNDAY works with parents whose children are terminally ill or who have died.

"You know, parents never expect their children to die before them," says Katherine Gerdis. "If they do, it's a double loss. They grieve for the loss of the child and the loss of the expectations."

Now more than a year after Jennifer's death, the Gerdises are active in both Thursday's Child and First Sunday even though they no longer have handicapped children. They are helping other parents like themselves live fuller lives without remorse and anger.

They are hoping their groups gain more members and wider acceptance, especially with doctors who are wary of their intentions, says Michael. Thursday's Child can be contacted by writing P. O. Box 920, Cerritos 90701.

They also want to see a change in the image people have of the handicapped.

"Our society is geared to perfection," say the Gerdises. "The achieving daughter can marry a doctor. A son can become a lawyer. But when a child is handicapped, it's all wiped away. Everything is destroyed.

"THERE'S A great need for people to be concerned for other people. For awareness. We're a big society, all doing our own thing and no one really cares. If we could all be more concerned, particularly for handicapped children, we would not have that difficult a time."

The Gerdises say they have never regretted bringing their daughter home with them. Katherine Gerdis says she feels the experience has made her a better parent to her other three children.

Michael Gerdis says his only real fear is that one of the other children will die, but he's learning to cope.

In fact, they contend that dealing with Jennifer and her problems has made them more sensitive, understanding individuals.

"We learned to accept, love and care for people without qualifying or restricting our feelings," says Michael Gerdis. "I'm more comfortable with myself now than I was five years ago. Jennifer kicked us out of a rut and got us growing.

"We still have our difficult moments, but these last five years have been really neat. Being open with Jennifer helped me be more open and caring with other people .. and that's what life's all about."

Opening doors a matter of courtesy

It's odd that one of the biggest points of confusion in our lives is the lack of knowing how to go through doors and who should go first.

There are a lot of Me Firsters who have no doubt at all about who goes first. He or she goes first and let's go of the door right in the face of any oncoming person. As Me Firsters knock people aside in their relentless pursuit of entry, one may have fantasy hopes at times that they will plunge headlong into a pool of boiling water on the other side of the door.

According to protocol, a man opens the door for a lady and lets her go ahead of him. He then holds the door for anyone else in their party. A host and hostess wave their guests through the door into their dining room or into the restaurant.

When two women are at a door, the very much younger woman opens it and holds it for a very much older woman to pass through (but better watch those age differences — a slightly older woman might be insulted). Two women of about the same age would leave it to the one reaching the door first.

An employe waves his or her boss through the door first, regardless of age or sex. In other words, who opens the door for whom is a delicate matter of deference, something parents should teach their children from the time they are toddlers.

I'M ALL for following tradition when it makes sense. Anyone — man or woman, old or young — should hold the door for a very old person, a handicapped person, an adult with a baby or toddler, another person with packages or luggage.

In small towns or rural areas, a "thank you" for the opened door is an automatic response. Unfortunately, in most of our large metropolitan areas, the "thank you" is said often in a tone of surprise.

Saying "thank you" as you pass through the door someone else is holding open for you does not require any further conversation, but it is a pleasant, courteous reward to the person who has performed this small act of courtesy.

Of course, in our office world today where people are constantly going in and out of doors, whoever happens to get there first is supposed to open the door and hold it for others coming along. This may well be a woman.

And this woman may very well be the same one who wants her husband or escort to open all doors for her in their lives outside the office. That's all right, too.

BUSINESS
YOU WILL WANT TO KNOW THIS

THE LAW SAYS:
ALL FICTITIOUS
NAME STATEMENTS
FILED IN 1972 MUST
BE REFILED IN 1977

AND ALSO: those with changes must be republished at time of refiling

HERE IS THE LAW: —
(Business and Professions Code)

Sec. 17917
(c) Where a new statement is required because the prior statement has expired under subdivision (a) of Section 17920, the new statement need not be published unless there has been a change in the information required in the expired statement

Sec. 17920
(a) Unless the statement expires earlier under subdivision (b) or (c), a fictitious business name statement expires at the end of five years from December 31 of the year in which it was filed in the office of the county clerk.

Sec. 17917
(b) Subject to the requirements of subdivision (a), the newspaper selected for the publication of the statement should be one that circulates in the area where the business is to be conducted.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE FIVE-YEAR FICTITIOUS NAME LAW

1.QUESTION: When do new requirements in the Fictitious Name Law go into effect?
ANSWER: Beginning January 1 1976, all statements filed during 1971 must be refiled with the County Clerk

2.QUESTION: Who must file the required new statement of doing business under a fictitious name?
ANSWER: All individuals, partnerships, trust, corporations and associations which operate under names not their own must refile

3.QUESTION: Is there a statutory fee for refiling?
ANSWER: Yes, by law the County Clerk will charge $10.00.

4.QUESTION: Must statements be published when refiled?
ANSWER: Yes, if there has been any change in the statement as originally filed in 1971

5.QUESTION: What is a Fictitious Firm Name?
ANSWER: One that does not include the surname of the operator, or one that implies the ownership participation of others such as "Brothers, Sons, Associates, Company," or if a corporation owner, a name different from that registered in the Articles of Incorporation.

6.QUESTION: What is the purpose of the fictitious name procedure?
ANSWER: The requirements have been in effect in California since 1872 and are designed to protect the consumer by enabling identity of persons with whom transactions take place

7.QUESTION: Must all firms presently doing business under fictitious names file new statements?
ANSWER: Yes, all must refile under new code sections of the Business and Professions Code, 17950-17930 and also Sections 7540 and 10159.5 and Section 10522.5 of the Business and Professions Code

8.QUESTION: Is it true that a change in the residence address of an individual or general partner doing business under a fictitious name excuses the party at the five year refiling interval from meeting the publication provision?
ANSWER: The requirements for publication with a change in the information is in Section 17917 of the Business and Professions Code. A change in residential address, as well as business address is a "change" in information and will therefore require republication upon renewal at the end of any five year renewal period

9.QUESTION: Must statements filed in 1972 be refiled in 1977, those filed in 1973 in 1978, and so on?
ANSWER: Yes, statements must be refiled every five years.

10.QUESTION: What is the penalty for failure to file and publish?
ANSWER: Evidential proof of priority is established in the event competitors later use or file under the same name. The penalty would be inability to entertain a court action until the law has been complied with. In addition, most banks demand evidence of filing and publication prior to opening an account under a fictitious name.

11.QUESTION: Where are the forms to be obtained for filing and publication?
ANSWER: Free forms are available at this newspaper office or at any office of the County Clerk

12.QUESTION: After January 1, 1976, will all new filings require publication?
ANSWER: Yes

13.QUESTION: What is the process for publishing?
ANSWER: Publication must be made once a week for four weeks in a qualified newspaper circulating in the area of the affected business. Publication must be commenced within 30 days after filing. And proof of publication must be filed with the County Clerk within 30 days after completion of publication

Understanding death of child not easy

dr. walt menninger

Dear Dr. Menninger:

I have just read your article on "How do you face death?" Well, I just wanted to let you know that I faced it a few weeks ago. My son would have been 17 this month.

I don't know how other parents face this. I am just going crazy. It is just awful to have a kid all those years, get him almost grown, and then lose him.

I feel sorry for anyone who has lost a child. Now I know how it is. I have talked to a Father, but that didn't help. Now I don't know what to do.

I can't sleep much. Or eat good either.

I have two other kids — one 14 and one 15½. And I can't have any more. I am 34 years old. I feel at this time that I will never be truly happy since I lost my child.

Can you please tell me what to do about all this. I don't know what to do next to keep my mind

From a sad mother. — D.H

DEAR D.H.:

A letter like yours always leaves me at a loss for words, because the pain resonates within me.

What can anyone say to relieve your pain? Not much, really. Any more than talking to someone who is badly hurt takes away their pain.

You have become a member in a special club — parents who have lost a child. My wife and I are members, though our loss was an infant son.

But we found in the time of our grief that there were many others around us who had a similar experience. And they shared how they gradually came to grips with the loss and again found happiness.

It is awful to lose a child after investing so much of yourself in raising him. To have him suddenly taken just as he is approaching adulthood seems grossly unfair. The pain may be increased because of the particular place your first-born has in your heart as the child who taught you how to be a parent.

Is it really better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all? You have to answer that question now.

And, I hope, you will be able to recall enough of thepleasures in your life and his that made the experience of raising him worth it.

DEPRESSION IS the result of feelings about a loss which cannot be easily expressed — feelings of resentment and anger which are turned inwardly.

Thus you feel down in the dumps, discouraged, hopeless unhappy. And you have trouble sleeping and don't have any appetite.

What's to be done? First, accept the fact that you have been injured seriously, much the same as if you experienced an amputation. A part of you has been ripped away.

After such an injury, you must allow some time for healing. This, too, shall pass.

While you did not feel talking to the priest helped, you may yet find some help in talking to someone else especially helpful may be sharing your feelings with someone who has gone through the same experience, a fellow member of the "club." You can discover you are not so alone in this kind of experience

Often it is helpful to get involved in some activity which keeps you busy. Clean the house from stem to stern. Physical activity and hard work can provide an outlet for angry feelings which may be bottled up by the depression.

Beware of ruminations of guilt or feelings that you somehow did not do all the things you should have done for your son.

If you have a religious commitment, you may find your faith is an important sustaining force. Death is never easy to deal with because it seems beyond any reason to explain.

Faith in a Higher Power overlooking our earthly lives can be reassuring.

Finally, keep your life in perspective. You have two other children. Give them the opportunity to help you find happiness again. While your nest may be suddenly "one-third" empty, it is still two-thirds full.

(Dr. Menninger's most popular writings are now available in his new book, HAPPINESS WITHOUT SEX AND OTHER THINGS TOO GOOD TO MISS. This 204-page cloth-bound book is ideal as a gift to a friend or loved one or as a valuable source in your own personal library. Send only $5.95 (postpaid) to HAPPINESS, Sheed Andrews and McMell, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan. 66201.)

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of Independent, Press-Telegram. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Medicine and You

Focus on tiny babies

One in every 13 babies born each year in the United States is born too soon, too small or both.

These tiny babies (less than five and a half pounds) are called low birth weight infants and account for 70 per cent of all deaths in the first year of life.

Low birth weight is a serious disadvantage, and these babies often have problems handling such vital life functions as breathing, metabolism, excretion and control of body temperatures

A new pamphlet describes the problems these babies face and what measures physicians take to save them. Issued by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, it is entitled "Little Babies: Born Too Soon — Born Too Small."

Mothers at risk often:

—Are under 16 years old.

—Have previously given birth to a low birth weight infant.

—Are undernourished.

—Are suffering from a chronic condition (diabetes and certain infections).

—Smoke cigarettes.

—Are alcoholics or addicted to narcotics

—Have not had regular prenatal care

—Have certain genetic disorders.

Single copies are available free on request to NICHD Office of Research Reporting, Building 31, Room 2A-34, National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md. 20014.

Pregnancy test

All pregnant women past the age of 35 should be offered a test to determine whether their child will be normal, according to a research report

The older mothers have an increased risk of giving birth to mongoloid infants, the report notes. The test should also be given to expectant mothers of all ages who are Rh-negative (a blood type), diabetic, have high blood pressure or have a family history of defective children.

The test, known as amniocentesis, is a highly accurate procedure and is safe for both the mother and the unborn child, says the report. A report on the topic was issued by the National Institute of Child and Human Development, Bethesda, Md.

Amniocentesis involves the extraction and analysis of fluid from the sac surrounding the fetus inside the pregnant woman. It can predict many potential abnormalities

Teens uninformed

Many young persons, college students in particular, lack information about birth control, according to a study in Canada.

A survey in Montreal of 500 undergraduate students shows that 34 per cent had inadequate knowledge. Also, 20 per cent of sexually active females risked unwanted pregnancy in spite of adequate knowledge.

ben zinser

The report says a birth control clinic on campus should help improve student willingness to use contraception.

The report is in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Sweating controlled

Cold probe surgery is being used successfully to curb excessive sweating in the armpits, two doctors report in the British Medical Journal

The first series of patients involved a probe 13 by nine millimeters. Eleven applications were required for each side, with treatment requiring 45 minutes. Later a circular 18 millimeter diameter probe was used, and only seven applications were required. This reduced treatment time to about 30 minutes.

Sweating has been reduced to below normal, and the final cosmetic effect is better than the excision approach, the doctors say.

Free clinic tests for glaucoma

By Ben Zinser
Medical-Science Editor

A free clinic to test for glaucoma, an eye disorder, continues to be held at Pacific Hospital of Long Beach.

The clinic has been held twice a month for the past 17 years.

About 1,000 persons a year are availing themselves of the clinic, according to hospital officials.

Glaucoma, medical observers say, is one of the main causes of blindness in the United States. An estimated 14 million persons suffer from the disease in this country.

One form of the disease causes no pain and results in a gradual loss of vision.

The glaucoma testing clinic at Pacific Hospital is operated as a public service by volunteer physicians and by members of the Pacific Hospital Guild.

THE CLINIC operates throughout the year — on the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Reservations are required.

Glaucoma is characterized by increased pressure inside the eye. The screening test shows whether intraocular pressure is higher than what one would expect.

The eye-pressure test is simple and painless. If this test should turn up suspicious results, the patient is then given a more complex testing procedure called tonography.

This test also is painless and is administered without charge.

Last year, 898 patients were screened in the clinic. Of these, 51 were referred for tonography, the advanced diagnostic procedure. This test ruled out 14 suspected cases of glaucoma. Eight persons were referred to their physicians without the tonography test, and 27 were sent to their doctors for further testing after tonography.

DURING most years, almost one-tenth of tested patients are diagnosed as having glaucoma or as persons who are candidates for the disease.

If the patient wishes it, a free test to determine blood pressure is given. This is done in an effort to find persons who have high blood pressure.

Groups who wish to be tested together are tested by special arrangement. Persons who wish a clinic appointment are asked to telephone Pacific Hospital and ask for "glaucoma clinic information."

One Guild member, Grace Stilgenbauer, has been with the clinic since it was started in 1959. Others participating include Mrs. Lucille Newhall, chairman; and Mmes. Marge Eckman, Dorothy Mandes, Virginia Herron, Dorothy Morton and Dorothy Buser.

ACS sets training sessions

Two training sessions geared for the health educator will be offered by local unit of the American Cancer Society.

A training session in breast self-examination will be given by Yolanda Broady, a volunteer, at 1:30 p. m. July 13 in the board room of the cancer society's Long Beach office at 936 Pine Ave.

Art Scoyni, volunteer, will give training in testicular self-examination at 1 p. m. on July 14, also in the board room.

The cancer society says one in every 13 women in the United States will develop breast cancer. Testicular cancer affects one in every 2,000 males.

Reservations may be made by calling the education department of the American Cancer Society in Long Beach.

Long Beach artists

Carry city's name afar

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

Long Beach artists have had their work accepted for exhibit in many areas. Art-A-Fair officials have announced names of artists they have chosen for their festival, one of Laguna Beach's three summer art events. This festival will open July 15 and continue through Aug. 31. It is located at a new and historic site at the corner of Laguna Canyon Road and Canyon Acres Drive. This is the home of Laguna Beach pioneer Harvey Hemenway and is one of the most photographed and painted of Laguna's landmarks.

The Long Beach artists who will be represented are Bernice Houser, Patti Rock and Diana Troup.

Hours for Art-A-Fair, which specializes in traditional art, will be 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sundays through Thursdays and from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Admission is fifty cents for adults; children free.

THOMAS LORIMER of Long Beach was invited by Gallery 85 in Billings, Mont., to create a piece of art commemorating the 100th anniversary of the "Retreat and Surrender of Chief Joseph and the Nez Perce." His painting, "Escape of the Nez Perce at Canyon Creek" is now on exhibit in the gallery.

Artists from 13 states are participating in Flags, Banners and Kites, an international exhibition sponsored by Allied Arts and the Allied Arts Foundation, which will be held July 10 through 24 at the Flag Plaza Pavilion of Seattle Center, in Seattle, Wash. Representing Long Beach are Victoria Mournean, who is displaying an untitled banner, and Edward W. Randell whose entries are "Grommet's Chinese," "Dale," and "Emperor Ming," all kites. Also participating are Claire Falkenstein of Venice and John Follis of Los Angeles.

Drawings in charcoal and conte and some watercolors and oils by Mari Abrams of Long Beach are on display for six weeks at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St. Most of her drawings are figure studies on paper, canvas and rice paper.

LONG BEACH ART ASSOCIATION will install officers and directors Tuesday at a dinner meeting in the Long Beach Gallery in the Recreation Department Building. Councilperson Renee Simon will speak.

arts

Mrs. Harry Brown will accept the office of president for a second term. Serving with her will be Walton McNulty, first vice president; Marian Bruce, second vice president; and Charlotte Robertson, Judith Barnes, Lucille Supple, Elynor Brown and Josephine Rennau.

THE MUSEUM ALLIANCE of Long Beach Museum of Art will hold its annual meeting today from 4 to 6 p.m. at the museum, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. There will be refreshments and entertainment and members will hear announcement of the fall exhibition schedule.

SINCE APRIL 15 when the "Treasures of Tutankhamun" exhibit opened at Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History, more than 590,000 persons have seen the great examples of Egyptian art.

This collection of 55 ancient treasures previously was visited by 825,000 visitors when it was shown in Washington, D.C. Chicago Field Museum officials expect more than 1.25 million persons to view the show before it closes Aug. 15. Then it will go to the New Orleans Museum of Art and will arrive in mid-February at Los Angeles Museum of Art. When it leaves there, it will go to the Seattle Art Museum and will conclude its United States tour at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The exhibit is outdrawing even the marvelous "Archeological Finds of the People's Republic of China" which toured this country in 1974-75.

THE MODERN AND CONTEMPORARY Art Council of Los Angeles County Museum of Art has named winners in its 1977 New Talent Awards 11th annual competition.

Painters James Hayward and Margit Omar of Venice and sculptor John Okulick of San Pedro each received $2,000 and will present a work of art to the museum during the next six years.

More than 80 Los Angeles County artists were visited by a committee of the Modern and Contemporary Art Council, which worked during the year in conjunction with the museum's department of modern art to select winners. The program was established in 1963 to provide support and encouragement to Los Angeles County artists under 36 years of age who show promise and have not yet achieved national acclaim.

MICKEY ROONEY, Butch Jenkins Jr. and Elizabeth Taylor starred in 'National Velvet' in 1944.

'Classic Films' will entertain young viewers

Last summer, Los Angeles County Museum of Art showed "Classic Films for Children." The response was tremendous so the museum's film department has organized a second series of 12 motion pictures especially suitable for young viewers. They will be shown on Sundays at 1 p.m. from July 10 through Sept. 25 in the museum's Leo S. Bing Theater, 5905 Wilshire Blvd. Each will be accompanied by a color cartoon and an episode from the 1941 serial "The Adventures of Captain Marvel."

Admission to each program is $1 for children, $2 for adults. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the museum or by mail, and may be bought one hour prior to each show time.

THE SCHEDULE IS: July 10, "Little Women" (1933) with Katharine Hepburn and Joan Bennett; July 17, "The Secret Garden" (1949), with Dean Stockwell and Margaret O'Brien; July 24, "King Kong" (1933) with Fay Wray and Robert Armstrong; July 31, "Son of Kong" (1933) with Helen Mack and Robert Armstrong.

Also, Aug. 7, "National Velvet" (1944) with Mickey Rooney and Elizabeth Taylor; Aug. 14, "Tarzan and the Mermaids" (1948) with Johnny Weissmuller and Brenda Joyce; Aug. 21, "Gunga Din" (1939) with Cary Grant and Douglas Fairbanks Jr.; Aug. 28, "Heidi" (1937) with Shirley Temple and Jean Hersholt; Sept. 4, "The Spanish Main" (1945) with Paul Henreid and Maureen O'Hara; Sept. 11, "The Thief of Bagdad" (1940) with Sabu and Conrad Veidt; Sept 18, "Mighty Joe Young" (1949) with Terry Moore and Robert Armstrong, and Sept 25, "The Yearling" (1946) with Gregory Peck and Jane Wyman.

Concerts in the Grove

Concerts in the Grove will be given July 3, July 30 and Aug. 13 at 8 p.m. in the Soroptimist House Patio on campus at Long Beach State University. Admission for each program is $5.

The opening concert will be by the Back Bay Jazz Band, a young group which plays traditional jazz. On July 30, Alfredo Rolando Ortiz, Paraguayan folk harpist, will perform and on Aug. 13, the El Toro Marine Third Aircraft Wing Band will play.

All programs are sponsored by the LBSU Alumni Association. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the alumni office in the Student Union, or may be bought at the gate.

LACLO shows on stage

Los Angeles Civic Light Opera currently has two shows playing at the Music Center, Los Angeles, and will open its final production of the season Aug. 30.

"The Wiz" is doing a repeat season at the Ahmanson Theater, having had a completely sold out run last summer. It will continue through Sept. 10.

"Annie Get Your Gun" opened Tuesday at the Pavilion where it will play through Aug. 6. Irving Berlin himself asked Debbie Reynolds to star in this version of his popular musical which is being revived as a tribute to his 89th birthday. Harve Presnell is Frank Butler, the sharpshooter whom Annie Oakley challenges. Also co-starring is Gavin MacLeod who portrays Murray on the Mary Tyler Moore Show. The new and different staging is by Gower Champion who directed and choreographed.

Bibi Osterwald, Art Lund, Manu Tupou, Don Potter and Peter Bruni are featured.

WHEN FIRST produced on Broadway 30 years ago, "Annie" had more song hits than any show which preceded it and ran nearly three years to become the second-longest running musical comedy of its time with 1,147 performances in New York. The songs include "The Girl That I Marry," "They Say That Falling in Love Is Wonderful," "Anything You Can Do I Can Do Better," "I Got Lost in His Arms," "Doin' What Comes Naturally" and "There's No Business Like Show Business."

The last LACLO musical of the season will open Aug. 30 in the Pavilion where it will run through Oct. 15. Starring Liza Minelli, the show originally was called "In Person" but has been renamed "Shine It On." Barry Nelson, recently seen in Los Angeles in "The Norman Conquests," has been signed by producers Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin to star opposite Miss Minelli. The new title is the name of the song with which the show opens and closes.

Barry Nelson

NOW IN REHEARSAL under the direction of Martin Scorsese, "Shine It On" will open in Chicago July 5 and will come to Los Angeles after a six-week run in San Francisco. After it closes Oct. 15, it will move East to open in New York Oct. 23.

The musical was written especially for Miss Minelli by George Furth, author of "Company," with music and lyrics by John Kander and Fred Ebb who also wrote the score for "Cabaret." The show is described as "an incisive look at a critical 10 years in the life of a young performer with a compulsive drive for fame which she must reconcile with her private life, a conflict between ambition and love set against a musical background."

Shaw to conduct Bach at Bowl

As a pre-season Hollywood Bowl event, Robert Shaw, music director of the Atlanta Symphony, will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic in a three-program Bach Festival July 7, 8 and 9.

Special low prices will be in effect; the top price will be $4.50 July 7 and 8 and $6 July 9.

In addition to the orchestra, vocal and instrumental soloists and the USC National Workshop Chorale will perform a widely varied schedule of works by Bach.

AT THE BOWL, Shaw will lead the performers in nine compositions: four choral works, including the "St. Matthew Passion" sung in Shaw's own English translation, and the "Magnificat," and five orchestral pieces including the Fourth Brandenburg Concerto, the Concerto for Two Violins, and the Harspichord Concerto No. 1 in D-minor.

RTD'S LOW-COST Park and Ride service again will be available for concert-goers. Patrons may park their cars free of charge in lots in or near their own neighborhoods, then ride a special non-stop RTD bus to and from the Bowl for 50 cents each way. Attendants will be on duty at each of the lots until cars have been picked up after the concert.

Lots in the Long Beach area are:

LONG BEACH (Line 567): Bank of America, 1840 Long Beach Blvd., corner of Long Beach Boulevard and Pacific Coast Highway. Departures at 6:30, 6:45 and 7 p.m.

TORRANCE (Line 557): Torrance County Courthouse, 825 Maple Ave. Departures at 6:30 and 7 p.m.

COMPTON-CARSON (Line 566): Dominguez Hills State College. Entrance at Victoria Street and Tamcliff Avenue, east of Avalon Boulevard. Turn right and enter the westernmost parking lot. Departure at 7 p.m.

DOWNEY (Line 561): Los Angeles County Administrative Center. Park at 9151 E Imperial Highway. Entrance is east of Clark Avenue. Departure at 7 p.m.

Kids invited to 'Open House'

Summer is filled with activities designed for youngsters. One that will begin its ninth season July 5 and will continue through Aug. 12 is "Open House at the Bowl," an admission-free, five-day-a-week festival for children.

In order to accommodate reservation requests beyond the capacity of the Bowl, this year Open House is holding a second season at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut. "Hollywood Bowl Open House East," sponsored by Mt. San Antonio College Community Services, will feature the same attractions that appear at the Bowl. There will be two performances each weekday morning from July 5 to 22.

The Children's Festival of Holidays 'Round the World, featuring entertainment and workshops in celebration of International Holidays, will expose young people to their rich cultural heritage.

EACH WEEKDAY Open House will offer (1) entertainment through hour-long performances by dance, instrumental music, theater, puppet ensembles and individual artists; (2) active involvement in music and related arts through participation in workshops: rhythm and musical instruments, kite and mask making taught by Ron Labyorteaux, dances from near and far with teachers from the Aman Institute, drama improvisations with actress Pavla Ustinov; (3) exposure to the Los Angeles Philharmonic — children are invited to attend the orchestra's rehearsals which take place weekday mornings except Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Performances at Hollywood Bowl will take place at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. with simultaneous performance and workshop activities on the Plaza Stage and in the Garden Stage Workshop. Performances at Mt. San Antonio College will take place at 9:15 and 10:15 a.m. For further information, call Joan Reynolds at the bowl or write to Open House, P.O. Box 1951, Hollywood 90028.

'My feet not only talk, they 'bark', during hot weather. How can I get a better 'under-standing'?'

Women are asking

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

Like to keep your feet "smiling" all summer long? Then, initiate a B.K.T.Y.F. plan. Translation: Be Kind To Your Feet!

"If you're going barefoot this summer, be sure it's on a soft, yielding surface — like grass or clean sand." This is the first suggestion from Dr. Ira Schwerin, nationally known podiatrist.

"Remember fungus forms fast in a dark, warm, moist area, like inside a closed shoe. That's why summer sandals can be a blessing. Just make certain the broad strap falls behind the bunion joint, and back strap goes around the heel.

"Naturally, any back strap may rub against the heel. Lotions, pumice stone, and podiatry care will help that situation.

"After a busy day, many find relaxing feet in a basin of mild soap and warm (never hot) water beneficial. If you let the water run over the feet, it stimulates and acts as a massage. Blot feet dry. Be careful not to rub roughly between the toes, for this could injure the skin.

"Now, sprinkle with foot powder. Some use cornstarch to dust feet. Whatever talc used, the powder keeps feet dry and helps avoid fungus."

WE HAD to ask what the Beverly Hills podiatrist thought about wearing platform shoes. "If the soles are no more than ½ inch thick, they'll act as a cushion for the feet. If too high, they can be dangerous.

"One of the most important things to remember in buying shoes is to see the ball of the foot is correctly fit. If the widest part of the foot fits the widest part of the shoe, the arch will be supported by the shank of the shoe. Then, you and your feet will have reason to smile!"

P.S. Like to wear a dress or suit size smaller? Check the famous four-day Hollywood Star diet. The average, healthy adult may lose four pounds. Send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba and Bonnie Churchill, "4-Day Diet for Figure Trimmers," c/o Indpendent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

Advice to the Taxlorn

Form helps computer do job

DEAR MR. SMITH: Assume my tax for 1976 was $1,000. I paid three installments of an estimated tax of $250 each in April, June and September. But I did not pay an estimated tax on Jan. 15. Instead, I filed a final return by Jan. 31 and paid the tax due.

That is the way I have paid my income tax for years and years. But last year, my tax consultant said I also had to file a penalty Form 2210; which I did. But I did not have to pay a penalty. Again this year, I was told I had to file penalty Form 2210 even though I didn't have to pay a penalty. My question is: Is it really required that I file Form 2210? — J.J.

The IRS computer is almost human, but it would take some times for the dates and amounts of everyone's estimated payments to be matched with their 1040s, and they can't hold up the assembly line. Unless you have that 2210 attached, the IRS may conclude that you made four estimated tax payments of $187.50 each, instead of three of $250 which could easily incur a penalty. It would eventually get straightened out, but why not make things as easy as possible for the IRS? The fewer reasons IRS has for fiddling with your return the better for you.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I bought a new airplane three years ago and have had it leased continuously since then to air charter service. I have been using a seven-year (150 per cent) depreciation schedule and took a 10 per cent investment tax credit the first year. I am now going to terminate the lease agreement and go out of the leasing business. I will keep the airplane, however, and use it personally. If I do not sell the plane, will any of the investment tax credit or depreciation be recaptured? — R.K.

No recapture of depreciation is required when you convert investment property to personal use. But, yes, recapture of the investment tax credit is required on that same airplane. If the airplane will have been in business use for a full three years, only two-thirds of the 10 per cent credit is subject to recapture.

DEAR MR. SMITH: This year I purchased a new residence. I sold my old residence for $75,000, less sales charges. The adjusted sales price of the old house was $68,400. My new house cost me $59,750, and I have added approximately $7,000 for carpeting drapes, etc. How should I handle this transaction and what forms should I use?

Also, on the old residence, I received a $2,000 tax credit. I lived there less than three years. What do I do about that? — J.B.

jacob smith

You should have sought tax advice before signing those papers, but perhaps all is not lost. If you are the first to occupy your new residence that saves you from having to pay back the $2,000 credit. Fill out Form 2119 to calculate how much gain is deferred because you acquired a new residence, and how much you can exclude if you are over 65.

I assume that you made no sale of a residence within 18 months prior to the 1976 sale. For purposes of deferring gain, if the tax basis or adjusted sales price of your old house or the cost of the new house, includes furniture or other personal property, you must eliminate those amounts in each case.

Tax deferral on buying and selling personal residences, apply on to land, building and improvements. Floor coverings and other personal property, can, in some cases, become realty improvement because of forming a special attachment to the building. Any gain from sale of other personal property is taxable without deferral.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My ex-husband has recently retired. According to the terms of our divorce agreement, upon his death or retirement I am to receive approximately one-half of his profit sharing plan account as of the date of our decree. My share will be about $50,000.

Must I declare this as ordinary income? Can I put all or part of it into an Individual Retirement Account in order to avoid income tax on the whole amount? Are there any other alternatives? — W.A.W.

If you and your former husband lived in a community property state while married — for example Arizona or California — and if you received the entire distribution during one calendar year, then you will have a lump-sum distribution which is first reduced by your ex-husband's contributions, if any. The remainder can be reported as long-term capital gain with regular income averaging, or as ordinary income subject to the special 10-year averaging provisions on federal Form 4972. Figure your tax both ways to be sure.

And remember, long-term capital gain is now partially subject to a separate federal preference tax of 15 per cent. Be guided by the material you (or your ex-husband) should be receiving from the pension plan administrator, and watch for Form 1099-R, which may come later on. And if you (or your ex-husband) receive shares of company stock, there are special rules covering the acquisition.

If you did not live in a community property state during marriage, there may be very little that is taxable other than earnings on the basic amount. Read, very carefully, the pertinent provisions of your property settlement agreement, and consider getting professional assistance.

I find nothing in the tax rules that would permit anyone but an employe to roll over into an Individual Retirement Account so as to defer income taxes. But you still have a good part of the year to decide about paying out maximum deductibles, taking stock losses, and trying to slow down other income until 1978. But first make sure you know the tax impact of your 1977 windfall.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

The Formula

Leather gets soft treatment

norman stark

If improperly treated leather gets wet it can become stiff and uncomfortable, so it's advisable to keep boots well oiled to prevent this from occurring. Here's a formula for a product that I have used for years.

You'll need five tablespoons of NEAT'S FOOT OIL (from a boot and shoe store), one tablespoon TALLOW (from a meat market), and one and one-half tablespoons MINERAL OIL. Heat all three ingredients in top section of a double boiler (never over an open flame) until the piece of tallow is melted. Stir to assure a good mix. Transfer to glass, metal or plastic containers.

To use, first clean boots thoroughly and then rub in mixture to penetrate and soften the leather. Note: For more penetration, heat boots in a low temperature oven (about 100 degrees) before applying oil which should also be warmed.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Socially Speaking

This is one party which can be called unique

carolyn mcdowell

PARTIES COME in all sizes and shapes.

They range from inimate little dinners for four to intimate little dinners for four hundred

They are given in celebrations of birthdays, weddings, anniversaries (once in a while we note a divorce celebration), holidays, picnics, TV-watching parties for all sports and Big Events like election night.

There are congratulatory parties, retirement parties, reunion parties, christening parties (both babies and boats), graduation parties, garden parties, new house-warming parties, farewell parties, welcome-back parties, grand opening parties, theater parties, fund-raising parties, bus trip parties, bridal and baby shower parties, bridge parties, pre-something parties, post-something parties, costume parties, wine-tasting parties, home movie parties and plain for-no-good-reason-parties.

We've covered them all, but Harold and Marilyn Nelson of Arbor Road in Lakewood gave a party that is a first for this column.

They invited neighbors for a mortgage burning party.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago, five young, growing families bought homes on Arbor Road in what was then a "beanfield patch."

Margaret Miller wrote and delivered an amusing history of the street, recapping her life with husband, Rue, and that of the families of Charles and Betty Miller (no relation), Karl and Faye Snyder and Ralph and Genny Choy. They also threw away those old and tattered payment books. Mayme Edwards also was eligible for the party, but she took a vacation to celebrate her "paid-for house."

Of course they didn't really burn their mortgages, using instead beribboned replicas of a dream come true. In this day and age of inflated real estate speculation, most people don't stay in a house long enough to pay it off — six families on the same street doing it is practically unheard of Witnesses were the Charles Millers' daughter, Joanne Fossum and husband, Bob, from Walnut Creek and their daughter-in-law, Cindy Miller. Husband and son, Mike, had to work so he missed the Big Fire.

Other youngsters, now all grown up, were Ed and Dorothy Choat, (Dorothy is the daughter of the Harold Nelsons) and Susan Halliday and husband, Randy, of San Bernardino, (Susan is the daughter of the Rue Millers.) Other witnesses were the Barney Edgells of Capistrano.

SAN FRANCISCO called and members of Signal Hill and Long Beach Rotary Clubs and their ladies answered.

The call was to attend the 68th Rotary International convention.

Signal Hill representatives included Veater and Shirley Barton, Keith and Marilyn Carey, Curt and Mickey Foster, Guy and June Hawkins, Bruce and Muriel May, Bob and Mary Porter and Dick and Mae Wilson.

Among those from the Long Beach club were Duane and Elva Nibbelink.

BILL AND MARION Schmedahe were honored at a reception on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary.

The party was co-hosted by their five children in the Fireside Room of Bethany Lutheran Church. Their son, 1st. Lt. John Schmedahe, USAF, came from Portland, Ore. to assist with the festivities. Another son, Jim, took time out from studies at UC Santa Barbara to join local sons, Don and Tom, and daughter, Mary Kay Esswein.

Special guests were the Rev. Nathan Toesch, pastor of the church, and Helen McEnulty, who was guest at the Schmedahes' wedding in Kansas City, Mo. 25 years ago

IF YOU ARE in the mood for reading about upcoming reunions, you have turned to the right page.

We have a bunch of them.

Such as the 47th anniversary of the founding of Cumaean Club at Long Beach City College.

Dorothy Goodknight, the first sponsor of the female fraternity, tells me they have reserved Assistance League House for a luncheon.

The date is July 21.

Contact Dorothy at 1065 E. Third St., Long Beach, 90802. Or Jeannette Reichner at 3630 E. Second St., Long Beach, 90803.

The last time the group got together was in 1955 for their silver jubilee so they are in need of all of the up-to-date addresses of "lost" members.

WERE ANY of you out there ever Seabees?

If I have to explain the name to you, then you weren't and you may pass this one without a penalty.

Anyhow the 16th Seabees (unit) have scheduled a silver anniversary of the association at the Sacramento Inn in Sacramento.

The reminiscing and story swapping is scheduled Aug. 11 through 14. If you are eligible contact chairman, Floyd Hall, 7869 La Riviera Drive, Sacramento, 95826

HOW ABOUT a picnic?

Some members of the class of 1937 of Narbonne High School are planning a potluck picnic for members, teachers and other alums from the good old days.

Sunday, July 24 is the date. Picnickers will gather at 4 p.m. (or maybe earlier says committee member Nellie Billaud Dillon) on the Southwest corner of Averill Park in San Pedro.

To get your name in the pot write to Bernice Fish Jessop, 1332 S. Leland St., San Pedro, 90731.

Other committee members are Matsuye "Alice" Okada Matsui, Dick Kastrup and Charles Likens.

EXCELSIOR UNION High School's Class of 1927 is having a classy reunion.

Members have reserved the Tiffany Room at the Long Beach Elks Club for a golden anniversary banquet on Thursday.

Teachers and alums from other years are also invited to attend. One invitation has been sent to a distinguished alumna, Pat Nixon.

Committee chairlady is Julia Rundell.

Send your reservations to Dr. Eugene Haskell (he was senior class president), P.O. Box 506, Artesia, 90701.

steve ellingson

With the entire nation tightening its energy belt, there has never been a better time to add these attractive and simple-to-build awnings to your home.

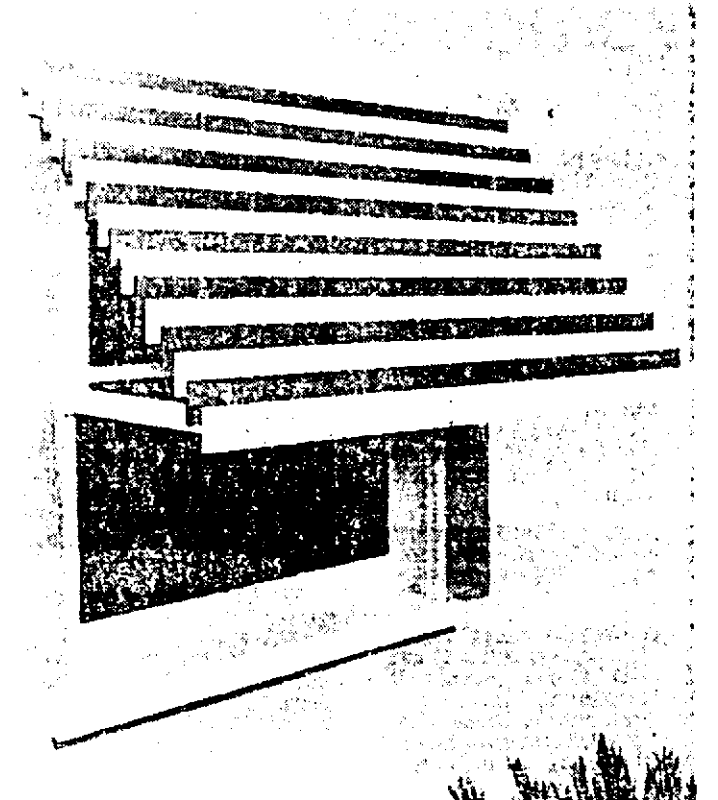
Not only can awnings effectively reduce indoor temperatures up to 20 degrees (by shielding the windows from the sun's glare), but they provide a finishing touch to any style exterior. And with our exclusive design, you can complete the job at a fraction of what it would cost in a store (if you could even find durable wood awnings!).

Both the window and door units may be expanded to fit any width opening, and may be constructed from redwood or exterior grade plywood. We painted these in alternate stripes so you could see the simplicity of the structure, but they can be painted to match any decor. The full-size pattern includes traceable parts, step-by-step photos and instructions, plus a complete materials list to remove all the guesswork.

To obtain the full-size awning pattern #259324 (via first class mail), send $2. Or you can order our #C-24 packet (nine different lawn and garden projects including the awnings) all for only $6.

Energy Bonus! Our attractive cupola, #348, designed to ventilate attics and reduce total house temperature, $1.50. Send all checks or money orders to Steve Ellingsen, c/o Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram Pattern Dept. P.O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Calif. 91409

New! Our 100-page "Patterns for Better Living" project book featuring more than 500 woodworking and handicraft projects … $1.50 (includes postage & handling)



The Aces on bridge

ira corn

Dear Mr. Corn:

I bid one diamond over my opponent's opening of one spade. He bid in a low voice, and there were some distractions and I didn't hear him. What was the proper penalty at rubber bridge? — Low Batteries, San Francisco.

Answer:

If the opponents call attention to the insufficient bid, it must be corrected. Either a sufficient bid or a pass may be substituted; doubles or redoubles are out. In your case, if you had bid two diamonds, there would be no further penalty.

Any other sufficient bid would have barred partner from the auction and a pass would have subjected partner to lead penalties if he were to make the opening lead.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Are the terms "negative pass" and "penalty pass" synonymous? — No Communication, Birmingham, Ala.

Answer: No. The penalty pass is a pass to partner's takeout or optional double. With an exceptionally strong holding in the opponent's trump suit one might pass a takeout double and thereby convert it for penalties. The negative pass is a nebulous term. I imagine that it refers to a pass of one of partner's non-forcing bids because of insufficient strength.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I opened two no trump with a maximum count of 24. My partner jumped to five diamonds. I had the A-J-10 of diamonds so I continued on to six. Partner had little in high cards and much distribution we went down. Who gets the blame? — Inflated Values, Jamaica, N.Y..

Answer: You do. When you opened two no trump you had told your story — 22-24 high card points and all suits stopped. A responder's direct jump to game might be a gambling bid and in this instance, is one of the few true close-out bids.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner doubled an opening preempt of four diamonds. We were vulnerable and this was my hand. What should I have bid?

♠ 752
♥ 103
♦ J1098
♣ Q753

Doggy Bagged, Indianapolis.

Answer: I might not like it, but I would pass and hope for the best. Surely, the cinch diamond trick should help defeat four diamonds while any contract played by your side should have scant hopes of success.

However, rarely are there any sure things after a high level preempt and there's always a possibility that a pass might bring regrets.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened a game demand of two hearts. What was my proper response with this hand:

♠ Q742
♥ 10986
♦ J4
♣ J75

— Trump Support, Torrance, Calif.

Answer: Bid four hearts. A direct jump to game after a major suit demand describes a hand with four or more trumps but with no aces, kings or singletons.

At Wit's End

Question of what to take and what to leave behind

erma bombeck

Boy, the Egyptians had the right idea. When they went they took it all with them, right to the tomb.

A few have tried to revive the custom. There was a woman in New Jersey who was buried with her telephone. (Talk about cruel! Her husband included a 75-foot extension cord!) There was a golfer in Florida who requested he be buried with his clubs on the first green. His will said he always wanted a permanent "hole in one." A couple of months ago in California, a woman requested she be buried in her lace nightgown at the wheel of her Ferrari "with the seat slanted comfortably."

IT GOT me to thinking, why should I leave my untold wealth to a second wife? Let her amass her own fortune like I did. That is why I am insisting that the following items go with me when I go.

My book of sitters' telephone numbers: This is a first edition that I wear at all times taped to my bra. I have kids in there who will work for 50 cents an hour and all the food that doesn't attack them first. Also, a sweet, little elderly woman who cleans the oven when I'm gone and one woman who believes, "There is no such thing as a rotten kid. He just needs a laxative."

A letter from the book club telling me of my cancellation: You can't buy letters like this and it took me four years of correspondence, plus the purchase of a Xerox machine to get it. Besides, I don't want to take any chances. If they keep sending me books, I've got proof.

The television warranty: Let her go crazy trying to explain she knows there is still a year or so to go on the picture tube, but she just can't find the serial number, and it sounds crazy, but the first wife took it with her.

An 1801 antique hatpin: This little antique is unequaled in value and hard to replace. It's the only thing that unlocks the bathroom door from the outside when one of the kids has been in there a day and a half.

ONE HALF of a Master's Degree: My husband earned it, but half of it is mine under community poperty. It represented our trip to Europe, a new sofa, screen on the back porch, a sailboat and a garbage compressor.

Page from the sewing machine manual on how to thread the bobbin of my old machine. After all, he didn't promise her a rose garden and if she's everything she told him she is, she'll figure it out — in a year or two.

Eighteen books of green stamps: I didn't buy "specials on day-old fish" and survive 180 Double Stamp Days of combat just to have the second wife get the ping-pong table. If I can't feel the exhilaration of turning in all those books at the redemption center, no one else will.

The rest she can have … the kids who eat every three hours, the husband who, if she cooks Dinosaur Hocks with green beans for dinner, had it for lunch … the lemon-scented house in the suburbs … she can even have my car.

Of course, I'll take along the only set of keys for it.

MARGUERITE THOMPSON
Bill's wife gets proper recognition

I HAVE BEEN reprimanded for my negligence. In the past, my columns about Kelly's restaurant mentioned Marguerite Thompson, but may not have given her proper credit.

For some time, I have omitted Marguerite's name by accident. So I deserved the rebuke which came in a letter from Virginia Mathews, one of Kelly's many devotees. She deftly put co-owner Bill Thompson down a bit by omitting his first name. She wrote:

"I would be remiss to let Kelly's super-host Thompson receive all the many kudos he has in the last few months without protest! The other half of the Thompson team, Marguerite, has to be one of the most special people in the restaurant business in Long Beach. If you don't believe this, come to Kelly's some night when she's keeping the show going. . .Many customers look forward to her nights on duty. I hope failing to mention Marguerite is just an oversight on your part. P.S. — Others who make Kelly's an especially warm friendly place to meet your friends are Jerry, Bruce and Cecil."

Virginia, please accept my sincere thanks for your reminder. Kelly's (spelled with a backward K, just to be different) is at 5716 E. Second St. in the Long Beach suburb of Naples. It is open every night for dinner, except Mondays. It is an exceptional restaurant — one of Southern California's very finest and Long Beach is lucky to have it. Kelly's is so popular that Marguerite, on duty as hostess nearly every night, has a pressure-packed job which she handles with finesse and charm.

Kelly's doesn't serve luncheon. It doesn't offer entertainment. It concentrates completely on being a fine dinner house. The chefs are a pair of artists who turn out wonderful steaks, lamb chops, prime rib au jus, sea delicacies, chicken livers sauteed with mushrooms, sweetbreads and two splendid Italian entrees. The chefs are Milena Hladikova, who's been there 19 years, and Chuck Harris, who replaced the late, beloved Frank Rossi. Chuck formerly worked at the Apple Valley Steak House, Petroleum Club and Elks Club.

The three fellows Virginia mentioned are Kelly's bartenders. Others who rate praise are Kelly's waiters who really care — Bob, Walter, Shane, George and Roy. (Roy is Roy Ghere, formerly at the Manhattan.) The dinners, $4.75 to over $8, include bountiful tray of appetizers, superb soup and salad, potatoes and hot bread. One of the popular after dinner drinks is Coffee Robeson, similar to Irish Coffee, named in honor of columnist George Robeson.

IT'S CALLED A chimichanga. It's new on the menu at El Patio Mexican Restaurant and another example of the imaginative dining ideas that bring this restaurant so many compliments.

Chimichanga is a creation that originated in Arizona. It's a la carte, $2.50, and quite different from the traditional dishes of old Mexico. It consists of a rolled-up tortilla filled with pork, green chili and jack cheese. After being lightly fried, it is served with salsa, a sauce made with tomatoes, onion and chili. The chimichanga is topped with sour cream and guacamole, made with crushed avocado.

El Patio is a spacious restaurant at 3503 Atlantic Ave. just north of Wardlow Road, open every day from 11:30 a.m. to midnight, serving luncheon, dinner, cocktails and banquets. It is owned by Tony and Triny Guillen. Their son, Bud, is assistant manager. The kitchen and dining room staffs are large to help El Patio give the best possible service.

Most of the guests visit El Patio for its 11 combination platters, its six special dinners and four varieties of steaks. Others come for the specialities which are a la carte and aren't usually found in most Southern California Mexican restaurants. Unusually popular are the sopapillas, a kind of hot popover served with honey. They are three for 50 cents, a delectable substitute for bread or tortillas.

Long before other restaurants thought of the idea, El Patio was featuring langostino tacos and enchiladas. Langostinos are baby lobsters. Seafoods and light Mexican sauces are a perfect combination. The enchilada, $1.45, comes with sauce, tomatoes, lettuce and an olive. The taco is $1.15.

It is the freshness of the food as well as the sparkling flavors which set El Patio apart from other restaurants. Mexican food must be served at the very peak of its freshness and delivered on sizzling hot platters to keep everything warm while being eaten. El Patio uses enormous 3½-pound platters for many of its specialities. They are so large they stay hot for a long time.

One of El Patio's big beauties is the chicken combination, $4.35. It consists of green salad with choice of dressing followed by a platter loaded with chicken enchilada, chicken taco, chicken tamale, beans and Spanish rice. Another feature is the meatless combination, $3.40, of enchilada, tostado, chili relleno and rice or beans. The combinations start at $2.80 for enchilada, taco and beans with salad. The special dinners, $3.50 to $4.35, include soup or salad, entree, beans, rice, tortillas, dessert and coffee or tea.

CIA is 'necessary, but overused'

By Dianne Smith
Staff Writer

The CIA has been maligned and exposed by former employes in several books and articles of late, but there is one ex-employe who wants to set the record straight on just what the CIA does and doesn't do.

He's Harry Rositzke, a former professor of Germanic studies who spent 25 years with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). He joined at its formation following World War II. His last assignment before retirement in 1970 was in Washington doing domestic intelligence operations against the Soviets and East Germans.

He served as station chief in New Delhi, India, from 1957 to 1962, where his principal responsibility was working against Soviet and Chinese intelligence targets there.

Espionage and counterespionage are the main business of the CIA, explained Rositzke during a late afternoon interview in Hollywood. "Domestic spying on our citizens is not under our jurisdiction. In fact, it's against the CIA charter."

His book, "The CIA's Secret Operations" (Reader's Digest Press) covers what he calls the threefold role of the intelligence service: "Espionage (gaining information from the other side), counterespionage (trying to prevent the other side from gaining access to U.S. secrets) and covert action (the secret support of radio, newspapers, political parties and labor unions to influence events in other countries through guerrilla operations, armed invasions and secret wars.)"

HE BLAMED the failure of the covert actions, which have been highly publicized and have tarnished the image of the CIA, on the White House. He also blamed the failure of the containment policy adopted during the Cold War (whereby the U.S. sought to curb the expansion of Soviet power and influence) on White House control of activities.

The intrusion of politics into the CIA operations is the "worst thing that can happen. The agency has been able to function, but morale is bad and foreign agents' confidence in the CIA's ability to protect them was hit hard. It will take two or three years to regain that trust."

He claims the CIA has been "misused and overused and accepted a lot of jobs it should not have undertaken."

In light of these problems, would he join the intelligence service today? "Definitely. The world is more complicated and the need for secret information is greater than ever before. The gathering of intelligence is a profession. There's little of the cloak and dagger stuff in real life.

"The guts of most secret operations are two men — the agent and his case officer — meeting in private to transact their business. Each has his foibles and strengths, and it is this human element that has attracted me throughout my career. At its best, espionage, like politics, is a humanist profession."

IN LINE with this comment from the introduction to his book, he said it is important to understand the difference between the word "agent," who is the foreigner recruited by the CIA to provide information, and the case officer, intelligence officer or operations officer, who is the staff member of the CIA.

"The CIA man is NOT the agent. He is the agent handler. The confidentiality of agents is of the utmost importance to the workings of the intelligence gathering.

"That's where the professionalism comes in — never to lead the opposition to one of our agents.

"The CIA officers assigned abroad use diplomatic cover, in other words they become part of an embassy's or consulate's staff. This means if they're caught, they can be kicked out of the country, but they can't go to jail. The same is true of KGB (Russian) officers in this country."

The main job of an intelligence officer, according to Rositzke, is to be inconspicuous and to carry out his job. "Of course, we know all the names of the KGB officers in this country, most attached to the United Nations mission, and they know ours. There were 350 in New York City alone several years ago. Today, I'm sure the number is closer to 475.

"That isn't really the issue. The issue is that the KGB has to meet its agents in such a way that we can't detect them. And, the KGB has recruited more American citizens as agents than we have Russian citizens. It's a matter of access. There's more freedom of movement and ability to meet and socialize with people here.

"It's a field day for the KGB. All they have to do is keep looking and they're bound to find somebody who needs money or who doesn't really have much faith in the system, and put them on the payroll. Without access, there are no secrets to worry about getting.

ASKED IF there were many women in the CIA, Rositzke replied, "There are a lot of women in the CIA, but there are very few women case officers.

"In most countries, a woman, let's say under diplomatic cover, cannot really carry out the job of meeting, assessing and recruiting a foreign male. The clandestine meetings required in such cases would lead to talk of an affair and be far from inconspicuous."

Does the CIA recruit women agents? The answer was "No."

"In most countries — Arab states, Southeast Asia, Africa — women aren't even secretaries in a foreign office. In other words, if the status of women is such in a country that the men almost completely disregard them in terms of their business, professional or governmental lives, then a woman — just because she's an American, it doesn't matter — would never get to have their respect, trust or confidence."

However, he added, "Where women are best is as counterespionage analysts. Here, women are indispensable because they have keener minds, more patience for handling details. I know of women who have spent 20 to 25 years working on different aspects of foreign intelligence. This work is vital to the operation."

He said it wouldn't have occurred to him to write a book about his old profession up to three years after he retired, but with the sensationalism of some of the CIA exposes, he wanted to tell it like it was, so to speak.

"I try to offer a behind-the-scenes look at our intelligence operations, the need for such operations and to point out successes, as well as failures. This is not a whitewash, because the best interests of the country would not be served by such an attempt. What I've tried to do is separate the fact from he fiction."

THE FACT IS, he pointed out, that being in intelligence work is not like it is in the James Bond movies. "My life, to my regret, wasn't like James Bond's.

"There were very few beautiful women and no sports cars. Most of what he (Bond) did, any way, wasn't intelligence, but criminal investigations.

"Intelligence work isn't really a glamorous business, but it's an important and neessary one if America is to retain her position of power in the world. She must be aware of the inner workings of other nations."

As Arthur Schlesigner Jr. writes in his forward to the book, "What the Cold War did was to give intelligence operations a magnitude and an immunity that transformed the character of the problem. But the excesses of recent years illustrate a danger, they do not eliminate a need. The future of the intelligence community remains a vital issue for Congress and the people. The problem is to insure restraint and accountability."

Toward this end, Rositzke offers some suggestions. He believes the CIA has become "too big, too overcome by bureaucracy." He thinks its size should be contracted, its priorities changed and its mission restricted.

To do this, he suggests reducing the intelligence budget because then there would be less money to "indulge in operation fantasies."

He also recommends the creation of a counterintelligence ombudsman, appointed by and responsible to a joint congressional committee, to which any federal employe with reason can blow the whistle if he suspects his agency is carrying on unauthorized activities."

Dear Abby

Beauty isn't always asset in marriage

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that most "plain" women seem to have the best marriages, and most outstanding beauties are divorced, married again, divorced again, and can't make a success of a marriage? Even with the advantage of having been born beautiful they can't seem to find happiness. Why is that? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Believe it or not, natural beauty can be something of a handicap. Some beauties rely entirely on their "looks" to get them everything they want, and they neglect to develop the more durable and important qualities.

A girl may be able to "capture" a man with her beauty. Indeed she can capture more than one, if she so desires. But unless she knows how to give him more than the pleasure of just looking at her, she won't keep him long.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend (I'll call her "Thelma") met a very handsome dealer in Las Vegas two years ago. (I'll call him "Ken.") Well, Thelma and Ken flipped for each other and have been practically living together ever since. Ken told Thelma from the start that he and his wife had been separated for about 10 years, but that she was Catholic and would never give him a divorce.

Thelma gave up all her friends and devoted all her time and attention to Ken, who gave her this big story about how he had to devote two nights a week to "an old girl friend" he had known for years.

Thelma is all torn up because she no longer wants to share Ken with this old friend. Is there a solution? — PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I am puzzled as to why you are trying to help Thelma work out an adulterous dilemma with a two-timing dude like Ken. As I see it, all Ken loves is his appetite for variety. So tell Thelma that she can't win in this game, because Ken is holding all the aces, plus two queens. He's probably got the deck stacked and is dealing from the bottom, to boot.

DEAR ABBY: When I married my wife 10 years ago I had a moustache. I kept it for two years, and she never complained about it. Then I shaved it off, and she told me to please leave it off because she never liked it. Okay, so I left it off, but here's the problem:

Every year for the last six years we have a celebration in town called "Frontier Days," which lasts for a whole month. Nearly every man in town grows a beard, moustache or goatee just to get into the spirit of the celebration.

Every year I go through the same thing. It takes me three weeks to get my moustache grown out, and I wear it for a month because I want to be one of the guys and I enjoy it.

As soon as I start growing the moustache, my wife refuses to kiss me, love me or have anything to do with me at bedtime.

Well, seven weeks is a long time for a fun-loving healthy guy like me to go without a kiss. Any suggestions? — MISSING SOMETHING

DEAR MISSING: Get a false moustache that can be glued on and removed easily. That way you can participate in "Frontier Days" without missing anything at night.

DEAR ABBY: Our dear and saintly minister preaches a beautiful sermon every Sunday morning, and at the conclusion of each service he goes to the rear of the church to shake hands with all the members of the congregation as they go out the door.

The problem is that he grasps each hand and squeezes it as though he were cracking nuts!

My poor mother, with her hands gnarled by arthritis, waits in line as though she were going to her execution!

I'm sure our minister reads your column, Abby, so if you print my letter, he may recognize himself and take the hint. Thank you. — W.

DEAR W.: Your mother — and all the rest of you out there for whom an enthusiastic handshake is painful — should not hesitate to say, when extending a hand in greeting, "Gently, please — arthritis!"

Designer Pattern

Camisole tops flounced skirt

It's fashion's prettiest look — a bare, brief camisole topping a flirt of a flounced, drawstring skirt. Christine Albers adds a delicate touch of tucking to the camisole and buttons it down the back.

The skirt is light as a breeze whether you choose the eyelet flounced version or self fabric. As a matter of fact, Printed Pattern A506 is totally simple to sew. And a delight to wear in cotton or silk for day, dancing, vacation fun.

Printed Pattern A506 is available in Misses' Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) camisole and skirt (with purchased ruffling) require 3 yards 45-inch fabric.

Please send $1.50 for Printed Pattern A506 to Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Department, P. O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 35 cents for each pattern for First Class Airmail and Special handling.) Print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

NEW! All the clothes you want most now are in our new 1977 Prominent Designer Book! See them, sew them — jumpsuits, tunics, day-dinner dresses, tops, pants, skirts, total wardrobes by America's top creators. Use the 50 cents free coupon to apply to any pattern of your choice. Send 75 cents for Book 32 now.

Sew-Knit Book includes basic tissue pattern adjustable for sizes 10-20; 40, 42. Sew dresses, gowns, blouses, skirts, jackets, more. Then, knit another complete wardrobe. Send $1.25 now.

You can help

Each week Life/style brings readers a list of volunteer opportunities. Those wishing further information may contact the Community Volunteer Office, an agency of the United Way, at 426-7171, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

LEND AN EAR: Training program to staff a telephone hotline for battered women will begin in July.

FINGER EXERCISE: Clerical help needed by group which sponsors a rehabilitation program for former prisoners.

POOL PLAY: Swimming program for the handicapped needs pool aides.

GENERAL AID: Convalescent home in the central district needs volunteers for a variety of tasks.

OFFICE EQUIPMENT: Filing cabinets are needed by an agency which provides meals for elderly and convalescing residents.

BOOKISH: Blind residents of a convalescent home need volunteers to read to them.

WOMAN'S WORK: Women's center needs a volunteer coordinator and bookkeeper.

Surprising Hamburg, Germany's second city

By Herb Shannon
I-P-T Travel Editor

HAMBURG, Germany — Historians might still be puzzling over connotations of the late John F. Kennedy's inspirational line, "I am a Berliner!" if the speech had been delivered here. Citizens of this second largest city of the German Federal Republic proudly call themselves Hamburgers for a logical reason, which has nothing to do with the principal product of McDonald's ubiquituous fast food chain.

Although you can spot the sign of the Golden Arches while sightseeing in Hamburg if you keep your eyes peeled, the city has no more connection with its edible namesake than Frankfurt with the hot dog, or the description of Munich's leberkase with its contents, which is neither liver nor cheese in spite of the literal translation.

In Frankfurt, rindwurst is the long, thin, red sausage that tastes like a frankfurter should. In Munich, the worst that can happen is that you will learn to like the so-called liver cheese, a baked beef and pork loaf which has only a regal nodding acquaintance with a direct descendant once known to U. S. Army cooks as Spam.

HAMBURG'S CIVIC CENTER BOAT LANDING

IN HAMBURG, Germany's largest seaport, the specialty is sea food. The only gastronomic reference to the city's name on any menu encountered on this three-day visit was Aalsuppe Hamburger, or eel soup, Hamburg style. Not a scrap of ground beef in it, but surprisingly, there were round, prickly bones in the bottom of the bowl. For some reason I always have thought of eels as boneless, like bananas.

Another surprise for the first-time visitor is the harmonious way this great industrial city has been imposed on an advantageous setting. Hamburg's greatest natural assets are the freshwater Lake Alster in the center of the city and the meandering River Elbe which feeds it before flowing onward to the harbor at the head of its estuary leading to the North Sea.

Lining the lake on both sides are continuous landscaped parks with occasional benches at view points and separate walking and bicycle paths. Numerous small boat marinas dot the shores, with sailing vessels outumbering powered craft by about 100 to one in a casual survey. Sculling crews, circling regattas and ferry launches have no problem avoiding each other on the broad reaches of the waterway.

BOULEVARDS set back from the green belts rimming the lake prevent the stately mansions, office buildings and older hotels from encroaching on the water. Some of the new high-rise hotels, like the Intercontinental, are farther removed from the scene by small parks on their own grounds, and screened from view at ground level by plantings. The drive to the hotel from the Lufthansa German Airlines terminal at Hamburg Airport on the outskirts of the city is a continuous scenic delight.

The panorama of the city from the Intercontinental's rooftop Fontenay Salon shows few signs of the industrial might which made Hamburg a city of nearly two million population. The waterways, the greenery and the ornate spires of a dozen or more historic churches needling the sky give a strong impression of Copenhagen, long recognized as one of the most beautiful capitals of Europe. Hamburgers contend their favorite city is neck and neck with Munich for first place in Germany's City Beautiful sweepstakes, but they may be overly generous to the Bavarians by at least a nose.

THERE IS a seamy side of the city. Raunchy is a more accurate word for the infamous Reeperbahn and its side streets in the St. Pauli dockside district. Hamburg's Sin City features the most concentrated collection of nudie bars, skin flick houses, sex shops and red light establishments in Europe. Most of the city's 2,500 registred prostitutes work the streets and a network of covered alleys leading to a cavelike central rendezvous where scantily clad damsels display their charms under dim lights.

Even here there are efforts to clean up at least the outward appearance. Pimps and their professionals are restricted to clearly defined areas and the hours between travel

8 p.m. and 6 a.m. Sidewalk shills who shanghai patrons off the street face hefty fines. Following construction of a subway extension line under the Reeperbahn, officials plan a landscaped divider for the street, much to the dismay of businessmen who fear the trees will screen their gaudy neon marquees.

It is not necessary to visit the Reeperbahn for live entertainment in Hamburg. The Hansa Theater, a supper club in a 19th century concert hall, provides a full orchestra for a 2½-hour variety show in the best tradition of vaudeville, along with a choice of a set cold plate meal or dinners from the menu. Waiters respond with drinks to the touch of a button at every table. Multilingual acts from Europe's music hall circuit round out a very enjoyable evening.

Irish flying boat

"The Southern Cross," one of two giant Sandringham flying boats which ended an aviation era in Long Beach with the last trans-Pacific seaplane flights in 1974, will fly the Irish flag this summer.

Capt. Charles Blair and his wife, actress Maureen O'Hara, will operate the four-engine, 42-passenger craft on sightseeing tours from the Irish mainland to the Aran Islands in Galway Bay. The service was inaugurated Saturday under an agreement with Aer Arann, the Irish domestic airline.

herb shannon

Blair piloted both of the S-25 flying boats on successive Pacific crossings from Australia in October and December of 1974, stopping in Long Beach for maintenance and service. His auburn-haired wife served as stewardess and official photographer on both flights.

The aircraft, the last of their type in service anywhere in the world, were purchased in Australia for the Blairs' Antilles Air Boat Service in the Caribbean. This year and last, the couple used one of the flying boats to commute to their summer home on Bantry Bay in Ireland.

The summer service under the Aer Arann banner will take passengers on one-day tours from Killaloe on the Shannon River to the Aran Island village of Inishmore. After the island visit, the seaplane will return passengers to the mainland, putting down on the lake at Cong for lunch at Ashford Castle, a magnificent hotel on the site of a 13th century estate. The third flight of the day returns to Killaloe.

The best news about the only flying boat service in Europe is the cost of the outing. The $60 per person fare includes the round trip to Inishmore and Cong, all sightseeing and lunch at Ashford.

Full information on the flying boat tour and other Aer Arann services is available from the Irish Tourist Board, 510 W. Sixth St., Room 317, Los Angeles, Calif. 90014.

Now! Non-Stop Margarita Flights™ to Cabo San Lucas ...and on to Manzanillo

It's now easier than ever to reach spectacular Cabo San Lucas on Mexico's fabulous Gold Coast via our non-stop Margarita Flights™ from Los Angeles. The southernmost point on the Baja California peninsula, it offers the finest sport fishing in the world. And, much much more. It's a place to get away from it all, with secluded beaches just for two, breath-taking scenery, and crystal clear waters which invite skin diving and snorkeling and all water sports. Beautiful black coral jewelry, unique to Baja, is available at bargain prices. New and luxurious resort hotels overlook the sea in a place that until now was accessible only by private yacht or plane. Fly on to Manzanillo, the Gold Coast's newest resort, with its plush accommodations, beaches, golf, tennis and fishing.
Going to Mexico City? With us you can stop off at both Cabo San Lucas and Manzanillo on the way, at no additional fare. Enjoy our famous Margarita Service™ with complimentary margaritas, sparkling champagne, cocktails, fine wines, personalized attention and Mexican hospitality.

Mexico's exclusive private resorts have gone public. Our Aeromexico Quality-Approved Touriffic tours to Cabo San Lucas and Manzanillo start at only $152. And remember, due to the recent peso devaluation, the bargains just begin there. Fly Aeromexico to Mexico's Gold Coast soon.

SUBARU

YOU DON'T PUMP A LOT OF MONEY INTO A SUBARU
37 mpg Hwy / 22 mpg City
Our SEEC-T engine doesn't need a catalytic converter. SUBARU runs on regular gas ... not the more expensive unleaded. Your actual mileage may vary because of the way you drive, condition of your car and whatever optional equipment you may have. It will be a long time before your wallet goes from full to empty with the mileage Subaru gives.

Aix Les Bains fixes your aches and pains

By Linda Goldston
Ridder News Service

AIX-LES-BAINS, France — The frivolous notion of a vacation was not invented in this lakeside resort, but it might well have been.

All the pleasures of water and the sun are here for the asking, making it hard to stay inside. Very hard.

The only "indoors" interludes recommended are for the necessity of sleeping and the luxury of basking in a major European spa.

Even if your rhematism isn't acting up, a thorough soaking in the 90-degree water at the Roman baths of the hot springs will rejuvenate that tired body and prepare it for the activities to come.

The accent is on feeling good, body and mind.

Nestled on Lake Bourget in the French Alps, Aix-Les-Bains is one of those places the weary traveler wishes he'd come to first.

The site originally was a Roman spa and continues to soothe the aches and pains of 5,000 persons daily. About 400 to 500 Americans visit the area yearly, usually in transit.

FORMERLY shut off to most tourists, the area is now becoming more of a crossroads with a new airport and new highways.

As the popularity spreads, so do the facilities. A new thermal bath complex catering to the international clientele is expected to open soon and will be situated in a lush park-like area on a hillside.

A convention center that accommodates 1,200 persons also is available. The Royal Hotel overlooks the city and provides four-star accommodations.

Lake Bourget, largest natural lake in France, is your ticket to fishing, swimming, sailing, water skiing, rowing and skin diving.

The lake originates from springs and is most bountiful to fishermen with perch and pike. Several local restaurants feature fresh perch from the lake as their specialty.

If you feel steadier with ground at your feet, there's tennis, golf on an 18-hole course, skeet shooting, horse racing, car rallies and tandem bike rides around the lake.

AND THE fun continues long after the sun has faded behind nearby Mt. Revard.

The Grand Casino beckons the lake luck challengers and is the scene of frequent concerts. Some 14 nightclubs provide quite a choice in this city of 25,000.

The big "white palace" housing the privately run casino was built in 1899. The concert hall at the casino features a 120-musician orchestra and seating for 900 persons.

The town square has a perpetual holiday air with its lush landscaping and frequent outdoor concepts. Each day's activities are announced over a loudspeaker.

The city hall was built in an old Roman church in the 16th century and has a free open air museum.

Lake Bourget tempers the climate so that Mediterranean vegatation can grow, although at nearby Mount Revard there is a winter sports resort. Many lifts, a ski school and numerous well-marked ski runs thread through the surrounding forests and slopes.

WITHIN a few hours driving distance from Lyon and Renoble, Aix-Les-Bains also is near the monastery of The Grande Chartreuse, where 40 members of the Carthusian Order pursue their historic life of silence and solitude.

A tiny, winding road will take you farther and farther back into virtually untouched countryside to the imposing monastery. Tourists may visit the adjacent correrie where a representation of the contemplative life is shown.

In Lower Voirons is the distillery where Chartreuse liquers are made. Visitors are shown through all but the secret chamber where the monks mix and add their herbs to the liquers. The exact combination of herbs for the liqueurs has remained a secret for centuries.

Ahoy there, picky people

Penny-wise Traveler

Is it possible to be a bad picker of cruise ships even after you've carefully compared prices, ports and cabin size and location?

It is, but no law says you have to be.

In fact, anyone with the $75 to $105 a day that it's likely to cost you to socialize at sea these days should also have smarts enough to grasp the necessity for becoming a pickier person. The fact that all cruise ships float does not mean they are identical.

There are big and little differences. If your goal is to become the world's foremost authority on mistakes and how to make them, the thing to do is ignore the differences. For instance:

When faced with a choice of several ships of varying sizes, do not ask if size matters. If it means, as it occasionally does, that the big ships can't park at a port's dock, and therefore costs you precious shore time being ferried back and forth, terrific! You can grouse about this for years.

Never check cruise dates to see if they correspond to school vacation times. That way, if you're allergic to children, you stand a much better chance of determining if the presence of small persons can really ruin a trip or only give you gas pains.

When deciding among several ships, don't ask to see sample menus. You might find that the style and range of one ship's cooking has more appeal than the others and be tempted to go where the goodies are.

PICKY PEOPLE of course become happy people by reversing this route. Easier ways to go include the following:

1. If you have to fly to and from a port to take your cruise, by all means ask about air-sea excursion fares or any other discounts, hardly the worst news to hear.

2. Don't take it for granted that all ships have both indoor and outdoor swimming pools, full gymnasiums, elevators and individual control of cabin air conditioning. Even very good ships can lack one or all of these things.

3. Don't ignore the fact that "suggested tipping" and bar prices are not uniform from ship to ship. The ship line will gladly tell its policies or recommendations in advance.

4. Read the advertising. What it emphasizes can clue you as to whether you're buying a ride on a floating nightclub or the last bastion of formal living. Anyone who is a hater of big bands, discos, neckties and a host of other things has a golden opportunity to be a showboat's Lonesome George or Georgia.

5. For the same reason, look for a travel agent who specializes in cruises in order to ask about a ship's reputation for "style" and the type of passengers it caters to. There's a lot to be said for trying to travel with people you like and have something in common with.

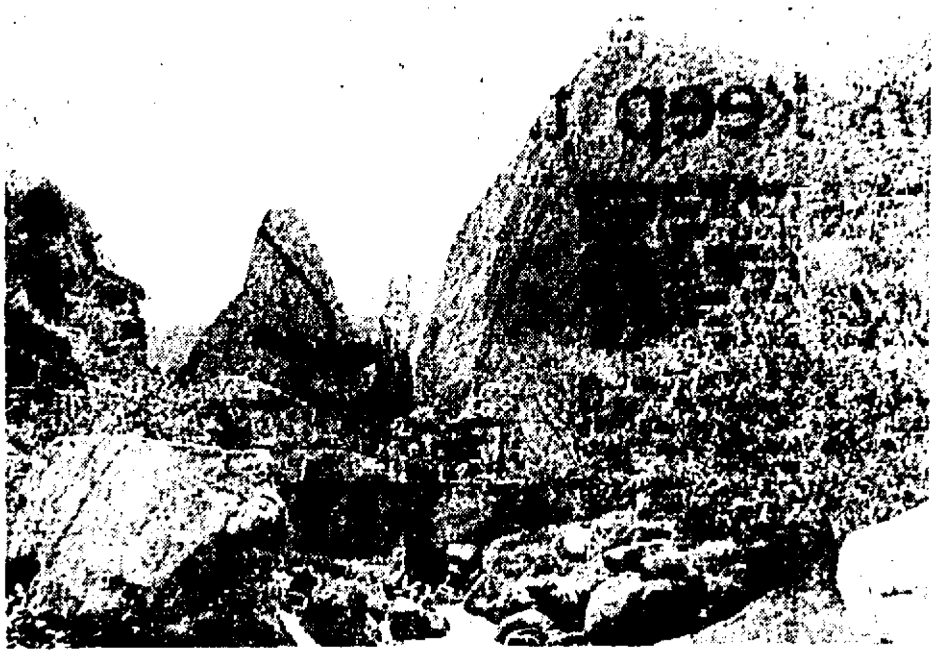
Maui magic still charms



PICTURESQUE Iao Valley is popular picnic spot on the Hawaiian island of Maui.

MAUI, Hawaii — With balmy air bouncing fluffy clouds in the blue skies overhead, we sped in our rental car along the seashore highway. Misty isles rose from the bay to our right. A windswept sea of sugar cane rolled to our left. We were off for another day of exploring the island.

I have watched this lovely stretch of beach and its seaport town grow from a quiet tropical retreat reminiscent of old Waikiki to a crowded checkerboard of condominiums and hotels.

A sign announcing Jesus Coming Soon marked our arrival in Lahaina town. Like the beach, the village has learned to accommodate lifestyles that would spin its 19th century missionaries in their graves.

We tried to shop for picnic supplies, but after sidestepping throngs of ice-cream-cone-licking tourists who crowded the sidewalks, we retrieved our car and continued on our way.

THE PREVIOUS day we had driven north of the Royal Lahaina hotel while my companion reminisced nostalgically about hidden coves with sandy beaches where he had picnicked and snorkeled in years gone by. To his disappointment, they now are crowded like the town. Near some, autos were lined up along the highway's shoulders for miles in all directions. Others have been developed into condominium projects.

This day we set off in the opposite direction, determined to find a place of solitude for a picnic in Iao Valley. Since the route led through Wailuku, a charming old town of narrow hilly streets, we stopped there for picnic supplies in a quaint little store that featured strange Japanese foods along with the usual cheese, pickles and beer.

Iao Valley is one of the loveliest spots of the island. Serene and hushed, it belies the violence of its history. Prior to World War II, its streams were the main source of Maui's water supply. After the bombing of Pearl Harbor, there were fears that the Japanese had poisoned the water.

THE RUMOR proved untrue or a legendary incident of old Hawaii might have been reenacted. This occurred in 1790 when King Kamehameha I defeated the forces of the king of Maui so decisively that their warriors bodies choked the stream and gave the park its name — Kepaniwai — which means "damming of the waters."

As we ascended the valley, mountain ridges appeared to hang in green shrouds from the sky. Below, masses of red tulip tree blossoms, frangi-pangi and blue morning glory banked along the ground. In occasional open areas, gigantic banyan trees dropped fringes of roots partitioned into mysterious chambers.

At the top, Iao Valley State Park, dominated by the 2250-foot-high Iao Needle, rose before us. After hiking a short distance uphill, we decided to settle for a picnic by the stream and chose another trail leading down into the canyon

The Park Department here has done a good job. Trails are marked with unobtrusive signs identifying broad-leafed birdnest ferns, screw pines with multitudinous roots, candlenut trees, fishtail fern and other rare plants that grow in this clime.

DOWN BY the stream we climbed atop a sun-warmed boulder to enjoy our picnic fare. Water splashed against the rocks as it raced down-stream, creating a sensual medley with verdant jungle smells and lush tropical growth. We felt centuries removed from Lahaina's busy tourists racing from one activity to another.

Maui's enchantment is that it provides space for all kinds of people — those who seek fulfillment in nature and those who get their kicks in crowds. Next to Oahu, there is more going on here than on other islands of the Hawaiian group.

Good reason for Maui's popularity is its wealth of sandy beaches, golf courses, tennis courts and luxury accommodations. The Royal Lahaina hotel, where we stayed, has them all, in addition to sailing lessons, hula classes and lei-making sessions for guests.

Evening entertainment is available at most of the hotels lined up along Lahaina Beach. The most elegant room for dinner dancing is the Royal Lahaina's Crown Room where paradoxical portraits of Hawaii's historic nobility line the walls. Because of a fawning regard for European nobility, they had commissioned artists to make them resemble the Portuguese in feature and dress.

Our finest dining was at the new Royal Lahaina Country Club overlooking the golf course and sea. It is open to the public. Service as well as cuisine here is superb. Be sure to order the deep dish apple pie served piping hot in iron pots.

Keeping cool in Singapore

stan delaplane

Singapore

Caught Cathay Pacific's dinner flight from Hong Kong down to Singapore where the night temperature was a steamy 80 degrees. Got an air-conditioned room in the Marco Polo (related to Hong Kong's grand Peninsula) and went downstairs to audition the famous Singapore Sling.

The "Sling" was the cooler before air-conditioning. It was sloshed by British bounders and blackguards. By exiled ne'er-do-well nephews. And by writers like Kipling and Maugham.

The locale was "Cads' Alley". The watering hole: The Long Bar — still going.

Here's the original formula from year 1915:

"½ Tanqueray gin: ¼ Heering Cherry brandy: few drops of Benedictine. Cointreau and Angostura bitters. Add ¼ mixed orange, pineapple and lime juice. Pour in a glass of ice. Stir."

At 85 degrees north of equator, Singapura — "the Lion City" — is always an AVERAGE 80 degrees. It's the cleanest city in Asia.

Lee Kuan Yew, the strongman premier, did not make speeches about "Keep Our City Clean."

HE PASSED a law: Drop a cigaret butt, a gum wrapper or even spit on the street. Fine $500. (U.S. $209.)

Another $500 fine if you smoke in an elevator, a bus or a theater.

A foreigner caught with marijuana is booted out of the country. A Singapuran pushing heroin is executed.

It's a green city by a blue bay. (Where the famous cannon pointed while the Japanese Army marched in by the back causeway. "Impossible," said the British whose cemented guns pointed firmly out to sea.)

Population 2.3 million. Three of four are Chinese. The slummy alleys of 20 years ago have been ripped out. They've built low-cost high-rises. Lawns are green and barbered with stands of palms.

A good shopping city — Singapore has always been a rival of Hong Kong. Chinese tailors. Ivory and jade. Japanese cameras and steros at free port prices.

"FREE PORT" doesn't necessarily mean "cheap."

An American businessman who flies the Orient several times a year said:

"These towns are being priced out by inflation. Plus the drop in the U.S. dollar. Take Hong Kong: The U.S. dollar used to exchange for Hong Kong dollars $5 or $6. Now you only get $4.53 HK.

"Inflation is bad. People who own real estate squeeze the shopowner like an orange.

"I priced some tailor-made shirts in Hong Kong: $25 U.S. I can have them tailor-made in San Francisco for $28. And if they put in poor thread or buttons, I can go back and raise hell."

Traveling businessmen (Cathay Pacific flies most of them and has a back-of-the-seat magazine with latest prices) say Korea is the lowest on tailored suits now.

Hong Kong and Tokyo airport "duty-free" shops MUCH higher than in town. Pick up business mainly from bored passengers between flights.

CAMERA buff told me: "I bought a Japanese accessory in Singapore for $72. Saw it in the Tokyo airport duty-free shop, $90.

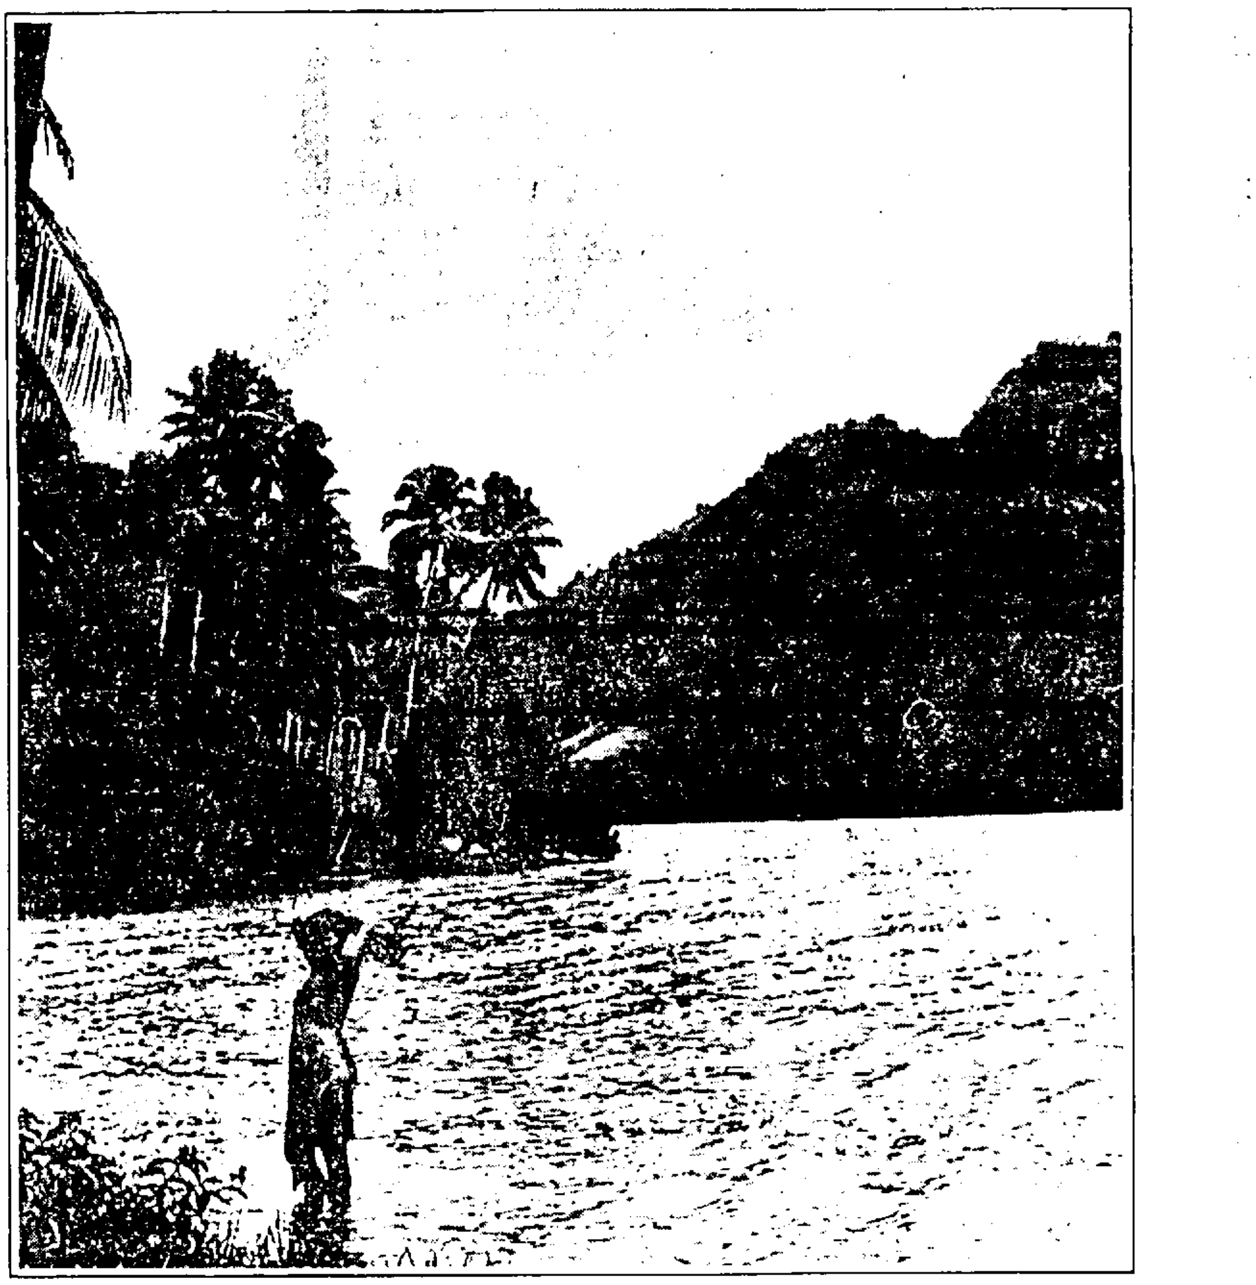
"A Japanese camera in 'duty-free' Hong Kong was about $600. I figured by the time I brought it home and paid duty, I could have bought it in New York for $8 less."

"Glutton Square". It's a parking lot by day. At night Singapore cars are gone and the street restaurants roll in. Little lighted, portable restaurants — you put them together like a toy model.

There are tables in the square. You shop the stands. Satay — spiced meat on a skewer at one. Indian curry from another. Bottled beer at a third.

You set up your own dinner at a table.

Seems safe to me. The night we had dinner, the chairman of the board of Singapore Airlines was eating at the next table.



Here's the picture that's supposed to make everyone run off to the South Pacific. It works every time.

Anticipating the response, we've got some tours to make the trip as pleasant as the picture.

Tahiti, 10 days, $729.

You'll spend 5 nights in Tahiti and 6 nights in Moorea. (That's where Tahitians go for vacation.) And we include air fare, hotels, and transportation by motor yacht between Tahiti and Moorea in the price of the tour. We also include a circle-the-island tour of Tahiti. And in Moorea, the use of outrigger canoes, snorkel equipment, and glass-bottom paddle boats. Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's Tahitian Escape, PAH 540. Or send in the coupon below.

Australia Fly/Drive, 14 nights, $1,048.

The continent of Australia is as big as the United States, with a culture that ranges from aboriginal tribes to the sophistication of the opera house in Sydney. To see as much of Australia as you can, we'll give you a car with the first 1,000 kilometers free. Tour price includes accommodations for the first night at the TraveLodge in Sydney. For the balance of your vacation we include accommodations at a country hotel in West Wyalong.

New Zealand Fly/Drive, 14 nights, $993.

If you don't think of New Zealand as the perfect South Pacific retreat, a drive through it will change your mind. In fact, we give you a car with the first 1,000 kilometers free. Tour price includes accommodations for the first night at the TraveLodge in Auckland. For the balance of your vacation we include accommodations at a quaint country hotel in Awanui.

Besides the car, our Fly/Drive vacations include round trip fare, and your hotels for the length of your stay. Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's Australia/New Zealand Fly/Drive vacations, PAH 055. Or send in the coupon below.

We also offer tours to some equally exotic, far off places. Like Pago Pago, Nadi, and Samoa.

The prices of our tours are based on round trip GIT economy air fare, for groups of 10 or more, and are available on selected departure dates. If a group is not formed we'll try to arrange an alternate date. Hotels are based on double occupancy.

In our Australia/New Zealand Fly/Drive vacations, car rentals are based on 2 people sharing. You pay only for gasoline, insurance, and local taxes. Tickets must be purchased at least 21 days in advance. For our Tahiti vacation you purchase your tickets at least 30 days in advance.

For more information on how to run off to the South Pacific, call your travel agent. Or just run off to your mailbox and send in the coupon below.

Flea Market Finds

Collectors keep track of Toonerville Trolleys

Q. "Our wind-up Toonerville Trolley toy is in perfect working condition." — Mr. and Mrs. E. L., Macon, Mo.

A. Fontaine Fox was the creator of the beloved Toonerville Trolley comic strip starring an unforgettable cast of characters and one dilapidated trolley. The Skipper-operated, windup Trolley toy marketed by Nifty in 1922 wholesaled for $8 per dozen. Nowadays it is difficult to track one down even with prices hovering around $300.

Several variations were also offered along with other Toonerville Trolley toys featuring Powerful Katrinka and Aunt Eppie Hogg. So if you have to miss a trolley, please be certain it isn't a Toonerville Trolley!

Q. "In an old trinket box I discovered a coral brooch." — Helen, Dunkirk, N.Y.

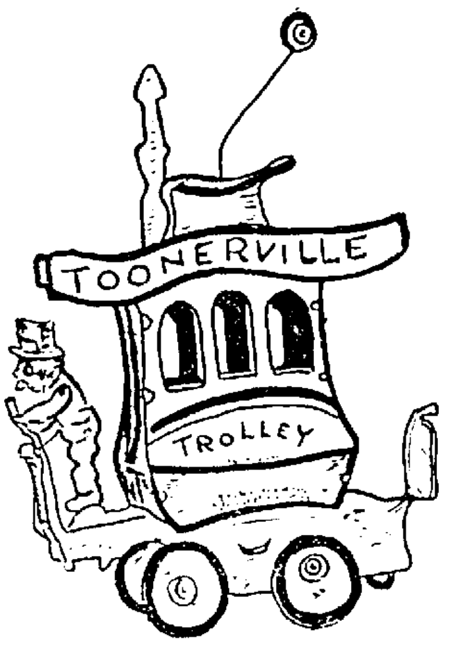
A. Jewelry designers active during the 19th century created breathtakingly beautiful bracelets, brooches, rings and even tiaras, combining coral with other precious stones. The colors ranged from pure white through shades of pink to red. Sometimes the palest varieties were skillfully crafted into flower petals for botanical jewelry.

Because coral supposedly had the power to ward off evil spirits, pieces were often presented to children, even by the skeptics! Value guide: brooch, branch coral, 14k gold mounting, circa 1870, $50.

Q. "When did the Rookwood Pottery adopt its 'RP' monogram trademark?" — Faith, Knightstown, Ind.

A. The famed Rookwood Pottery of Cincinnati, Ohio, founded by Maria Longworth Storer in 1880, introduced its familiar RP monogram mark in 1886. Each year thereafter, one flame mark was added above the monogram until 14 flames appeared in 1900.

Thereafter, a Roman numeral under the symbol provided the year of manufacture. Many pieces also bear shape marks, process marks, clay marks or decorator marks to further unravel the mystery of a Rookwood find! Value guide: vase, orange nasturtiums, 4¾ inches tall, circa 1898, $175.



Q. "We're about to dispose of a collection of shaving mugs and require pricing data." — Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Youngstown, Ohio.

A. A shaving mug mania swept through town and country in the late 1800s, when mugs of china, glass, silver and other materials could be viewed at the local tonsorial parlor. The occupational types are noteworthy acquisitions.

Because shaving mugs are fast movers whenever dealers acquire them, they generally prepare for a "sellebration." Value guide: B. P. O. E., $35; Gibson Girl, $40; R. S. Prussia, florals, $90; occupational mugs; baggage master, $110; coal miner, $120; jockey, $150; photographer, $165; silver-plated type, initialed, $35.

Appraise your antiques with Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide, "The ABC's of Victorian Antiques," Dodd, Mead and Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Crown Syndicate, Inc., No. 5 Crown Road, Weatherford, Tex. 76086. Please include a check or money order.

Please note: Prices may vary depending on condition and geographic location.

Dan D'Imperio welcomes your questions about antiques and collectibles and will answer as many as possible in this column. However, volume of mail precludes personal reply. Write to him in care of Independent, Press-Telegram or to P.O. Box 681, Weatherford, Tex. 76086.

Volunteers sought by meal program

The Long Beach Community Concert Orchestra will perform at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday in the Hawaiian Gardens Community Center, 12123 E. 219th St., following the serving of the MORE (Meals Outreach Referral and Education) Nutritional Meal for senior citizens.

The program, which is sponsored by Long Beach City College and the Long Beach Recreation Department, and the dinner are open to senior citizens over age 60. Fee ranges from 75 cents to $1, however, those unable to pay will not be turned away.

The MORE Nutritional Meal program is ordinarily geared to serving noonday meals to senior citizens at community centers. In addition, the program also uses volunteers to deliver meals to older Seal Beach residents confined to their homes.

Meals are picked up at the North Seal Beach Community Center, 3333 St. McCloud Ave., and after July 5 will be picked up from the First United Methodist Church at Central and 10th Avenues.

The MORE office, now seeking volunteers, reimburses volunteers at 15 cents per mile. Those interested may contact Social Service Coordinator Marylou Reed or Project Director Maureen Kusske.

Registration deadline nears for NOW confab

Women's legal rights and the history of American women are among the workshops that have been scheduled as part of the Long Beach chapter of the National Organization for Women's "Seminar in Contemporary Womes Issues" July 9 at the Unitarian Church, 5450 Atherton St.

The all-day program, which will begin at 8 a.m. with registration and coffee, will feature a luncheon address by Long Beach City Council member Renee Simon.

Other workshop topics will be self-defense, affirmative action and assertiveness training.

Registration fee, which includes lunch, is $10 before July 1. For those registering after July 1, the fee is $12.50.

Further information may be obtained from the Long Beach chapter of NOW, P.O. Box 15306, Long Beach, 90815.

No Dick Young letters in Seaver's fan mail

CINCINNATI—A writer walked past Tom Seaver's cubicle in the Cincinnati clubhouse.

"The answers are no, no, yes, and yes," said Tom Terrific. "Just fill in the questions."

Tom Seaver is surprisingly relaxed, considering the circumstances under which he left the New Yorc Mets on June 15 and the pressure placed upon him when he stepped into a Cincinnati uniform.

Despite the Dodgers' commanding lead in the National League West, Cincinnati fans were convinced Seaver was the answer to the blahs the Reds had been experiencing.

"One guy can't do it," said Seaver as though he were attempting to temper the expectations of fans in baseball-conscious Cincinnati. "I'm definitely going to help the ball club. Quite a bit, in fact.

"But I think it's wrong to assume we're going to overtake the Dodgers just because I'm here now."

Seaver lost a 3-2 decision to Tommy John and the Dodgers Friday night in his first Riverfront Stadium appearance in a Cincinnati uniform.

"If I can go out and hold the opposition to three runs a game, the numbers (victories) will be there at the end of he season. Consistency is what I can contribute."

"With this ball club, three runs isn't much. We'll win a major share of those games."

Seaver reached into a cardboard box filled with letters.

"I had 500 of 'em yesterday," said Seaver. "Most of them—about 90 per cent—are from people in New York. They're really pretty sweet letters and cards.

"The people are writing to say thanks for the things I did when I was with the Mets. I'm going to send autographed pictures to most of them."

Seaver sighed. "I have some great memories from my years in New York."

Someone asked whether any of the letters were from Dick Young, a columnist for the New York Daily News.

Seaver grinned, although it was strained. "No, but I understand he's getting letters himself, and some of them aren't very friendly."

Young had written on the morning of June 15, baseball's trading deadline, that Seaver's wife, Nancy, was jealous because their good friend, Nolan Ryan of the Angels, had a better contract than Tom Terrific.

Stories surfaced that this was the breaking point for Seaver and that he demanded to be traded "because they're dragging my wife into this."

Seaver said the story was inaccurate.

"Actually, it goes back a year and a half," he said of his celebrated feud with the Mets. "It was a combination of things. I'd rather not talk about it."

Then he proceeded to talk about it, albeit guardedly.

"The Young column on June 15 didn't convince me I should demand a trade," he said. "Other factors were involved."

Such as?

"I'd rather not discuss it."

But Young...well, that was something else.

"I haven't talked to him since spring training of 1976," said Seaver.

The implication was clear. Either Young had been manufacturing stories or he was being spoofed by the Mets management.

"He was getting his information straight from M. Donald Grant (president of the Mets)," said Seaver, measuring each word.

Seaver was asked what had triggered his war of words with Young, whose stock in trade is a smoking typewriter.

"I don't really know," he replied. "He's been on my case for a year and a half. To tell you the truth, I think the guy is sick."

A writer interjected that Young had been the recipient of a death threat on Friday.

"Damn," he said in mock anger. I told my wife not to call him."

Seaver led the laughter, but he quickly added. "Actually, I think something like that is terrible. They did it to Hubie Green in the U.S. Open, too. That's sick."

As sick as Dick Young?

There are times when discretion is the wisest course.

Tom Seaver, Ol' 41 in a new Cincinnati uniform, turned and headed for the ramp leading to the field.

Terrific.

Reds nip Dodgers, 7-6

'Not out of it' asserts Sparky

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

CINCINNATI — The post-game talk was mostly about the Cincinnati Reds' muscle, how they blasted three home runs — two of them by Johnny Bench — and four doubles.

But Saturday's 7-6 victory over the Dodgers was as much a result of their defense as anything else.

A Riverfront Stadium throng of 50,062, as well as a national television audience, marveled at three defensive plays by Joe Morgan, Dave Concepcion and Cesar Geronimo, which became all the more vital when the Dodgers followed with an assortment of hits.

The loss cut the Dodgers' lead over the Reds to 8½ games. But, more important, prevented them sweeping the four-game series.

"There's no way we could afford to be 12½ back," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson. "Being 8½ back is still tough, but we're not out of it."

Bench, who hammered his 15th and 16th homers off loser Don Sutton, figures the only way for the Reds to get rolling is by sweeping today's doubleheader.

"A split in the series is to the Dodgers' advantage," he said, wiping his hands across his soaked T-shirt, emblazoned with the words, "Big Red Machine."

"We've got to win, that's all there is to it. If we split the series all that means is they've wiped four games off the schedule."

The irony is that the Dodgers beat the Reds' best in Tom Seaver Friday night, while Cincinnati got even by decisioning the Dodgers' best, Sutton.

THE REDS did it with their gloves, too, three times thrwarting promising innings with big plays.

"No question, our defense won this one," said Anderson. "I still

Bonds packs burden, the entire Angel team

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

Bobby Bonds may be the next Angel on the disabled list.

He has been carrying 4,560 pounds — the combined weight of the Angel roster — on his back so long it must be getting sore.

The rightfielder, the lone bit of offensive consistency the Angels have possessed in the past 42 games, was a hero again Saturday afternoon.

He homered to lead off the fifth inning, his 15th of the year, and singled to drive in Dave Chalk with the tying run in the ninth as the Angels rallied for a 3-2 win over Texas.

"If Bobby hadn't been swinging the bat as well as he has we would really be in trouble," said manager Norm Sherry, whose team returned to .500 at 33-33 and pulled within four games of first place Chicago in the American League West.

During the last 42 games, Bonds has 52 hits in 152 at bats. He has driven in 32 runs and scored 34, making him responsible for 66 of the 151 runs the Angels have scored during that period.

"He has had game-winning hits, started rallies and continued rallies for us," said Sherry of the man who has 11 home runs, 13 doubles and six triples during his spree. "That is a lot of production for one person. He has done a hell of a job."

The big guns are still firing at Wimbledon

By Neil Amdur
New York Times Service

WIMBLEDON — The big guns are still firing in the men's quarterfinals at Wimbledon.

Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg, Ilie Nastase and Vitas Gerulaitis. But so is John McEnroe. Yes, John McEnroe.

In another historical first for this centennial tennis championship, the 18-year-old McEnroe slipped past Sandy Mayer of Wayne, N.J., 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, Saturday with as much obscurity as his earlier singles victories, buried on a backfield court but serving and volleying better than ever.

"I hope they keep me back here all the time," the Douglaston, N.Y., lefthander said of the cozy setting that contrasts with the stately atmosphere of center court.

It was the seventh victory of the tournament for McEnroe. To earn a spot in the 128-player men's draw, he had to win three matches in the official qualifying tournament. No player had reached the quarterfinals of the championship draw as a qualifier since that form of play began in 1925.

McEnroe's quarter-final round opponent will be 13th-seeded Phil Dent of Australia, who escaped with a scare from Tim Gullikson, the 25-year-old American, before winning, 6-3, 3-6, 9-8, 1-6, 9-7.

A fourth American, unseeded Billy Martin, joined the top-seeded Connors, the eighth-seeded Gerulaitis and McEnroe in the last eight by coming from 2-5 in the fifth set and beating Mark Cox, of Britain, the No. 14 seed, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 0-6, 9-7, in a frustrating 2-hour, 41-minute battle.

Rated second-class, U.S. trackmen lead

GELSENKIRCHEN, West Germany (AP) — Houston McTear, one of several U.S. starters running as unofficial entrants, took the 100-meter dash in 10.26 seconds, and the American men moved to a 49-46 lead Saturday over West Germany in a two-day track and field meet.

The American women trailed the Germans 52-42 after the first day of the meet.

The U.S. team, rated only second class in German press previews, took the lead in the last of nine events, despite not having many of its stars' results count toward its point totals.

Also competing unofficially was Kate Schmidt, who won the women's javelin with a toss of 204 feet, 7 inches and Joni Huntley of Long Beach State, who won the high jump 6-0¾.

Edwin Moses, America's 400-meter hurdles champion, was scheduled to run outside competition but could not start because of an injury during warmup. U.S. coach Tom Telliz said: "We tried to get him back into shape but time was just too short."

Evelyn Ashford, an official entrant, anchored the U.S. women's 400-meter relay team which won in 43.34. Miss Ashford overtook Birgit Wilkes in the last few meters as the German girls clocked 39.60.

German gold medalist Annegret Richter ran this year's best 100 meters, despite a slow start, clocking 11.03, just two one-hundredths of a second over her own world record.

American Stan Vincent took the 400 meters in 46.60 with a powerful burst on the final meters of Gelsenkirchen's Park Stadium to edge out West German Lothar Krieg by a hundredth of a second. Krieg's time was 46.61.

The American team included nine national AAU champions. The German men were unable to match their performances. In nine previous track and field meets between American and German men, U.S. athletes won all events. The women met seven times with the American girls losing only once.

Hubert's 7-2 Mack winner over Harbor

Bill Bryant drove a two-run single in the top of the first to lead Hubert's Cafeteria to a 7-2 Connie Mack League victory over the Harbor Bruins, Saturday night.

Keith Johnson chipped in with three singles and scored three runs to propel the attack.

In the second game, the Long Beach Cardinals shaded Mary Star 2-1 behind Andy Bisnar. With two outs in the fourth, Jim Estes singled home the deciding runs.

Cervantes wins vacant crown

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (AP) — Colombia's Antonio (Kid Pambele) Cervantes captured the vacant World Boxing Association junior welterweight title Saturday night, scoring a fifth-round technical knockout victory over Argentina's Carlos Maria Gimenez.

Shua blanks error-prone Atlantis

The Shua Rams obviously did a lot of things right during their 7-0 American Legion victory over Atlantis Realty Saturday at Blair Field. But more important to the game were the things that Atlantis did wrong.

Atlantis Realty committed a whopping 10 errors during the contest and at the plate were handcuffed by Shua's Frank Followell and Steve Nabry. Designated hitter Carlos Caldarella drove in two runs with a pair of hits for Shua.

Also at Blair Field, Brian Babcock and Dwayne Elder combined to shut out Alamitos Bay as Motor Patrol won a 9-0 decision.

At San Pedro, John Fox went 2-for-3, slugging a homer and driving in three runs to lead Peterson Post to a 4-2 victory over San Pedro.

In the day's other game, Tom Tereschuk and Mark Thompson blanked Carson on three hits and Bill Bryant contributed a two-run single in the fifth inning during a 4-0 triumph by Lakewood.

TENNIS—

The much awaited women's quarterfinal match between top-seeded Chris Evert and fifth-seeded Billie Jean King was assured Saturday, but not without some anxious moments for both players.

The 22-year-old Miss Evert, perhap still drained mentally after her victory over 14-year-old Tracy Austin Friday, trailed 2-5 in the opening set to Greer Stevens but the 20-year-old South African drove two backhands wide on set points, lost her serve, and Miss Evert was away and running 8-6, 6-4.

Billie Jean dropped a set to another young South African, Marise Kruger, before settling down and sweeping the last two sets. She won, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Miss Evert, who had lost only seven games in three previous rounds, found herself struggling in cold, threatening weather. In the early stages, Miss Stevens took a series of points by hitting in front of Miss Evert, who seemed uncomfortable at the net.

But Miss Evert finally showed the form that has made her the No. 1 female in the world, getting out of trouble by saving two set points at 1-5, taking the lead at 7-6 and taking the first set.

Miss Stevens immediately broke Miss Evert in the second set for a 2-0 lead, but the champion tied it with a break of her own. Miss Evert finished the 10th game with a backspin forehand that just cleared the net and dropped dead.

Ms. King, making her major tournament comeback at Wimbledon, recovered quickly after losing the first set to Miss Kruger. Back in winning form, Billie Jean lost only one game in the final two sets.

The most interesting fourth-round pairing had Connors against Stan Smith in a rematch from last year. The outcome was the same, with Connors on top, 7-9, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

But this was a different Smith from the tentative, sore-armed competitor who managed only eight games in three sets a year ago.

Stan was close enough to sense victory, his serve was strong and penetrating as ever, his volleys crisp and his anticipation at the net smothering the best that Connors could muster.

Smith was ahead by two sets to one and needed two points for 4-all in the fourth set. But Connors gave no ground and intensified the pressure on the lanky Californian with punishing service returns.

The returns were the difference in the match, as Connors broke in the opening game of the fifth set and again for 4-3 when he hammered consecutive forehand return winners down the line.

JIMMY will meet unseeded Byron Bertram of South Africa in the quarterfinals, a match he should win. His right thumb is still in an orthopedic splint and heavily taped, but he was swinging all-out and appeared headed for a spot in next Saturday's final.

The second-seeded Borg, defending champion, cruised through his fourth-round match, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2, against Wojtek Fibak of Poland to set up another meeting with Nastase, whom he beat for the title here last year and later in the semifinals of the United States Open.

The 30-year-old Nastase has settled down and played consistently well since his tumultuous second-round match against Andrew Pattison. He handled an old nemesis, Tom Okker of the Netherlands, 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, on the center court Saturday and could be a factor in the final if he maintains his concentration and commitment.

The eighth-seeded Gerulaitis could be the sleeper of the tournament. His 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 triumph over ninth-seeded Dick Stockton confirmed his confident state of mind. Vitas lost to Stockton in the semifinals of the World Championship Tennis in Dallas last month, the victim of cramps. But in preparing for Wimbledon, the 22-year-old New Yorker said, he practiced with Borg, a player "who practices the way he plays in a match."

VITAS also became a trifle inspired, he said, after listening to a radio broadcast Friday night on the way back to his hotel that made him the only unanimous choice to lose in Saturday's round of 16.

MEN'S SINGLES

Bjorn Borg (Sweden) beat Wojtek Fibak (Poland) 7-5, 6-4, 6-2; Ilie Nastase (Romania) beat Tom Okker (Netherlands) 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4; John McEnroe (Douglaston, N.Y.) beat Sandy Mayer (Wayne, N.J.) Jets shade Barons, 3-2

VISTA — The Lakewood Jets nipped the Lakewood Barons, 3-2, Saturday in a loser's bracket game of the 10-team Vista Softball Tournament.

John Wilson scored the winning run in the seventh inning when Hice Stiles was able to beat out a ball first baseman Nick Van Leu bobbled.

Both teams plus the Long Beach Nitehawks had lost their first round games earlier in the day.

Mikles wins state golf

PEBBLE BEACH (AP) — Lee Mikles of Camarillo came from behind by winning three consecutive holes late in the match Saturday and beat Ted Lyford of Redlands 2 and 1 to win the 66th California Amateur Golf Championship.

The new champion, a 21-year-old college all-America at Arizona State, won despite playing his worst golf in the week-long event. He took four double bogeys, including one which left him 2 down with eight holes remaining in the match scheduled for 36 holes on the 6,815-yard Pebble Beach course.

Mikles, who plans to turn pro in September, was the runnerup to Southern California's Scott Simpson in the NCAA tournament earlier this month. Simpson was eliminated from the State Am in Friday's quarterfinals.

DeJesus retains lightweight title

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Esteban DeJesus of Puerto Rico landed a vicious left-hook to the jaw in the 11th round to knock out Vicente Mijares Saldivar of Mexico Saturday night and retain his World Boxing Council lightweight title.

DeJesus had built up a big advantage entering the last round.

In the 11th round, DeJesus pounded Saldivar almost at will, before landing the knock out punch. The challenger went down on his back for good and was counted out by as French referee Raymond Baldeyrou.

It was the third succesful title defense for DeJesus, who won the title on a lopsided decision over Intshimatsu Susuki in May 1976.

Before the fight, promoter Don King announced that the winner would meet Roberto Duran, of Panama, holder of the World Boxing Association title in September or October. It has been unoficially said that both fighters will receive $250,000.

DeJesus and Saldivar both weighed 135 pounds.

Race horse wears falsies—on ankles

OMAHA (AP) — Summertime Promise wears falsies to protect her while she runs.

The 5-year-old race horse wears size B foam-rubber brassiere cups on her hind ankles to prevent leg injury.

Normally, horses get such protection from a patch of sheepskin. But Summertime Promise "needs something with more cushion, because she pounds" so hard when running, said Kenny Danna, assistant trainer. "If there's nothing there, she'll scrape and bleed."

Trainer Jack Van Berg came up with the idea of taping the falsies to the horse's ankles and covering them with wrapping.

The mare, owned by Kenneth Opstein of South Sioux City, Neb., has won $69,382 this year and has a total bankroll of $338,875 in 3½ years of racing.

Fans unhappy with Vin's part-time status

If you don't like Scully, you don't like baseball

By Kris Sherman
Staff Writer

Tommy Lasorda may not realize it, but the Dodgers have been playing most of their road games minus one of their most popular and effective team members.

And the fact that the team is leading the National League West by a comfortable 6½ games is of little consolation to the legions of Vin Scully fans, who miss his voice on road game radio broadcasts as much as Lasorda might miss Steve Garvey's bat in the lineup.

"I didn't do it for the money or the network exposure. I made the change only for my family."

The 49-year-old Scully, a veteran of 27 seasons as the Voice of the Los Angeles Dodgers, has limited his baseball duties to the broadcasting of home games and televised road games this year.

Between games, he will describe a variety of sports action on television for CBS, his part-time employer for two years

For Scully, the decision . tennis and golf for CBS "was agonizing."

"I didn't do it for the money or for the network exposure," Scully explained during an interview in the Dodger Stadium press box. "I made the change only for my family."

SCULLY and his wife, Sandra, have six children ranging in age from 17½ to 2½. Three are his from a previous marriage (his first wife died in 1972), two are his present wife's from a former marriage, and the 2½ year old is theirs.

"The older you get with children," he said with a touch of sadness, "the more you realize how you are destroying a very precious commodity when you kill time. I have missed a lot of my children's lives. I can still travel for two or three days, but I don't ever again want to be away from home for two weeks at a time.

"For instance," he said before the Dodgers-Cardinals game Tuesday, "the team leaves Thursday for four games in Cincinatti, four games in Atlanta and four more in San Francisco. They'll be gone for 13 days. Sure, I miss the road trips at times, the camaraderie that you feel on the road. But I don't miss the long absences from home.

"For the past several years, there's been a war going on inside me. I loved doing the games, but I hated the travel."

In contrast to the long road trips as a baseball announcer, Scully said his commitments with CBS usually consume only weekends.

"I can get on a plane on Saturday, do a football game on Sunday and be home Sunday evening," he explained. "You just can't do that in baseball."

SCULLY'S arrangement with the Dodgers allows him to broadcast the team's home games and anchor the telecasts of the road contests as long as they do not interfere with his CBS commitments.

One such conflict came this weekend, when Scully had to be in Chicago for the Western Open golf tournament.

But Scully, who said he would rather broadcast baseball than any other sport, flew into Cincinatti for Friday night's Dodger game against the Reds and Tom Seaver.

"I won't usually do something like that," Scully explained. "But it's only a two-hour flight to Cincinatti, and I want to see Seaver's debut as a Red at Riverfront Stadium."

Scully added that missing the road games makes his job more difficult, because he has more homework to do on the box scores and newspaper clippings from games he has missed.

"But Jerry (Doggett) and Ross (Porter) (the other two members of the Dodger broadcasting team) help fill the void, and after I've missed some road games, I can get them broken down in my head so it's almost as if I'd actually seen them."

VIN SCULLY
'Hi there, everybody'

While Scully is happy in his new arrangement as a part-time player on the Dodger team, there is evidence that he is missed by dedicated — and disappointed — fans.

"I don't come into contact with a lot of fans, and the mail has gotten so out of hand that it's answered in the office," Scully said, pausing to make a few notations in his scorebook. "But ocasionally I'll see a fan who will say, 'Gee, we missed you when the team was in Atlanta or Chicago or wherever.' "

BILL SHUMARD, a Dodger public relations spokesman, said while there has not been "a great deal of negative reaction (to Scully's part-time status) the fans have let us know they're disappointed."

Shumard added, though, that fan reaction to Ross Porter, who, along with Jerry Dogget, fills the gap when Scully is not at the mike, "has been very positive."

And Scully himself, who said Porter "is doing a fine job," believes the fans will accept the new face of the Dodger broadcasting team once they've become accustomed to the change.

Nevertheless, there is a lingering sense of loss among many Dodger fans, who miss Scully's familiar "Hi everybody! And a very pleasant good evening (morning or afternoon) to you wherever you may be," when the team is on the road.

In a fan survey once conducted to determine the most admired Dodger, Scully's name was at the top of the list.

The fact is, the terms "Baseball," "Dodgers" and "Vin Scully" are inexorably tied together in Southern California, and the marriage was no accident.

Scully, a ruddy-faced, red-haired Irishman who in 1950, at age 22, joined the Brooklyn Dodgers broadcasting team under the tutorship of Red Barber, has worked hard at the union.

"Baseball is such a great game," he explained with a hint of pride in his association with it. "It's a game that most people can relate to, because they've played it in one form or another, be it softball or stickball or whatever.

"I'VE TRIED as hard as I could to be as accurate as possible and to present pertinent information to the fans," he said. "I think it's a great tribute to the game that after all the games I have seen and broadcast, there still are games, there still are plays, that give me goosebumps. I would rather broadcast a good baseball game than anything else. . .

"I'm a salesman—a pretty good salesman—but what it all boils down to is the product you have to sell," he said. "I've been very fortunate to have had an extremely good product — both in baseball and in the Dodgers."

But Scully, probably as much as anyone or anything, has helped sell the Dodgers and baseball to Southern Californians. His campaign began when the team moved west in 1958, and evidence it has been successful can be viewed during any Dodger home game as Scully's voice booms out of thousands of transistor radios brought to the ballpark and tuned into the game by fans who are sitting right there, watching the action on the field.

It's a sight unparalleled in baseball.

"I guess the fans bringing their radios really began back when the Dodgers were playing in the Coliseum," Scully recalled. "The team was playing in what was actally a football stadium, people were so far away from the field it was often difficult to tell what was happening and, on top of that, the team was bad.

"It is my team. It is my life. I'd like to see the team win. I'd like to see Walter and Kay O'Malley win another pennant...I feel like I'm part of the Dodger family. Walter O'Malley has always been a sort of father image to me, because I started so young."

"So we began trying to sell the product, the game, the opposing players. And we tried to put some human elements in our broadcasts. I don't like numbers — I love words — and I would much rather tell one thumbnail sketch about a ballplayer, about his roots, rather than RBIs, batting averages and other statistics."

THE RESULTANT anecdotes, which the announcer sprinkles throughout his broadcasts about as often as the Dodgers get on base, have become a Vin Scully trademark

It is those anecdotes, combined with the picturesque phrases Scully turns more often than the team turns double plays and the restrained enthusiasm with which he describes the action, that has prompted more than one fan to call him the best broadcaster in baseball

From Scully you are likely to hear how a pitcher got his start in baseball from a father who spent his lunch hour playing catch with his son; how a player got his nickname; that it's the birthday of a player, coach or umpire, how the Dodger stadium crowd hates relief pitcher Rawley Eastwick, formerly with the Reds and now with the Cardinals, "or almost any player from another team, just as the saying goes that 'the Indians hated the cowboys from another movie' "; how a ground ball is "backhanded by that vacuum cleaner" at third base or how a line drive is "speared" by an infielder, whether the player be for the Dodgers or the opposing team; and how a ball is "hammered" to right, "lifted" to left or "slapped" into center.

And he does it all with enthusiasm, giving equal credit to members of both teams for good plays, despite the fact that it's sometimes difficult because:

"It is my team. It is my life. I'd like to see the team win. I'd like to see Walter and Kay O'Malley win another pennant...I feel like I'm a part of the Dodger family. Walter O'Malley has always been a sort of father image to me, because I started so young. . . My association with the Dodgers has always been a family thing."

AT TIMES, Scully admits, the so-called cough button — that allows an announcer to say something that will not be heard over the air — comes in handy as a release.

"It doesn't happen often," he said, "but there are times, during an important game, when I might hit the button after a play and say to myself, 'Gee, I wish that had been a hit.' "

But no matter how hard Scully may try to hide his pleasure when a Dodger hitter knocks one over the fence, there's an unmistakable note of enthusiasm as he describes the play

"And there's a high drive into deep right field, back goes Griffey, away back, to the wall, she's gone!' "

And it is that enthusiasm, as much as anything else, that Dodger fans have come to love and, this season, dearly miss on those long road trips.

James Harris trade a slice of soap opera

As you know, the most soap-operaish incident to unfold in our town in quite some time was the trading of James Harris by the Los Angeles Rams to the San Diego Chargers.

Only the incumbent Super Bowl quarterback is immune from being supported by one faction and despised by another. Therefore, when Harris was unloaded by the Rams, the factions were heard from

"What the hell are they doing?" demanded one.

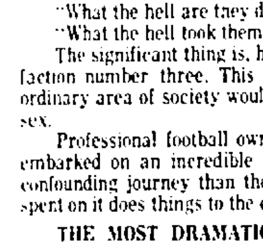
"What the hell took them so long?" asked the other

The significant thing is, however, that Harris was held in low regard by faction number three. This is ownership and management which in an ordinary area of society would be considered to be something like the third sex.

Professional football ownership is a consumed collection of creatures embarked on an incredible crusade. It is hardly likely there is a more confounding journey than the one from here to the Super Bowl and time spent on it does things to the character of men.

THE MOST DRAMATIC thing that happens to them is that they become impatient to a point of frenzy.

When the record of James Harris was examined in the throne room of the Rams, it was noted only that he had not delivered a Super Bowl. The reasons were neither here nor there.



JAMES HARRIS
Three factions

The Ram people are convinced Joe Namath is the answer. They know, or think they know, Harris will never get it done.

Therefore, it is the uncluttered view from here that Harris is better off in San Diego.

The Chargers are not pursuing a Super Bowl. They go forth each autumn in hopes of rising to mediocrity and this is a climate in which a quarterback can sometimes survive.

From a personality standpoint, it is also likely Harris will be more comfortable in San Diego. James is a man who guards his life from outside influences and this caused him some anguish with the press of Southern California

HARRIS AND HIS sufferers often expressed dismay that the sporting authors did not present his side of the story. If this was partly true, however, the foremost reason was that James would not tell it.

An example of the defensive manner he adopted regarding his private life was the fact he continually refused to divulge how he came by the nickname of "Shack."

Harris will find the San Diego literary corps to be more lenient in their demands for information.

This has to do with the clientele served by the San Diego writers. The residents of the town do not become excited over such things and may get worked up only in the event somebody removed the Pacific Ocean.

San Diego is a remarkable study in athletic apathy. It is the graveyard of professional sports franchises and the next guy to move a team into San Diego will do so only in the interests of setting a new record.

AT ANY RATE, James Harris has to be in a happier position regardless of the manner in which events transpire. In fact, a romance could blossom inasmuch as the ownership of the Chargers rejoices.

"We now have a team," says Barron Hilton who speaks for 30 per cent of the Charger stock. "We have Johnny Rogers and Joe Washington and now a top quarterback. Look out."

See? This is how a proprietor sounds when he is happy about his quarterback. When owners are unhappy, they look around for a buyer.

This time, James Harris was sent to a peaceful place and he may one day appreciate San Diego.

No Apple Valley, mind you, but pro football will never know a Shangri La.

Planners say it won't cost the taxpayers

Will L.A. land '84 Olympics?

By Jack Stevenson
Associated Press

In this era when cities of the world fear billion dollar losses in staging Olympic Games, Los Angeles bids for the 1984 international sports spectacular with expectations of at least breaking even.

Reports from the latest sessions of the International Olympic Committee indicate this California city ranks as the favorite to be awarded the Games for the summer seven years hence.

First Los Angeles must gain the nod of the U.S. Oluympic group over the bids of other cities in this nation.

Then it must gain international approval next May at Athens, Greece.

Still, plans already are being made for the Los Angeles staging of an extavaganza which planners say won't cost the taxpayers.

Californians are somewhat leery of Olympics since the Winter Games at Squaw Valley in 1960 resulted in huge losses and the 1976 Summer Games at Montreal will be paid for by the citizenry of Canada for the next decade or more.

"We don't think it will cost anything," declares John C. Argue, who is president of the Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games.

He means the revenue from a Los Angeles event will more than offset the losses just as it did in 1932 when the Olympiad in Los Angeles wound up $1.5 in the black ink.

The main arena would be the same as in 1932—the Coliseum where such football teams as the Rams, UCLA and Southern California play their home games

Most of the venues for the competition already are in existence and it's a matter of choosing which will be utilized for what

Argue says there has been no decision yet solving the problem of an Olympic Village for the housing of the athletes, but adds

"You can't build a village for two weeks, tear it down and throw it away. So, you use something you already have or build something that has lasting utility, and rent it a month for Olympic Games use

"We have alternative plans, but the most probable thing that will happen is that a private investor will build an Olympic Village with some government money in terms of helping the financing. Then they will lease it to the Organizing Committee for the period of a month at a very handsome rental. At the end of the games, they will do their thing with their private development— moderate priced housing.

"We're not going to use the housing situations at Munich or Montreal as guides

"They had problems with crowding and it doesn't appear they had the lasting utility that we want to see. They were built more for Olympic Villages than for permanent facilities."

Argue estimated that capital expenses for Los Angeles would be $33.5 million although some other estimates have gone as high as $72 million. Operating expenses were pegged at $150 million.

"I say if Montreal took in $329 million, we sure as heck can take in $240 million to take care that kind of expenditure. And we'll take in more than that," Argue declared.

"Montreal estimates on what it would take in were pretty accurate. They estimated they would take in around $350 million and actually took in $359 million

"THEIR operating expenses were about what they thought they would be, namely $150 million.

"So why the bad problem? Because of capital expenditures. They spent a billion 68 million. Of that they spent $800 million on their stadium. Take Los Angeles, you can scratch $800 million right way."

The planners figure to use the Coliseum, L.A. Sports Arena, Convention Center, UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, the Forum, the Rose Bowl, Griffith Park, Cal State Los Angeles, Rancho Cienega, Whittier Narrows, Elysian Park, the Long Beach Arena, Shrine Auditorium, and the Marina del Rey.

All are existing facilities and there are several alternates if some should not be available. Seating capacities will be greater than at Montreal.

He says to keep in mind the committee is talking of 1984, but there already are tentative plans to price tickets from $10 to $25 depending on the events."Figuring that, our revenues run to $74 million on tickets.

"Then there will be revenue from television, concessions, franchises and sponsorships,"the 45-year-old attorney points out.

Tracy draws critical raves

By Will Grimsley

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "Alice in Wonderland."

"Super Kid."

"Little Miss Marvel."

British journalists pulled out all literary stops Saturday in singing the praises of tennis's 14-year-old wonder child who became the youngest ever to play in the 100-year-old Wimbledon championships.

Attired in a too-big white dress with a blue bow tied in the back, wee Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, Calif., bowed, 6-1, 6-1 to defending champion Chris Evert on center court Friday.

The fragile-looking, 90-pound twig of a girl lost the match but won the centenary Wimbledon. It's been years since anyone created a greater sensation or a stronger ovation.

Everybody loved her, but none more than the purple phrase makers of the English press.

"Alice in Wonderland came to the centre court yesterday at centenary Wimbledon," wrote Peter Wilson of the Daily Mirror. "It was as though one of the original Tenniel illustrations to 'Alice' had stepped out of its frame."

Ian Branes of the Daily Express called her "Miss Marvel" and said: "She hits the ball—double-fisted on the backhand and ferociously on the forehand—like the champion she will surely be in the 1980s."

Laurie Pignon of the Daily Mail had his story headlined "Tomorrow's Girl Arrives," reporting: "Tracy Austin gave tennis a glimpse into tomorrow's world."

TRACY AUSTIN
Little Miss Marvel

Tracy shared block-letter headlines with the announcement that the Duchess of Kent was expecting another child at age 44

"Ta-Ta, Tracy, But You'll Be Back!" said one 72-point streamer.

"A Shirley Temple in tennis shoes," added a caption

Lance Tingas of the Daily Telegraph wrote "The rigour of Miss Austin's game was awesome in view of the slight body from which it came. One can only assume that in the normal course of events she is likely to be a champion, because already she is phenomenal."

David Irvine of the Manchester Guardian said the crowd "left convinced that as surely as Wimbledon is 100 years old, they had seen a future women's champion."

And from the pen of the Times' Geoffrey Green, who referred to Chris Evert as "the spider who frightened little Miss Muffet away," came this comment

"Unless one is widely wrong, this little Miss Muffett, with her coltish legs, her hair bunched and her teeth in braces has the future in her hands ... her time will come ... it may not be too far distant."

ANGELS—

But Bonds wasn't the only one to do a hell of a job Saturday. Pitchers Nolan Ryan, Paul Hartzell and Dave LaRoche did some fancy work, too.

Ryan went 7⅓ innings before giving way to a blister on the middle finger of his right hand. He allowed only three hits, walked just two and struck out 12, but was on the verge of being the loser — he gave up both Ranger runs — until the Angel rally.

"I was in the locker room when we got them (the runs)," said Ryan. "I got excited, but not because it got me off the hook, just because we won.

"I'm not looking for any personal statistics. I want to be healthy and be able to go out every four or five days and pitch for a winner."

Ryan made his feelings for the team evident in the eighth.

With the scored tied 1-1 and one out, he walked Mike Hargrove and gave up a single to Bump Wills, sending Hargrove to third. Out came Sherry to the mound. When the manager went back to the dugout, Ryan went with him and Hartzell came on to pitch.

"When he came to the mound I told him I had the blister and had better get out," said Ryan. "I could have stayed out there if I wanted to, but I couldn't throw my fastball properly and there is no reason getting beat because you can't do the things you are supposed to."

Ryan did do the things he was supposed to during the first seven innings. His control was better than it had been in any of his first 17 starts this year.

His only problem came in the third inning when Hargrove singled to open the inning, stole second and took advantage of two wild pitches to go to third and score.

Hartzell and LaRoche also did their job. Hartzell, after walking Jim Sundberg to load the bases, got Bert Campaneris to fly out to Bonds, Hargrove tagging up and scoring.

THEN IT was up to LaRoche. He struck out Claudell Washington to end the eighth and retired the Rangers in order in the ninth, leaving it to the Angel hitters to provide ninth-inning heroics.

Doc Ellis had checked the Angels on three hits, issuing just one walk, over the first eight innings. Other than Bonds, the Angels only managed to advance two runners past first base.

Nonetheless, Ryan decided to yank the righthander at the start of the ninth inning and brought in lefthander Darold Knowles to face the lefthand hitting Jerry Remy.

"I felt like the key to getting out of the inning was getting Remy out," said Ryan.

RYAN LOOKED smart when Remy flied out but after that, nothing went right for the Rangers in the ninth.

With the next five Angel hitters being righthanded, Ryan decided to replace Knowles with former Dodger Mike Marshall.

The 15,747 fans booed the unpopular reliever loudly, but they were nice to him compared to the Angel hitters.

Dave Chalk greeted him with a double down the leftfield line. Joe Rudi was hit by a pitch. Bonds singled to score Chalk and Rudi went to third and Bonds second when leftfielder Washington bobbled the ball. Mario Guerrero was given an intentional pass and Ron Jackson ended Marshall's nightmare with a single to right, scoring Rudi.

Marshall had faced five batters. He failed to get anyone out but he did get the loss, giving up three hits, a walk and hitting a batter.

"That was the first time I have seen him in person," a smiling Sherry said of Marshall. "I thought he did an excellent job."

Sherry also thought Bonds did an excellent job, even if the Angel rightfielder wanted to down play his effort.

"Bobby is just out there doing Bobby's share," said Bonds. "This is a team effort and I just want to contribute.

"If this club had to rely on Bobby Bonds to carry it, it would be in last place."

But Bonds is merely selling himself short. The Angels have relied on him to carry them the past six weeks, during which time they have put together a 24-18 record and reached fourth place.

ANGEL ANGLES: LaRoche said the key to the Angels winning was having reliever Dyar Miller warming up in the bullpen. "The team knew Dyar was up in the bullpen so it just got carried away a little early," said LaRoche. Miller has appeared in three games with the Angels and has a 3-0 record... The Angels start Gary Ross (2-4) and Ken Brett (6-5) in today's doubleheader while Texas counters with Nelson Briles (3-4) and Doyle Alexander (6-4)... Ryan's 12 strikeouts gave him 95 major league games with 10 or more strikeouts, two games short of Sandy Koufax's major league record... The Angels have signed lefthand pitcher Jeff Conner, their third pick in the free agent draft. The 19-year-old Phoenix native will spend the summer in Idaho Falls.

Fans salute The Bird

Detroit pitcher Mark Fidrych acknowleges his fans' cheers in curtain call after picking up his fifth victory Saturday, defeating Cleveland 6-4 and ending Indians' nine-game win streak.

The Bird wings it, but still bags 5th in a row

Combined News Services

DETROIT — Whoever heard of The Bird throwing 140 pitches in a game, giving up 11 hits and still winning?

Mark Fidrych did all that Saturday as he stopped Cleveland's nine-game winning streak, 6-4, before a Tiger Stadium turnout of 37,279.

Jason Thompson tripled in two runs in the eighth inning to give the Tigers their winning margin.

It was the fifth consecutive triumph for The Bird, who is 5-2 with six complete games in seven starts, since he came off the disabled list May 25.

But it wasn't easy for Fidrych who used just 81 and 86 pitches to dispose of his last two opponents.

"If somebody said, 'Hey, we got a party to go to,' I think I'd say, 'Forget it,'" said the 22-year-old, normally a party lover. "I'm a totally drained man."

Jeff Torborg, who suffered his first loss since succeeding Frank Robinson as Cleveland manager eight games ago, said his players worked hard. "Our guys were hitting line drives off him (Fidrych). We even hit his good low pitches."

Pat Dobson, who gave up a three-run homer to Rusty Staub in Detroit's first inning, settled down to pitch a strong game.

Singles by Ron LeFlore and Tito Fuentes preceded Staub's homer, his seventh of the year. It landed in the upper deck in right field.

Chisox 8, Twins 1

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — The White Sox blasted four Minnesota pitchers for 15 hits and climbed back into first place in the American League West, two percentage points ahead of the Twins.

Eric Soderholm, a former Twin, banged out three hits, including a solo home run, and lanky righthander Chris Knapp fired an eight-hitter to spark the White Sox.

Rod Carew had a single to keep his major league-leading batting average at .398.

AMERICAN

Orioles 5-3, Jays 2-1

BALTIMORE — After ending a six-game losing streak in the opener, Ken Singleton doubled home two runs in the fifth, leading the Orioles to a second game victory and a sweep of Saturday's twinight doubleheader with the Toronto Blue Jays.

Rookie Dennis Martinez pitched a seven-hitter and Rick Dempsey drove in three runs with a bases loaded triple in the opener.

Yanks 5, Bosox 1

NEW YORK — Mike Torrez knew all about Boston's incredible slugging feats in the last 10 games.

"You think I can't read?" he quipped after a seven-hit pitching performance that put an end to Boston's record 10-game home run spree during which they socked 33 homers while setting eight major league home run marks and tying another.

Actually, Torrez didn't have to read the newspapers to find out about the Red Sox. He yielded three long balls, 13 hits and seven runs last weekend as the Sox pounded a record 16 homers during a three-game rout of the Yankees in Boston.

While Torrez was cooling off the Boston bats, Mickey Rivers and Graig Nettles homered for the Yankees off Luis Tiant.

Royals 6, A's 4

OAKLAND — Four home runs, including two-run blasts by rookie Joe Zdeb and Fred Patek, helped Kansas City Royals. The loss was the ninth in the last 10 games and fourth in a row for Oakland.

Zdeb's homer, his first in the major leagues, came off reliever Bob Lacey, who replaced A's starter Mike Norris with one out and a runner on first in the seventh and snapped a 2-2 deadlock.

Mariners 8, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Ruppert Jones crashed a pair of home runs and Dan Meyer smacked a homer and knocked in four runs to lead the Mariners.

Courageous wins pair

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Courageous, with Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner at the helm, swept a pair of races Saturday against Enterprise and Independence, moving her record in America's Cup preliminaries for United States' 12-meter yachts to 7-1.

In the first race against Enterprise on Saturday, the 1974 Cup champion took a two-second lead at the start and stretched the margin to 41 seconds at the first mark.

On the final windward leg, Enterprise tore a jib shortly after rounding the starting buoy, enabling Courageous to widen the lead and round the weather mark 2:43 ahead.

The America's Cup Committee of the New York Yacht club placed Courageous 2:34 ahead of skipper Lowell North in the Enterprise at the finish of the 12½-mile triangular course.

Turner maneuvered Courageous to a seven-second lead at the start of the second race and gradually pulled away from her sister King's Point Syndicate yacht—Independence, skippered by Ted Hood.

At the finish, Courageous was 27 seconds ahead of Independence. Winds in both races were from the southwest at about 15 knots.

The America's Cup Committee paired Independence and Enterprise in Saturday's third race, which was won by Independence by 1:23. Independence got the jump by three seconds at the start and stretched the margin to one minute at the third mark, leading all the way.

Thus far, Turner has beat Independence three times in the preliminary trials. Turner won four of five against Enterprise. In her only win against Courageous, Enterprise crossed the finish line just seven seconds ahead of Turner.

At the end of Saturday's races, Enterprise had beaten Independence three out of five times, taking one of those wins on Tuesday by the widest margin of the trials — two minutes, 41 seconds.

On the first day of the trials a week ago, Enterprise and Independence traded wins, with Independence claiming the first race by just seven seconds and Enterprise the second by more a substantial 27 seconds.

Cubs making life grizzly for N.L. opponents

Combined News Services

They are called the Chicago Cubs and they are making life pretty grizzly for their opponents in the National League's Eastern Division.

They made the New York Mets their victims Saturday, clawing to a 5-4 victory, their fifth consecutive triumph.

Perhaps the most frustrating part of the defeat for the Mets was the method in which it was dealt them.

For eight innings Chicago had hardly managed a growl against New York pitchers Pat Zachry and Skip Lockwood and trailed 4-1. However, doubles by Larry Biittner and Bill Buckner keyed a four-run roar that propelled the Cubs to victory.

Catcher Steve Swisher led off the ninth inning with a single off Lockwood, who then bore down to retire pinch hitter Greg Gross. However, Ivan DeJesus smacked a ringing double to center and Biittner promptly chased home two runs by doubling off the glove of first baseman John Milner.

Buckner's subsequent fly to left center became another double and tied the score when outfielders Lee Mazzilli and Steve Henderson collided.

Bobby Murcer was issued an intentional walk and Jerry Morales also walked to fill the bases off reliever and loser Bob Apodaca (2-3). Manny Trillo then bounced to third baseman Doug Flynn, who stepped on third for one out but threw to first too late to complete the double play as pinch-runner Mick Kelleher scored the winning run.

Ray Burris (9-6) went the distance for Chicago to gain the victory.

Pirates 10, Expos 2

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates remained seven games behind Chicago with the help of some third-inning muscle flexing as they routed the Montreal Expos, 10-2.

Dave Parker, Al Oliver and Rennie Stennet each hit home runs during the six-run uprising which staked the Pirates to an 8-2 advantage.

Bruce Kison (5-3) endured a rocky start to pick up the victory. He yielded runs in the first and second innings but shut out Montreal thereafter.

Cards 3, Phils 2

ST. LOUIS — Ted Simmons socked a two-run homer in the seventh inning off Steve Carlton, lifting the Cardinals to a 3-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Simmons' blast, his ninth of the year, supported the eight-hit pitching of Bob Forsch (9-4) and Rawley Eastwick. Forsch surrendered a solo homer by the Phillies' Mike Schmidt, his 19th of the year, in the third inning.

NATIONAL

Carlton (9-4) had limited St. Louis to three hits and enjoyed a 2-1 advantage until Simmons followed Hector Cruz's infield hit with his shot to left.

Braves 9, Padres 5

ATLANTA — Vic Correll slammed a three-run homer and Andy Messersmith knocked in two runs with a double, powering the Atlanta Braves to a 9-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Messersmith (5-3) went seven innings and allowed five hits, including George Hendrick's solo homer in the seventh as the Braves won their third game in succession.

Atlanta wasted no time getting on the scoreboard, assaulting Padres starter Bob Shirley (6-8) for four first-inning runs.

Astros 4-1, Giants 3-4

HOUSTON — Charlie Williams and Gary Lavelle combined on a five-hitter to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros and a split of their doubleheader.

Ken Boswell's 10th-inning pinch single drove home Wilbur Howard with the winning run that gave the Astros a 4-3 win in the opener.

Williams (3-1) picked up his first career victory against Houston and helped the Giants snap a five-game losing streak. Mark Lemongello (1-11) absorbed the loss.

Joe Niekro (1-1) pitched the final four innings in relief of James Rodney Richard for the victory in the first game while Randy Moffitt, the third Giant pitcher, was saddled with his fifth loss in seven decisions.

DODGERS NIPPED—

say our defense is the best around. It gets us out of a lot of trouble."

Morgan turned in the first one, taking a base hit away from Monday to lead off the sixth inning. It appeared impossible that he'd even get to the ball. But he did, and then made a complete turn and fired a strike to first. A base hit followed one out later.

"That might be the finest play I've ever seen by an infielder," bubbled Sparky.

In the eighth, Concepcion made a running catch of a looper by pinch hitter Boog Powell with a runner at first.

"There's no way he was gonna get to that ball," said Anderson, "but, somehow, he did."

The Dodgers followed it with two hits.

Finally, in the ninth, trailing by a run, Steve Garvey led off with a liner to straightaway center. Geronimo caught up with the ball at the fence.

"That ball was tagged," announced Sparky.

AGAIN, two hits followed — but no runs — and, thanks to the big plays, the Reds put away their ninth one-run victory.

Another play that went the Reds' way was a mis-fired attempt by the Dodgers to squeeze home a run in the fourth inning.

Dave Lopes had just tripled home a run and Bill Russell was the hitter. Lopes broke for the plate but was out cold. Bench had called for a pitch out and Russell had no chance to bunt the ball.

"Just a lucky guess," Bench said later of the pitch out, insisting he hadn't picked off a sign from the Dodger bench.

The Dodgers opened a 2-0 lead on bases-empty homers by Russell in the first inning and Dusty Baker in the second.

The Reds got one run back in the third with the help of an error by Sutton. Lopes' run-scoring triple in the fourth made it 3-1.

Bench then popped his first homer in the bottom of the fourth and then unloaded a two-run shot an inning later when Cincinnati scored three times.

DOUBLES by Geronimo and Ken Griffey in the sixth improved Cincinnati's lead to 6-3, chasing Sutton in the process.

But it was Dan Driessen's bases-empty homer in the seventh off Al Downing, making his first appearance in a month, that proved decisive.

The Dodgers scored twice in the seventh off Joe Henderson, just promoted from the International League, and one more in the eighth. But thanks to Concepcion's big play, that's all they got.

Bench said he's had only modest success over the years against Sutton despite hitting the two home runs Saturday.

"What really did it," he said, smiling, "was my mom's gravy. She came up (from Oklahoma City) for the series and made this gravy. She calls it 'Home Run Gravy.'

"Yeah, I think maybe I'll have some more tonight."

Dodger of the day

DUSTY BAKER homered and singled in 7-6 loss to Reds.

DODGER DOPE — Woody Fryman earned the win, ending a personal three-game losing streak . . . It marked the 13th time Bench has hit two or more homers in a game . . . Downing had not pitched since May 28 when he suffered a pulled groin muscle against the Reds in Dodger Stadium. He'll turn 36 on Monday . . . The loss was the Dodgers' first in four games in Riverfront. It was only their third loss in their last 11 games . . . Rick Rhoden (10-3) and Doug Rau (6-1) will start today's doubleheader against Cincinnati's Fred Norman (7-3) and Paul Moskau (0-0) . . . Channel 11 will televise both games beginning at 10:15 a.m.

How they scored

DODGER FIRST

For LBSU lady golfers

Hawaii not exactly a paradise

By Elaine Risinger
Staff Writer

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) golf tournament in Hawaii turned into one of those good-bad news situations for Long Beach State golfers Millie Stanley and Sue Bennett, who returned home last weekend.

Millie, who is playing her first year for LBSU, was elected by the golfers as the only student representative to the Women's Collegiate National Golf Board. In tournament play, the well-known Long Beach golfer shot 321 for 72 holes and finished 33rd among the 173 entries.

Sue, who was disappointed with her 341, was bothered by tendinitis during the entire competition, says coach Bunny Cripe. The Seal Beach golfer had to soak her wrist in ice before each round. The same tendinitis problem kept Sue out of the final league match this spring.

Weather also proved a factor for all golfers, reports Cripe. Winds ranged from 25 to 40 miles per hour and Sue played one round in a torrential downpour.

The LBSU junior has planned a busy summer of golfing. After completing Long Beach City Match Play—in which she won the title with a 1-up victory over young Marty Stewart on the 19th hole Friday—Bennett will compete in the Broadmoor Invitational in Colorado Springs, come back home for a brief rest then play in the U.S. Amateur in Cincinnati and the Trans National in North Carolina.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

PAM SOKOLIK, catcher for the Cerritos College softball team, will attend Point Loma College in San Diego on a scholarship in the fall. The junior, who batted .364 for the season, was selected this spring to the SCCCIAC All-Star team.

Pam will compete in volleyball and softball for Point Loma and serve as assistant gymnastics coach. While a freshman at Long Beach City College, she was a member of the gymnastics team.

A top studennt (she graduated with honors from Cerritos), Sokolik plans a career in coaching with emphasis on gymnastics and softball.

JILL ORNSTEIN, who will be a senior at Marina High School in the fall, was chosen CIF Gymnast of the Year. The award was presented in ceremonies at Magic Mountain.

Now competing with Gymnastics USA, Jill won the all-around with a score of 69.95, the bar with 9.4 and the beam with 9.0 in the CIF meet. She earned a 9.05 in vaulting and 8.65 in floor exercise.

Jill, who has been in gymnastics eight years, will compete as an elite in club competition.

THE SUMMER recreational basketball league at Cerritos College is set. Ten high school teams from the Cerritos area and 10 community college entries will begin competition Aug. 1. Two-year schools entered include Long Beach City College, Golden West and Cypress.

Play will be on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, volleyball will take over the gym. The high school roster is filled, but there are still places open for teams from four-year and community colleges. Coach Nancy Kelly at Cerritos can provide additional information.

THIS IS the time of year for shifts in coaching personnel. USC has filled a vacancy left when Marci Cantrell resigned as head coach of the Trojan basketball team. Moving up will be Linda Sharp, who assisted Canntrell last year.

Sharp, who was girls' athletic director and basketball coach at Mater Dei High School before moving to USC, built an impressive record there, recording 63 wins and only seven losses by her cagers.

Dean Smith, J.D. discuss UCLA post

UCLA athletic director J.D. Morgan says he has talked to University of North Carolina coach Dean Smith about the head basketball coaching vacancy, but both declined comment on rumors that Smith would be offered the UCLA post.

Smith, who wound up his summer basketball camp at Chapel Hill, N.C., and left on an undisclosed weekend trip Friday, said:

"I have no comment because there is nothing to comment on."

Morgan said Smith was one of "eight or 10" coaches with whom he had discussed the UCLA position, and said it would probably be two or three weeks before a decision was made.

Volleyball event

Five teams will compete in the Buddy Montague Memorial volleyball tournament Sunday, July 3, at Eighth Place. Al & Kenny's Sporting Goods, Beach Bait & Tackle, Al's Pals, Cherry Ave. and Mo-Peds Unlimited comprise the entry.

605 preps set for grid drills

Squads representing the North and South will begin workouts Monday night for the 10th Kiwanis 605 all-star football game scheduled July 15 at Cerritos College.

The South, under the direction of Bellflower coach Clay Odell and Cerritos' Tom Wright, will work out nightly from 6:15 to 8 at Cerritos College. The North camp is located for the first time at Santa Fe High under the direction of Tak Kobayashi of Montebello and Jack Mahlstede of Santa Fe. Both teams will take off weekends and July 4th.

The North, which holds a 6-3 lead in the series, is loaded with nine all-CIF selections, the most ever for one squad. In comparison, the South has only three all-CIF players — Jeff Benjamin and Gary McCredie of Bellflower plus Rick Diffine of Mayfair.

ODELL, HOWEVER, is confident that his team, which covers the Suburban League, Cerritos, St. John Bosco and the six Long Beach high schools, will be more than representative.

"I think we'll be able to move the ball," says Odell, "and that's what everyone likes to see in an all-star game."

Odell's optimisim is based on the presence of outside receivers Andre Tyler (Poly), McCredie and two St. Anthony standouts, Cormac Carney and tight end Jim Donnelly. Tyler will attend Stanford this fall, Donnelly is bound for Colorado.

Phil Wilson of Cerritos and Don Hovarter of Bellflower are the quarterback candidates.

Odell says his offense will feature two flankers and two tight ends on every call, with only one set back, either Dale Oden of Wilson or Steve Johnson of Cerritos.

Odell has already been forced to make one roster change, Bob Kurz of LaMirada replacing Bill Threlkeld of Jordan on the offensive line. Threlkeld is still recovering from knee surgery.

KOBAYASHI says the North will use the Veer. He has three quarterbacks who each threw for more than 1,000 yards last fall — Billy Drulias from his own Montebello team, Dave Esquivel of Schhurr and Rich Gallegos of Santa Fe.

The North's all-CIF players are tight end James Forge and linebacker Clark Bruner of Pius X, tackle Mike Trapletti and defensive back Nike Lozica of St. Paul, guard-linebacker Ed St. Pierre of Downey, placekicker Ralph Petrosian and tackle Sal Cisneros of Montebello, linebacker Jeff Kiser of California and defensive back Allan Zettas of Whittier Christian.

Double bogeys spook pacesetters

Watson shares golf lead

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The Butler National course spooked pacesetters with double bogeys Saturday in a wild third round of inconsistencies that left Tom Watson, Wally Armstrong and Tom Weiskopf tied for the Western Open lead, each with two-under-par 214s.

Watson, the leading money earner of 1977 who has won the Masters and two other tournaments this year, rattled around for a 75. Water cost him two strokes to par on the 10th and 13th holes.

Meanwhile, Armstrong, who never has won a tour event, and Weiskopf rallied with 69 and 70, respectively, to draw abreast.

A dozen players were separated by only two strokes, setting up a frantic finale today for the $40,000 first prize.

One stroke from the leaders at 215 were Andy North, Gary McCord, Bill Kratzert, Johnny Miller and Dave Eichelberger.

At even par 216 were Phil Hancock, who was tied with Watson for the lead at 45 holes, then collapsed with double bogeys at the 10th and 18th for a 75; Mike McCullough with 74; J.C. Snead 72 and Rik Massengale 71.

North, who shared the 36-hole lead with Watson, blew to a 76. McCord had 75 with two double bogeys and Kratzert steered to regulation 72.

Miller made his move with a 69 and Eichelberger, who had the lead to himself on the back side before bogeying two of the last three holes, finished with 71.

Bunched at 217 were Bob Gilder, Mac McLendon and Curtis Strange. Tom Kite and John Lister were at 218 and six players, including Hale Irwin, were locked at 219.

Stringing out behind were U.S. Open champion Hubert Green and Arnold Palmer at 223 and defending champion Al Geiberger at 227.

Watson said he lost his concentration, making some bad swings and even misclubbing at times.

"But this is the type of course where a lot of players can shoot some high scores," he said.

North, Watson's close friend, had four bogeys and no birdies. He said: "I just played awful. The wind made it frustrating for me. I couldn't get my balance at times and couldn't take a normal pass at it. If you shoot 68 tomorrow you might run away with it."

Five-foot miss has Laura mad

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Mickey Wright fired a four-under-par 68 Saturday to share the lead with defending champion JoAnne Carner after the second round of the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Hoosier Classic.

Mrs. Carner of Lake Worth, Fla., shot a 70 on the 6,225-yard Plymouth Country Club course for a six-under-par 138 going into Sunday's final round.

"This is only Saturday," said Miss Wright, a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame. "You can't think about the other players at all now. I try not to even look at the leader boards and play one hole at a time."

The last time the two played together was in 1962, and Mrs. Carner admitted that she stayed up all night thinking about the match.

"I told myself over and over again 'Don't get in a driving contest,'" she said. "And after about three or four holes, there we were, pounding away."

One stroke behind the co-leaders is 1976 Player of the Year Judy Rankin, who shot a 68 Saturday after an opening round 71.

Mrs. Rankin, winner of last week's LPGA tournament at Noblesville, will be fighting Mrs. Carner for the No. 1 spot on the money list.

"I never have a problem getting pumped up for a tournament after winning the week before," Mrs. Rankin said. "I wouldn't be playing if I didn't feel like it."

Tied at two strokes off the pace were Pat Bradley, Debbie Austin, last week's LPGA winner Chako Higuchi and Laura Baugh, who missed a five foot putt on the 17th hole that would have given her a share of the lead. She missed again from only three inches away.

"It made me really mad, missing that putt," said Miss Baugh, who is still looking for her first career victory after nearly four years on the circuit. "It should help me tomorrow because I play better when I'm mad. And right now I'm pretty mad."

More bald eagle sites purchased

The National Wildlife Federation has announced an $837,000 land acquisition program to save two American bald eagle roosting sites from human intrusion and development. One of the sites is in California, the other in Illinois.

The California site is in Northern California's Siskiyou County, and was acquired by a citizens' conservation group. The site embraces 1,200 acres between Modoc and Shasta National Forests. Those privately owned tracts will be added to 4,800 acres of government-owned land to comprise a 6,000-acre sanctuary to be known as the T hree Sisters Bald Eagle Preserve.

The preserve has many towering Ponderosa pines and is the major roosting site in the Lower Klamath Basin near the Oregon-California border. Wildlife biologists counted 498 bald eagles there last February. It was the largest known concentration of the national bird in the lower 48 states.

The Illinois site in Rock Island County is smaller. The NWF purchased 105 acres near East Moline and declared its intention to acquire 120 additional acres. The two parcels are on bluffs overlooking Lock and Dam 14 on the Mississippi River. The sanctuary will be known as the Oak Valley Eagle Refuge. It is known that 50 bald eagles roost there, but it is a feeding area for 1,000 eagles moving up and down the Mississippi flyway annually.

Both the California and Illinois sites were under threat of bulldozers when the NWF moved in to protect the eagles' habitat, said Raymond J. Nesbit, Sacramento, director of the NWF's Land Heritage Program.

THE BULLDOZERS ALREADY had moved into the Three Sisters Preserve, and many of the privately owned acres that were targeted for acquisition had been subdivided into 40-acre tracts. Nesbit had difficulty in finding all the 21 property owners because most of them had bought their land on unrecorded sales contracts.

Nesbit noted the NWF had to act fast to save the area in Illinois. Bulldozers had almost started their work and the property would have been lost forever to builders. Nesbit said, "Eagles are very intolerant of man and man-made developments."

Both preserves have a nearby supply of fish in water that doesn't freeze over, both are isolated from people and both have fair protection from wind. Also, there is adequate morning sunshine to dry their wings for flight. In California, the big trees are far enough apart to accommodate the birds' six-to-seven-foot wingspan.

NWF, one of the world's great conservation organizations, previously had acquired two sites for eagles—1,100 acres of Missouri River bottomland along the South Dakota-Nebraska border, and a 150-acre site along the Wisconsin River, near Sauk City, now known as the Ferry Bluff Eagle Sanctuary. The Missouri River sanctuary is known as the Karl Mundt National Wildlife Refuge.

Eagles are plentiful in Alaska, non-existent in Hawaii and have been declared endangered in several of the 43 U.S. mainland states where they still survive.

MANY WATERS that support trout through the late fall, winter and spring have turned too warm for rainbow survival, so anglers are starting to look at the lakes of the Southland in the hope of catching and taking home limits or partial limits of largemouth bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish.

San Vicente Lake, the West's top producer of lunker bass, will close at sunset Monday, July 4. A quick look at the records shows that the anglers there landed 68 largemouth bass, each of which weighed more than nine pounds. March and April were the top months with 47 of those lunkers recorded.

The San Diego City Lakes Recreation people reported that boating had been purposely curtailed in Lake Murray because of the discovery of hydrilla, a noxious aquatic plant. Departments of the State and San Diego County are working to prevent the spread of the plant to other lakes.

Otay, Hodges, Sutherland and El Capitan Lakes remain open on certain days of the week. If you wish information on any of those or wish to reserve boats, telephone (714) 236-5532. Bass fishing is best in Hodges, Otay and El Capitan, and anglers are using Rebels, Rapalas, plastic worms, nightcrawlers and crayfish.

All of those lakes have been good for channel catfish, with bonito or mackerel chunks the favored food. Red worms and meal worms are the best bets for the scrappy bluegill in the same lakes.

FISHIN' FACTS

BELMONT PIER—70 anglers on 1 boat caught 12 calico bass, 45 mackerel, 75 white fish, 750 sculpin, 25 sole, 60 rock fish.

22nd ST. LANDING—170 anglers on 5 boats caught 36 halibut, 672 calico bass, 160 blue bass.

SEAL BEACH— 263 anglers on 5 boats caught 1,050 rock fish, 650 whitefish, 123 mackerel, 20 sculpin, 84 sand bass, 74 calico bass, 1 white sea bass, 3 sheephead, 2 halibut; 64 anglers on barge caught 20 bonito, 5 sand bass, 10 mackerel, 25 halibut.

SAN DIEGO— 867 anglers on 51 boats caught 101 albacore, 72 yellowtail, 867 mackerel, 23 barracuda, 122 calico bass, 116 sand bass, 1 white sea bass, 21 ling cod, 1,286 bonito, 900 rockfish, 2 sheephead.

Poly advances to semifinals in Watts cage tournament

Poly High had four players score in double figures to defeat Corona del Mar, 57-42, Saturday at Cal State Los Angeles in a quarterfinal Watts Summer Games boy's basketball tournament game.

The Rabbits will face Carson High, a 57-54 upset winner over Verbum Dei, in a semifinal game today at noon at CSLA. In the other semifinal game, CIF 4-A champion Pasadena will battle Morningside (11 a.m.).

The semifinal winners will play for the championship tonight (5:30), also at CSLA. The losers meet to decide third-place at 3.

Poly, the CIF runner-up, was led by senior guard Steve Griffen (15 points) and junior center Ray Whiting (12). Senior Reggie Bell and junior James McDonald added 10 apiece for the Rabbits.

L A City 3-A champion Carson used 12 points by center Paul Reed and 10 by forward Bob Davis to stop Verbum Dei. All-CIF center Leonel Marquetti scored 32 for the losers.

Taisez Vous 'guaranteed winner' at Hollypark

By George Main
Special to the I.P-T

When you hear that veteran trainer Bob Wheeler believes Taisez Vous may be the best filly he's ever had, it is understandable that this three-year-old filly is listed under the heading, "guaranteed winner," for today's $100,000 Hollywood Oaks at Hollywood Park.

That man who compiles horses for the "guaranteed-winner" category had one word of caution: "Remember, this race is for fillies and they are the most unpredictable of all horses."

Taisez Vous is two for two at Hollypark and four for five lifetime. Each of her Hollypark victories has been accomplished with ease. She's a runner and probably a super runner considering Wheeler's comments. In other years, Wheeler conditioned the likes of Silver Spoon and Bug Brush.

In 1960, Silver Spoon carried 130 pound and won the $100,000 Santa Margarita Handicap at Santa Anita. Bug Brush won it the year before under 126. That same year, Bug Brush defeated the likes of Hillsdale and Terrang in the $100,000 San Antonio while running a mile and one-eighth in a record-setting 1:46.

If Taisez Vous is in that class, as Wheeler hints she is, this little doll is indeed "guaranteed." It's just a matter of running around the track. The others can fight it out for the lesser awards.

Also on today's program is Hollypark's "all star" jockey race. This is at a mile and one-sixteenth and the jocks got their horses via a luck of the draw affair. Names of horses and jockeys were put on slips at the racing secretary's office and were selected one at a time. First a horse was drawn then a rider to match the horse.

Bill Shoemaker has been lucky in the past two drawings. He got a running horse both times and, consequently, is a two time winner of this race. Joining Shoemaker in the starting gate for today's race, which has a bonus of $7,500 to the winner are Steve Cauthen, Laffit Pincay, Angel Cordero, Ed Delahoussaye, Sandy Hawley, Fernando Toro (he also rides Taisez Vous), Darrell McHargue, Chris McCarron, Don Pierce, Fell and John Lively.

Jean Cruguet, who won the Triple Crown aboard Seattle Slew, was scheduled to ride in the race but had an engagement in the Queen's Plate at Woodbine in Toronto and could not make connections to arrive at Hollypark in time for today's race.

SATURDAY WASH— Mill House's Practitioner came from far off the pace to win the $44,350 Cortez Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday, but most of the 31,156 in attendance went home talking about J.O. Tobin.

The three-year-old Never Bend colt, champion juvenile in England last year, warmed up for his "second showdown" against Seattle Slew next week by winning the sixth race, a nine furlong turf affair, by three easy lengths in 1:47 flat. That clocking eclipsed the course record set by horse of the year Ack Ack in 1971 and prompted jockey Bill Shoemaker to say "that other horse (Seattle Slew) is gonna have to do some running to beat my horse next week in the $300,000 Swaps Stakes, Sunday, July 3."

Seattle Slew met and defeated J.O. Tobin in the Preakness in May, but Shoemaker, who's been in enough races to know, insisted that effort was not a true indicator of his colt' ability. "We were beaten five lengths by 'Slew in the Preakness, and believe me, we had a lot more trouble than that. I know the Swaps is on dirt, and today's race was on grass, but I honestly don't think the change in surface will make that much difference to him."

Two races later, Practitioner, under an expert ride by Sandy Hawley, outfinished, but didn't outgame favored Radiant Boy in the Cortez, contested at the mini-marathon distance of a mile and three-eighths on turf. The winning margin was a length and one-quarter, with Copper Mel coming home third, a half-length further back. Radiant Boy, according to jockey Fernando Toro, ran the final five furlongs on a bad wheel.

"He started to lug out badly and I sensed something was wrong. But he tried hard all the way and to be beaten by that small a margin is a credit to his courage. He came back lame." This was not to detract from Practitioner's performance. Unlike his sire, speedball Dr. Fager, the Laz Barrera trained colt likes to lope during the early running and make one late charge and that's how Hawley, Hollypark's leading reinsman, rode the race. "Mr. Barrera," said Hawley, "told me this horse would relax early and would finish strong and that's exactly what happened." Time for the distance was 2:16 flat, and Practitioner returned across the board mutuels of $21.20, $8.40 and $6.00. Radiant Boy paid $5.20 and $3.40, while Copper Mel returned $3.80 to show. Practitioner's victory was one of two wins by Hawley, and boosted his lead over Laffit Pincay in the jockey standings to 86-80. That margin figures to grow larger in the next five racing days, as Pincay will be on vacation due to suspension.

Turf highlights

WOODBINE — Sound Reason, ridden by Robin Platts, overtook favored Northernette in the stretch to win the 118th running of the $122,135 Queen's Plate. Sound Reason trailed Plus de Rien and Northernette, then rallied at the head of the stretch for a half-length victory in the 1¼ mile test for 3-year-old Canadian-breds. Giboulee, ridden by Jean Cruguet, came from off the pace to finish third and Plus de Rien faded to fourth. Sound Reason paid $5.10.

DUBLIN, Ireland — Jockey Lester Piggott and The Minstrel pulled off the double at the Curragh race track when the winner of the English Derby stormed through the stretch to win the Irish Sweeps Derby over 1½ miles. Second was Lucky Sovereign third Classic Example. The Minstrel was 11-10 favorite, Lucky Sovereign was 20-1 and Classic Example 14-1. The win was worth $121,??? to The Minstrel's owner, British soccer pools tycoon Robert Sangster.

ARLINGTON PARK — Century Type bested stablemate Testimonial Type by [illegible] lengths as she captured the $37,275 [illegible] Maid Stakes for Illinois-bred fillies. Century Type covered the six furlongs in 1:12 [illegible] to earn $26,535. She paid [illegible].

BELMONT PARK — Fleet Victress broke on top and led all the way to win the $55,550 New York Handicap and set a track record of 1:53 [illegible] for 1-1/8 miles on the Widener turf course. Ridden by Ruben Hernandez and carrying 115 pounds, the 5-year-old mare finished [illegible] lengths ahead of Lady Singer, who was a neck in front of Welch Pearl. The favored three-horse entry of Glowing Tribute-Nijana-Javamine finished out of the money. Fleet Victress paid $11.4[illegible]. The old record was 1:54 [illegible], set three weeks ago by Quick Card.

In Ninos Stakes at Alamitos

Lantys Easy Jet races to win

Lantys Easy Jet, the heavily-favored son of Easy Jet, posted his second successive triumph and third in five career races Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course when he drew away to capture the $15,000 Los Ninos Stakes for 2-year-old colts and geldings in impressive fashion.

Lantys Easy Jet had kicked off the stakes schedule for the month of June with a victory in the Jet Deck Stakes. He has now earned more than $28,000 during his brief career and he stamped himself as perhaps the leading contender for next month's $75,000-added Kindergarten Stakes with the sharp Los Ninos win.

Piloted by Kenny Hart, Lantys Easy Jet broke well in the 350-yard sprint but could not shake the swift Kingdom Key, winner of the $160,000 Bay Meadows Futurity last month. However, with about 100 yards to go, Lantys Easy Jet began to pull away and was a half length in front at the wire, racing the distance in 17.86 seconds.

The winner returned $3.20, $2.40 and $2.40 as the solid 3-5 public choice.

Kingdom Key returned $2.60 and $2.60 while Lanes Golden Eagle paid $3 to show.

He's a Pleasure defeated a talented field of six 3-year-olds in the supporting feature.

He's a Pleasure notched his first win of the year in the 350-yard allowance heat in 17.89 seconds.

Ridden by Robert Adair, He's a Pleasure returned $13.80, $5.80 and $3.40. The Candidate finished second, returning $4.20 and $2.80. Truly's Easter held on for the show and paid $3.

Harness dead-heat record set

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Richmond, a 5-2 second choice, and Committeeman, a 5-1 shot, established a harness racing world record for a dead heat Saturday night as they covered the mile distance in 1:56⅘ at Brandywine Raceway.

The new mark came in the featured $10,000 Forty-Five Pace and the time was the fastest for any track—mile, five-eighths or half mile—in North America.

Approaching the wire, Richmond appeared to have the race won, but Committeeman came on with a final burst to bring about the dead heat.

The previous dead heat record of 1:58 was set in 1974 by Just Tar and R.D.'s Beauty at Hollywood Park.

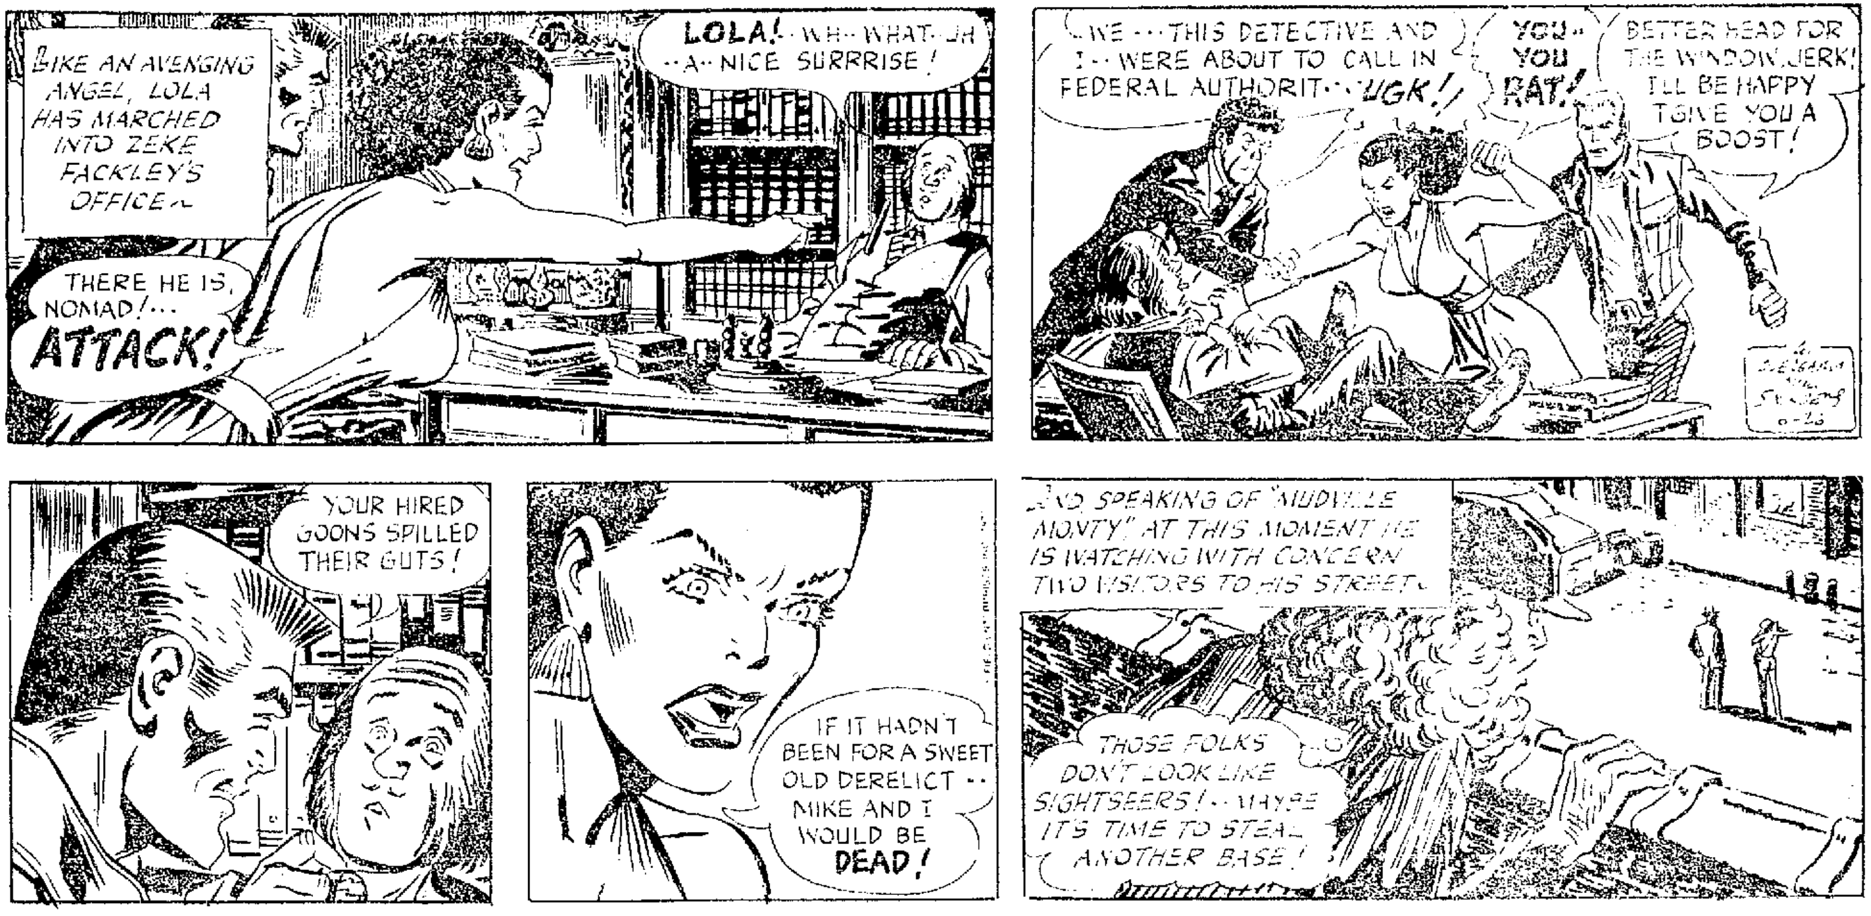
STEVE ROPER and MIKE NOMAD

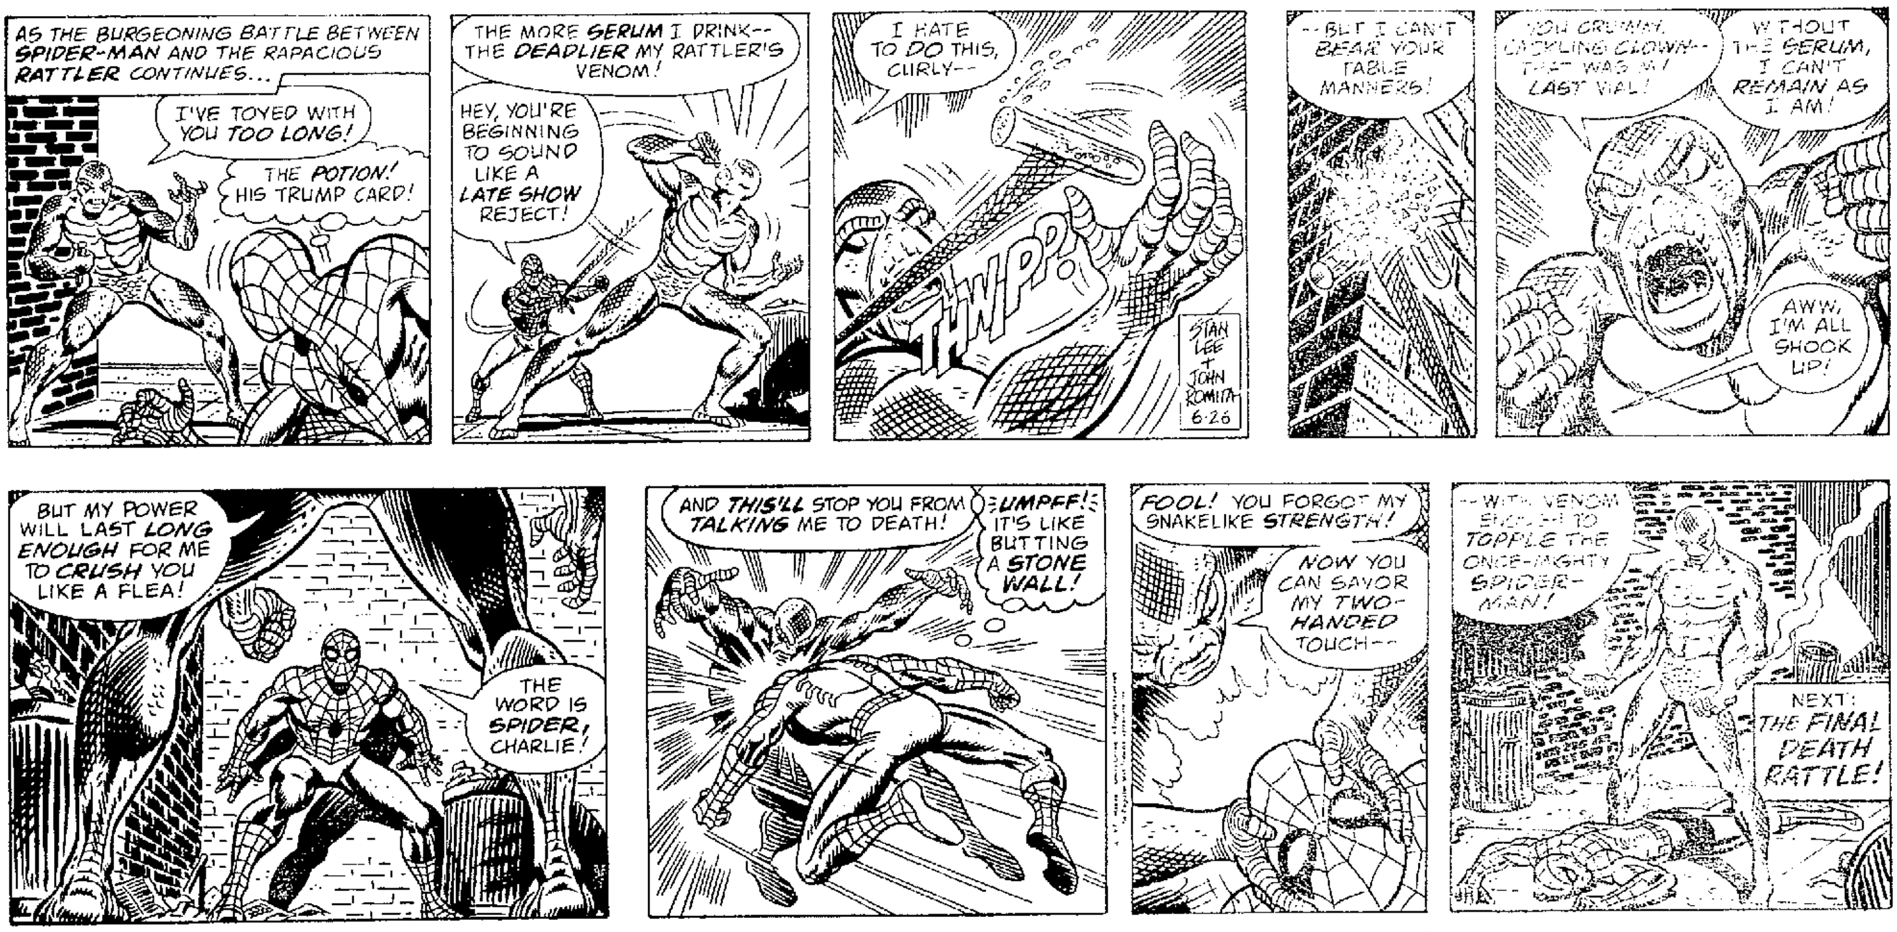
by SAUNDERS & OVERGARD



LIKE AN AVENGING ANGEL, LOLA HAS MARCHED INTO ZEKE FACKLEY'S OFFICE--
LOLA! WH--WHAT--UH --A--NICE SURRRISE!
THERE HE IS, NOMAD!... ATTACK!
WE---THIS DETECTIVE AND I--WERE ABOUT TO CALL IN FEDERAL AUTHORIT---UGK!!
YOU-- YOU RAT!
BETTER HEAD FOR THE WINDOW, JERK! I'LL BE HAPPY TO GIVE YOU A BOOST!
6-26
YOUR HIRED GOONS SPILLED THEIR GUTS!
IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR A SWEET OLD DERELICT-- MIKE AND I WOULD BE DEAD!
AND SPEAKING OF "MUDVILLE MONTY," AT THIS MOMENT HE IS WATCHING WITH CONCERN TWO VISITORS TO HIS STREET--
THOSE FOLKS DON'T LOOK LIKE SIGHTSEERS!--MAYBE IT'S TIME TO STEAL ANOTHER BASE!

the AMAZING SPIDER-MAN®

By Stan Lee and John Romita



AS THE BURGEONING BATTLE BETWEEN SPIDER-MAN AND THE RAPACIOUS RATTLER CONTINUES...
I'VE TOYED WITH YOU TOO LONG!
THE POTION! HIS TRUMP CARD!
THE MORE SERUM I DRINK-- THE DEADLIER MY RATTLER'S VENOM!
HEY, YOU'RE BEGINNING TO SOUND LIKE A LATE SHOW REJECT!
I HATE TO DO THIS, CURLY-- THWIPP!
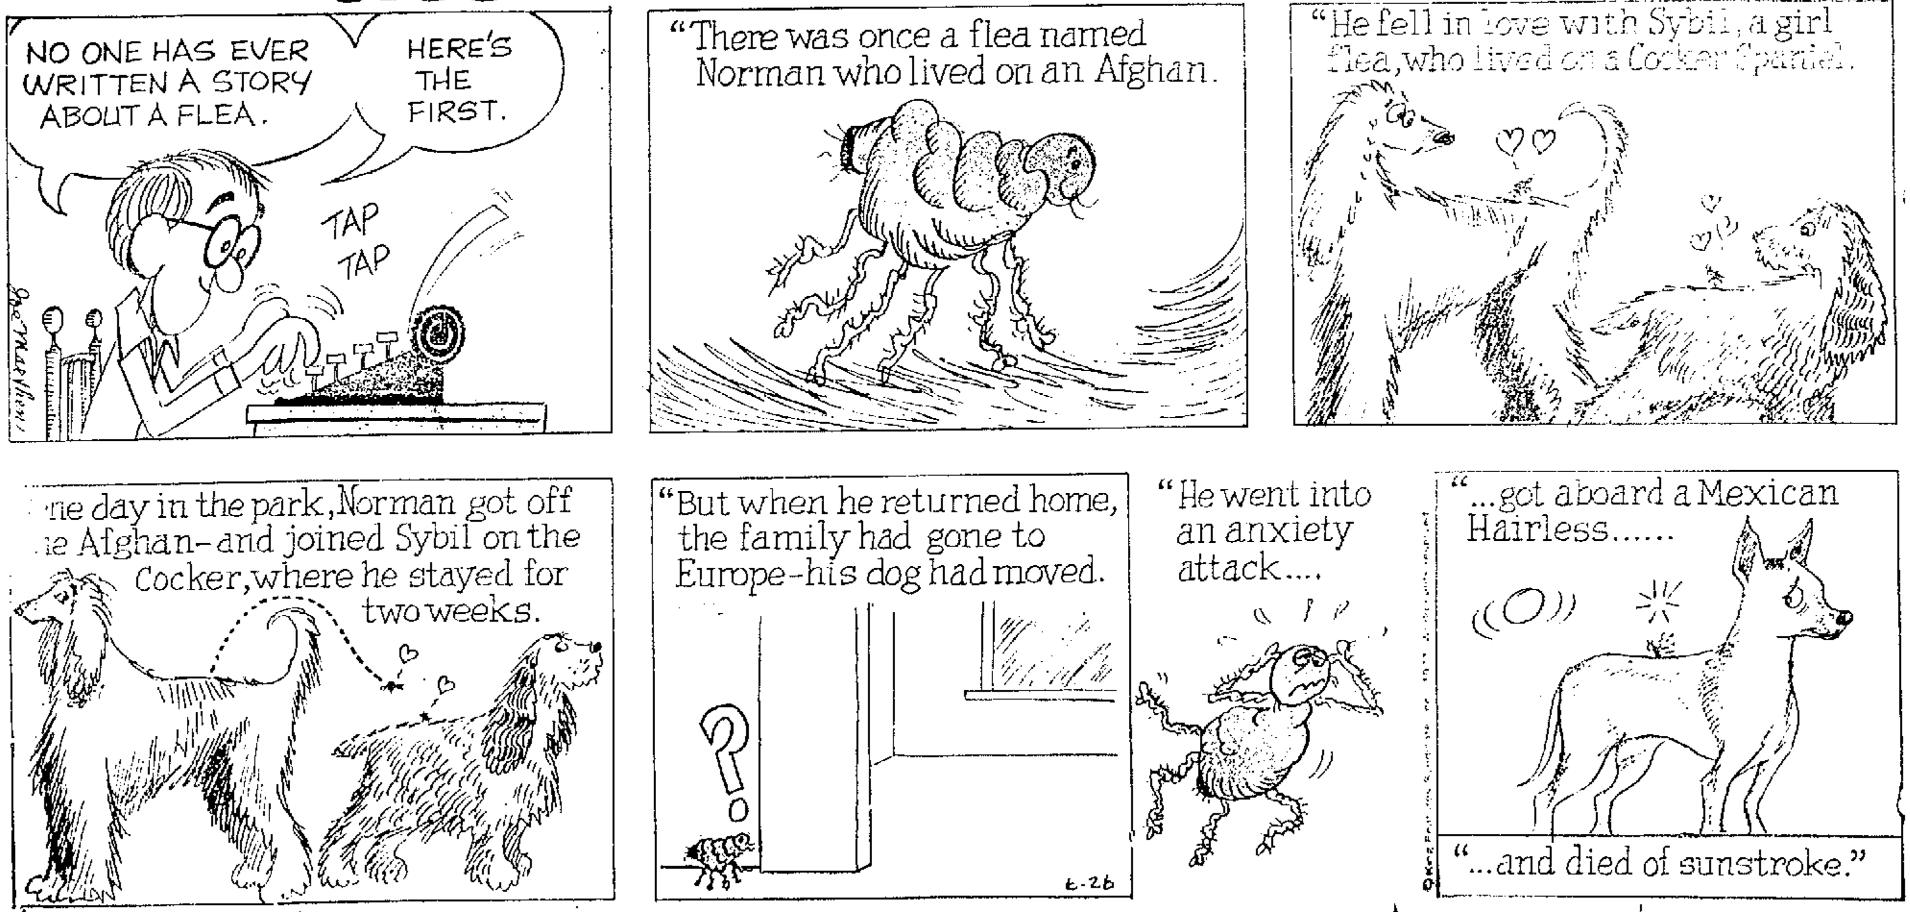
STAN LEE + JOHN ROMITA 6·26
--BUT I CAN'T BEAR YOUR TABLE MANNERS!
YOU CRUMMY, CACKLING CLOWN-- THAT WAS MY LAST VIAL!
WITHOUT THE SERUM, I CAN'T REMAIN AS I AM!
AWW, I'M ALL SHOOK UP!
BUT MY POWER WILL LAST LONG ENOUGH FOR ME TO CRUSH YOU LIKE A FLEA!
THE WORD IS SPIDER, CHARLIE!
AND THIS'LL STOP YOU FROM TALKING ME TO DEATH!
UMPFF! IT'S LIKE BUTTING A STONE WALL!
FOOL! YOU FORGOT MY SNAKELIKE STRENGTH!
NOW YOU CAN SAVOR MY TWO-HANDED TOUCH--
--WITH VENOM ENOUGH TO TOPPLE THE ONCE-MIGHTY SPIDER-MAN!
NEXT: THE FINAL DEATH RATTLE!

INSIDE WOODY ALLEN



NO ONE HAS EVER WRITTEN A STORY ABOUT A FLEA.
HERE'S THE FIRST.
TAP TAP
"There was once a flea named Norman who lived on an Afghan.
"He fell in love with Sybil, a girl flea, who lived on a Cocker Spaniel.
ne day in the park, Norman got off he Afghan-and joined Sybil on the Cocker, where he stayed for two weeks.
"But when he returned home, the family had gone to Europe-his dog had moved.
6-26
"He went into an anxiety attack....
"...got aboard a Mexican Hairless......
"...and died of sunstroke."

FIVE UP PLAYER volleyed for the lead down the backstretch, took a clear advantage into the stretch then battled MIAMI SUN to briefly lose the edge but kept to his task and came back to win pulling away. MIAMI SUN shared the lead to the turn, dropped back of the winner to the stretch, rallied from the outside under urging to get the edge leaving the furlong pole then slackened when the rider lost his whip. The rider on MIAMI SUN claimed foul against the winner for causing him to drop his whip however the stewards ruled that both jockeys were using their whips which were somewhat tangled without intent and thus the claim was not allowed. KING AL saved ground and hung.

PRACTITIONER rallied extremely wide to the stretch, challenged for the lead at the furlong pole and drew clear late under urging. RADIANT BOY made a gallant attempt in midstretch to try for the lead in the middle of the course then went lame. COPPER MEL loomed a threat along the rail into the final furlong and hung.

Cauthen wins a pair, goes over $3 million

NEW YORK (AP) — Jockey Steve Cauthen, 17, who went back to work Thursday after recovering from a broken wrist, scored two wins Saturday at Belmont Park and boosted his mounts' earnings for the year to more than $3 million.

The two winning purses—together with earnings refigured after being placed first in a disqualification earlier this year—gave Cauthen's horses $3,027,153.

He has ridden five winners since returning to work and gave him 281 for the year, still tops in the nation.

Cauthen left immediately after the Belmont program for Hollywood Park where he will ride in the Jockey's championship race today.

Tons of A-fuel 'missing' at U.S. nuclear projects

Thefts of bomb-grade uranium possible; 'sloppy books' blamed

By John Fialka
Washington Star

Regulatory Commission is preparing to make the momentous announcement, according to several sources within the agency, that over the years the government has been unable to account for several tons of bomb-grade materials used in various nuclear fuel programs.

The problem, hinted at for years, will be described for the first time in specific numbers. Those numbers, according to the sources, will show that the great majority of the losses are traceable to "chronically sloppy" accounting procedures at facilities used to fabricate fuel for Adm. Hyman Rickover's nuclear submarine fleet.

The traditional explanation for what is known in this rather exotic trade as a "Muf," or material unaccounted for, is that it is material stuck somewhere in the pipes of a facility or material that has been mistakenly discarded as waste.

Research within the NRC, however, according to the sources, has shown that the agency cannot rule out the possibility that some of the material may have been stolen. "The accounting was so damn poor that there is no way for determining what happened to it," one source explained.

Highly enriched uranium, the material used to power submarine reactors, is an extremely dense metal. A cubic foot of it weighs more than half a ton. A strategic quantity, the amount that could be made into a small atomic bomb, would fit into a container slightly larger than a teacup.

FUEL FABRICATION for the submarine reactors takes place at several sites throughout the country, but the one most familiar to NRC inspectors is probably a facility at Apollo, Pa., 30 miles northeast of Pittsburgh, where Mufs have gone on for years, where millions of dollars worth of bomb-grade metal has disappeared and where repeated violations of government regulations have produced little more than an occasional slap on the wrist for the plant's operators.

The full story of what has happened at Apollo is still shrouded in government secrecy. According to two NRC sources, the losses at Apollo and other submarine fuel facilities are so embarrassing that Adm. Rickover has been looking for ways to prevent the release of Muf numbers.

Asked for a comment, a Rickover spokesman said that this is not true. The responsibility to safeguard nuclear fuels in the fabrication stage has never been the responsibility of the admiral," he added, pointing out that the jurisdiction traditionally has fallen to inspectors of the former Atomic Energy Commission and its regulatory successor, the NRC.

In recent weeks several documents have been released quietly by the NRC which begin to unravel the mysteries of Apollo.

In late 1956 a company called NMEC was formed by three former AEC scientists led by Dr. Zalman M. Shapiro. They purchased an old steel fabrication plant at Apollo and began to solicit government contracts to process various nuclear materials.

AEC OFFICIALS first began to worry about losses in the plant during the early '60s, when NMEC was processing a large quantity of highly enriched uranium for use in a nuclear rocket called Nerva, a project later scrapped by the AEC.

Since there was no formal regulatory apparatus at that time, the government officials wondered how to account for the mounting losses which had grown to the point that in 1964, when the Chinese detonated a nuclear device, some intelligence officials wondered whether the material had been stolen from Apollo.

Later, when U2 flights discovered uranium enrichment sites in China, their attention eased somewhat, but a year after that, the problem resurfaced when AEC inspectors, according to a NMEC case history released by the NRC, calculated that the loss of 206 pounds of the material — roughly enough to make 20 atomic bombs — could not be accounted for through any known "loss mechanism" at the plant.

One day after the survey at the plant was completed, according to this document, NMEC officials hired one of the principal AEC inspectors. The incident was reported to the Department of Justice as a possible conflict of interest, but Justice determined that "the matter did not warrant prosecutive action."

A BROAD SECRET investigation was mounted. Over 400 past and present NMEC employes were interviewed and a considerable portion of a waste burial ground at the plant was dug up in an effort which located some of the missing material. In the end, though, NMEC officials had to pay the government $929,000, the value of uranium which could not be accounted for, according to the case history.

Shapiro, then NMEC's president, was described by one source as a man who "operated on the come," taking material from one batch and using it to account for losses in a prior batch until the losses became too big to cover up any more.

Reached for comment by the Washington Star, Shapiro termed the description "utterly ridiculous and totally untrue." Losses, he said, are inherent in the fuel fabrication business because of the highly complex process which uses uranium in solid, gaseous and liquid chemical forms and which results in a large amount of waste material at each step.

He gave an analogy: "If you're cooking a small thing in a large pot, then you have material that sticks to the pot."

Shapiro, who now works for Westinghouse, also explained the hiring of the AEC inspector. "We were looking high and low for good people. Obviously some of those people worked for the AEC."

SHAPIRO SOLD the Apollo plant in 1967 to the Atlantic Richfield Co., and Arco sold the plant to another nuclear-related company, Babcock & Wilcox, in 1971. Throughout the various periods of ownership, according to the case history, the plant's tradition of noncompliance to AEC accounting procedures continued.

In April 1973, for example, the plant was cited for 14 different items of noncompliance in one inspection. In November of the same year a worried General Accounting Office team found 18 different security weaknesses at the plant, including guards that did not control properly and three doors that were not locked.

The following year Babcok & Wilcox was fined $12,170 for the security violations. In 1976 the company was fined another $19,000 for inadequate accounting.

An NRC spokesman noted that inspections at the plant have escalateed dramatically as the nation has become more aware of the possibility of a nuclear theft. There were 10 inspections in 1972 at the plant. So far this year, he said, there already have been 36 inspections.

Regulations have proliferated during the same period. Despite the increased pressures from the government to safeguard the plant, the NRC spokesman described Babcock & Wilcox as a "poor performer."

Asked to comment, a B&W spokesman in the company's New York headquarters said that "basically our accountability has been in accordance with regulations." The fines, he explained, "were related to technical details. The industry was not given time to implement the new requirement."

The mysteries that still surround the Apollo facility appear to go beyond the powers of the NRC, which was formed to take over the AEC's regulatory duties in 1975. NRC researchers discovered this last year when they were attempting to piece together a definitive account of events at the plant during the early 1960s.

VITAL PIECES of the story, they discovered, were still classified although they were 10 years old. They were in the locked files of the Energy Research and Development Administration, the nonregulatory half of the old AEC, and "other government agencies."

Despite the fact that the NRC investigators had the proper security clearances, they were "given the royal runaround," according to one source. There were secrets so secret that even the compilers of secrets were forbidden them.

The situation proved so exasperating that one of the NRC investigators, James H. Conrad, began a series of protests within the NRC. How could the NRC staff protect facilities against losses when some of the past information about losses was concealed from the staff, he argued.

A group of safeguards experts was assembled by the NRC to look into the matter. It was called "Task Force on Allegations by James H. Conrad."

'Go slow' on B1, Byrd tells Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday the United States ought to "go very slow" in developing the B1 bomber because expanding production would mean foregoing "many unmet public needs."

Byrd said he conveyed his sentiments to President Carter in a letter Friday. Carter is expected to announce his decision on whether to expand or scrap the B1 program by Thursday.

Advocates of the bomber says it can evade detection devices by flying at extremely low altitudes and that the plane is needed to replace the aging B52 fleet.

"BY GOING all out on the B1, we would drastically reduce our ability to develop and fund other weapons systems. Additionally, we would add to our budget deficit and reduce the potential for meaningful tax reduction," Byrd told reporters.

"I'm not opposed to keeping the way open for refinement in the technology in this field."

The senator said he supports funding the purchase of five of the aircraft as has been provided for in the budget now being considered in Congress.

He discounted the value of the B1 as a bargaining chip with the Soviet Union in talks on the reduction of strategic weapons.

"I don't think the Soviets fear it very much," he said. "The cruise missile is their great fear."

"I'm a strong supporter of the cruise missile," he added.

Byrd said the Russians are known to be working on a "look down" radar system that would make the B1 obsolete because of its ability to detect low-flying aircraft.

"I think we ought to go very slow and not commit ourselves to a drastic commitment of public funds until we know what the Soviet capability . . . may be."

The cruise missile is a low-flying, targeted weapon.

The senator said he has no indication of what Carter's decision will be, saying, "I've heard he's moving both ways."

DURING last fall's presidential campaign, Carter was thought to be leaning toward abandoning the B1 development program. Gerald Ford favored it when he was in the White House.

Byrd said the B1 issue is "a question of the best allocation of our limited resources. At a cost of over $100 million per plane, we would be investing vast amounts of public funds in a gamble that the B1 would be effective and invulnerable during its life cycle of 20 to 30 years."

The entire program would cost about $100 billion. "That's $100 per minute for every minute since Jesus Christ was born," he said.

Long Beach realizes its 'money tree' is dying

Tideland oil funds run out in a decade

By James M. Leavy
Urban Affairs Writer

Long Beach, an oil-rich old dowager made giddy in the early part of this decade with what appeared to be an unlimited source of money, has had some sobering jolts of late and is now thinking of "biting the bullet" or "tightening her belt" or doing whatever one does when the money is running out.

In recent years the realization has grown on city officials that tideland oil funds — that dwindling source of revenues they spent with such abandon on the shoreline — will run out in a decade.

And when they take a look around to see what will replace the oil money they find only more trouble.

Sales tax revenues are down, and residents won't sit still for an increase in property taxes. These are the two main sources of money used to run the city.

At the present time there is no connection between money that comes from tideland oil — and consequently must be spent on the shoreline — and the money from taxes, which pays for police, fire, public works recreation and other city services.

But the specter of a depleted tideland reserve lurks behind many of the budget considerations these days and generates an air of desperation among financial planners looking into the next decade.

It is against this backdrop that the 1977-78 budget was approved last week by the City Council. It totals more than a half-billion dollars. Tax supported revenues and expenditures — the part that effects the services residents receive and what they pay for them — amounts to $114 million.

That's 5.7 per cent higher than last year but less than it should be, given the increasing demand for services and the effects of a 6.5 per

(Turn to Page B-4, Col. 1)

New budget tries to end 'nonplanning'

What would have happened if the two following items had appeared in the 1966-67 Long Beach city budget?

—Proposed expenditure — $80 million.

Description — Purchase the Queen Mary.

Justification — Attract tourists and provide a maritime museum.

—Proposed expenditure — $50 million.

Description — Build a convention center complex.

Justification — Attract major conventions to the city

That isn't the way the money for those two major projects was appropriated. It occurred in increments and the enormity of the decisions being made was not apparent until the money was committed.

There are changes in the 1977-78 budget procedure which appear to be aimed at avoiding this type of "nonplanning." And, according to city officials, the changes will provide more accountability, more control, and more opportunity for long-range planning and citizen participation. The 300-page document suggests some new approaches and new attitudes on the part of city government.

For the first time the budget included all the money which passes through the hands of city officials. It came to more than a half-billion dollars. In previous years the total — in the neighborhood of $100 million — included only tax-supported revenues and expenditures, those involved in the day-to-day operation of police, fire, public works, recreation and other departments.

The new budget includes in its total $125.7 million in tideland oil revenues and $132.7 million in revenues and expenditures for the Port of Long Beach. In past years these funds were considered separately.

Lads, lassies throw guid Highland fling in auld Long Beach

Southland Scots — and those who wished they were — joined the sons and daughters of Highland chieftains Saturday at Long Beach Veterans Stadium for the 45th annual Highland Gathering and Games of the Scottish clans.

And wasn't it a grand time?

An estimated 35,000 lads and lassies came to Long Beach from throughout California, Arizona and even Canada to celebrate their thousand-year-old lore.

Sponsors of the day-long fete, the United Scottish Societies, Inc., of Southern California, said they gathered in Long Beach this year — and plan to from now on — "because, frankly, mon, we've outgrown the facilities we've used in Santa Monica," according to Art Roberts, a Scottish Societies director.

"Long Beach has given us the space, you understand, and the hospitality we need for our gathering," he said.

Aye, and a grand time they had.

Hugh Hunter, 4, of Anaheim, upper left, marveled at the spectacle of his heritage while watching a pipe and drum band bleed the eerie half-tones of the centuries-old bagpipe music in competition.

Brian Olfield, lower left, tries to clear the 15-foot mark in the weight throw, while, below, Rene Cusson, who journeyed to the Long Beach games from Victoria, B.C., seems lost in memories of heather and hearth as he competes in the individual bagpipe event.

At lower right, a kilt-clad contestant sent spectators scattering as he tossed the caber, a telephone pole-like projectile, for a near-record. The event is a favorite in Scottish games.

Meanwhile, at right, a very intent lass concentrates on winning the Highland dancing competition, which drew hundreds of participants.

In all, spectators and participants agreed it was a day well spent, a day they say they'll repeat next year in Long Beach.

New Irvine owners set for takeover

The purchasers of the Irvine Co. plan to meet Monday with the company's officers to make arrangements for the July 26 formal takeover of Orange County's largest land parcel.

A. Alfred Taubman, the Detroit developer who heads the consortium that bought the company for $337 million, will be the chief spokesman at a series of meetings with company personnel.

Taubman apparently intends to tell the Irvine Co. staff that no drastic changes are planned, and that Raymond Watson will be retained as president and chief operating officer of the company.

The Taubman group won a spirited bidding for the company last month, after Mobil Oil Co. withdrew from a bidding war.

The Irvine Co. owns approximately 80,000 acres of land in central Orange County, 15,500 acres of farmland in the Imperial Valley and an 80,000-acre cattle ranch in Montana.

On May 24, directors of the James Irvine Foundation approved the purchase of its 54.4 per cent interest in the Irvine Co. The foundation and 14 Irvine family members who owned stock signed their shares over to the buyers.

THE NEW owners include Joan Irvine Smith, granddaughter of Irvine ranch developer James Irvine.

Taubman plans to stress that the consortium aims to expand agricultural activities in Orange County and that it will follow the company's master plan for commercial and residential development.

Besides Taubman and Mrs. Smith, the consortium includes Charles Allen, a New York investment broker; Milton Petrie, head of a chain of department stores in the East; Henry Ford II, the Detroit auto maker; Max Fisher, a member of a Detroit investment and development firm; Henry Marguleas, an Imperial Valley agribusiness tycoon, L. Donald Bren, a Newport Beach builder, and Mrs. Smith's cousin, Linda Irvine Gaede and her husband, Keith, of Newport Beach.

Mrs. Smith, who owned 22.5 per cent of the company stock, had challenged plans to sell the company to Mobil, which initially bid $200 million for the company.

The nonprofit Irvine Foundation was forced to sell its interest in the profit-making company because of provisions of the 1969 federal Tax Reform Act.

People Talk

E.C. Anderson

THE JUNE 9 "People Talk" column recounted the story of Betty Seguin of Signal Hill, whose sense of economy was outraged recently when three identical copies of Congressman Mark Hannaford's newsletter popped up in her mail box on the same day.

Mrs. Seguin, of course, was the victim of a computer that had run amok. An equal victim was our own Congressman Hannaford, a gentleman the chair now recognizes for purposes of giving an explanation. He says:

"Indeed, computers are mysterious creatures which seem to operate on a logic system all their own. Although the computer operators who maintain my 'Washington Update' mailing list attempt to 'combine' listings which are nearly identical, their efforts are not always successful.

"At the end of each of my 'Updates,' I instruct readers who receive multiple copies of the publications to drop me a line indicating this fact. The duplications are eliminated as soon as I am notified.

"I have written to Betty Seguin of Signal Hill informing her that from this day forward she will receive only one issue of the 'Washington Update' — that is, IF my computer is willing to cooperate.

"In the meantime, all I can say to her and any others who might find themselves in similar situations is: I'm sorry, I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

I'd go one step further. Any computer that doesn't shape up should be cited for contempt of a congressman.

READER John Charles Thomas Jr., of Downey, recently registered his pet peeve as waitresses who respond "Is that all?" when he confines his order to a cup of coffee. As you might expect, "People Talk" heard from a waitress in short order.

Meet Doris Ramage, a waitress at Norm's on Long Beach Boulevard, who notes:

"I sincerely enjoy being around people and serving them. I do not mind serving just coffee, and if I should ask 'Anything else?' it is just suggestive selling, not an invitation to leave.

"My pet peeve is not with coffee drinkers or even people who do not tip. It is simply the inconsiderate customers who do not realize — when they are just sitting there after they finish eating — that they are depriving you of further tips and inconveniencing others who also wish to eat.

"I have served customers who read, write letters or just sit and talk for hours, even after I remove the dishes. At the busiest times, too.

"I think such people should consider their tips as rent, instead of favors for the waitress."

Well said, Doris Ramage. I'm on your side.

A number of years back (during a newspaper strike) I was employed as a bus boy in a well known Hollywood restaurant. I was happy to have the job but not so happy with some of the slob customers I had to endure. One in particular sticks in my memory — and my craw.

I was carting a big load of dishes to the kitchen. Riding atop the crockery pile, precariously so, was a nearly full tureen of chicken broth. My route led me past a booth wherein sat a male diner with the countenance of a Charles Laughton and the manners of a piranha. The head waiter had twice repaired to the booth to shush the gentleman, a specimen of distaste whose patronage would better have been spent at a swine trough.

It was obvious that the head waiter's mild chastisements had triggered only another expression of indecency from the gentleman, for as I wheeled by he flung his well-chewed cigar butt into the tureen of chicken soup, causing a few light noodles and a considerable amount of greasy liquid to rain upon my white shirt, laundered only the night before for my first day on the job as bus boy.

I swung at one of his chins and missed, connecting only with an on-the-spot firing by the manager, who had hastened to the scene to stop my second attempted haymaker in midflight.

The manager then ushered me to the cash register, where I received my small pittance and an admonition that the customer, no matter how gross and insulting, was always right.

Not having another place of employment to go, I invested the time on my hands in sentinel duty three doors down from the restaurant's entrance. There I waited out my churlish customer, accosting him as he hove into view.

We continued the discussion in an alleyway, where two good rights and a fast left disabused him of the idea that the customer is always right. It was a pleasure.

Muzzling police news

Long Beach police have long had a policy of keeping the public fully informed about crime in the city and about police operations.

That information is important. Most of us are concerned about personal safety these days. Can we walk the streets without being mugged? Will our homes or businesses be hit by burglars?

One of the major ways we have of keeping track of how the battle against crime goes is through reports in newspapers and on radio and television. To help provide the necessary information, the Long Beach police have traditionally made their records freely available to the news media.

Police confidence in the news media has not been abused. Certainly these newspapers have cooperated with the police. The I. P-T Secret Witness program has helped them solve crimes and catch criminals. The police have not complained that any investigation, or any prosecution, has been hampered by information published in these newspapers.

NOW CARL CALKINS, the acting police chief, has changed the policy of cooperation in making news of his department public.

In a directive issued May 20, the acting chief said news media representatives "will not have access to any police reports." Later the chief issued a clarification. He said reporters could see some police reports — but not those dealing with "homicides, suicides, dead bodies or discharge of firearms by police officers." He also barred press access to "arrest reports, stolen/recovered vehicle reports and follow-up reports."

The press will be shown copies of some reports — at the discretion of the police. Even these copies will be run through a shredder 48 hours later. If news of a crime was suppressed, the evidence of the suppression would be destroyed. Six months or a year later, if the news came out, the chief could claim that the information was offered to the press earlier.

The acting chief has also decreed that any police officer who provides "departmental information" to a reporter must write a memorandum to his commanding officer the same day. Regardless of Calkins' motive, this certainly will serve to cut down on information individual officers choose to give reporters.

CALKINS' RULES are far more restrictive than those in effect at any other California police department known to us.

Ironically, Calkins acted under a nine-year-old law designed, as the state attorney general put it, "to further the goal of maximum disclosure in the conduct of government operations."

The law contains provisions allowing police reports to be kept secret if the public interest calls for secrecy. But Calkins has in effect reversed the procedure intended by state law. Instead of making records available to the press except where there is a strong reason to keep them confidential, Calkins has issued orders that emphasize a desire to keep the public in the dark.

We do not know of any sinister motive Calkins had in imposing the new rules. But in light of the history of press and police cooperation here, the public and the higher powers in city government have a right to become suspicious regarding the action.

EVEN THOUGH many of us dislike reading crime news, it is important to our well-being to know what is going on. When police can decide capriciously to deny public access to news of homicides (that includes all murders), dead bodies, discharge of firearms by police officers, arrest reports, stolen/recovered vehicle reports and follow-up reports, serious questions regarding your right to know about public safety are raised.

These newspapers would like to continue to cooperate with a fine police department to see that the public knows the good things it does. We think the public has a right to expect that the police will not keep secret their errors or their problems. We think the public has a right to expect that the police will not decide to shield certain individuals or certain crimes from public scrutiny.

The acting chief said in one of his orders that he respects the public's "right to know" and seeks to "establish a cooperative climate in which the media may obtain information in a manner which does not hamper police operations." If he believes his own words, he will rescind his restrictive orders and return to the policy of openness and candor that has been a Long Beach police tradition.

Sierra Club announces campaign to 'fix blame' for economic ills

SACRAMENTO — California's conservationists have served notice they are launching an offensive of their own in the battle to attach blame for the economic ills besetting the state.

The current Sierra Club publication, "Perspective," complains that, "In recent months, Californians have been exposed to a barrage of propaganda designed to level the public's commitment to protection of the environment."

The barrage, the publication asserts, "has been coordinated and financed by major developmental interests hoping to take advantage of public concern about the drought, fuel shortages and high unemployment."

EVEN THOUGH the public has not been taken in, "Perspective" states, "many elected officials are hastening to respond to its (the propaganda campaign's) special interest pressures."

And so, says the Sierra Club and a number of other environmental protection groups, to counter those pressures, "The environmental voice needs to be heard more clearly."

From the positions stated in "Perspective," that voice will articulate the "lower your expectations," "era of limits" and "Spaceship Earth" urgings of Gov. Brown.

The problems of water and energy shortages and unemployment can be overcome by emphasizing a "conservation economy" which would "mean more employment, less inflation and less dependence on imported energy," claim the conservationists.

But, they say, since such an emphasis "will also mean lowered profits for certain powerful segments of society, the public can expect the attacks on environmental standards to continue or increase."

The conservationists' counterattack, apparently, will come on two fronts.

First, they will argue that there are "common sense measures for dealing with ... shortages" of water and energy and for dealing with air, water and land pollution.

Second, they will argue that there has developed a curious and unhealthy coalition of labor and management which is willing to ignore long-term benefits for immediate and short-term illusionary remedies.

Taking the latter point first, the conservationists are going to complain that it is inconsistent for organized labor to complain about a loss of jobs threatened by expansion of Redwood National Park after not complaining about poor timber management which, "Perspective" contends, has left 43 per cent of commercial timber land in Humboldt and Del Norte counties unproductive, and after remaining silent while firms exported unmilled logs directly to Japan, thus taking jobs away from California mill workers.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

"Have loggers who raise a storm of protest over the relatively small number of jobs affected by park expansion been similarly critical when management decisions on mechanizations, exports or reforestations displace or wipe out even greater numbers of jobs?" the publication asks.

Had labor complained when Bay Area chemical plants began reducing their maintenance efforts, thus increasing each plant's contribution to air pollution (and eliminating jobs), "Perspective" suggests, then the overall pollution level would not have been so high that the proposed construction of a Dow petrochemical facility posed such a severe threat to the area's air quality.

Some Sierra Club officials invited newsmen to investigate whether labor officials had agreed to let Dow use non-union employes at the proposed facility, in exchange for payment of an amount equal to the dues which would have been collected from union employes.

On the first front, the conservationists contend, there are available "strategies (which) emphasize conservation, rehabilitation, and labor-intensive technologies" which "will meet our economic needs better than the high-technology, supply-oriented and capital-intensive approach advocated by the developmental interests."

As an example, "Perspective" states, water conservation, storage and management techniques recommended by the Sierra Club "would enable California to make up all of the dramatic 10 million acre-feet deficit experienced (because of the drought) in 1977" at a cost of $65 per acre-foot.

BY CONTRAST, it argues, it would take 30 conventional storage projects the size of the proposed Auburn Dam to accomplish the same result, at a cost of $3 billion a year, or $325 per acre-foot.

Large-scale programs aimed at the installation of water-saving devices and energy-saving insulation in homes would mean thousands of jobs and a dramatic reduction in the usage of these resources, the conservationists argue.

Whether they are correct or not, only time will tell, but they seem determined to give time the opportunity. Californians are going to be hearing some interesting arguments in the months ahead, and the focus of the arguments from both sides, it appears, is going to be something very dear to the hearts of all of us — our wallets.

What others are saying

Energy: Rhetoric versus reality

By Milton Friedman
(Excerpted from Newsweek)

I do not know whether the Guinness Book of World Records recognizes a record for the divergence of rhetoric from reality. If not, I suggest that it do so, and I nominate as a candidate the debate over energy policy now raging in the U.S. Herewith some supporting evidence.

1. Pride of place must go to President Carter's use of William James' phrase "the moral equivalent of war" to describe the approach needed.

We do have a real energy crisis — no doubt about that. And, of course, every aspect of life has a moral dimension. But, for the ordinary U.S. citizen, there is simply no special moral issue involved in energy ... The problem is a strictly technical economic problem of adjusting consumption and domestic production to a drastic change in the world price of oil engineered by the OPEC cartel.

If there is any special moral issue, it is the failure of Congress and the federal bureaucracy to acknowledge the major role they have played, through ceilings on price, encouragement of OPEC and heavy-handed administration, in greatly exacerbating the crisis.

2. "The nation's most careless squanderers of energy" — a phrase used in one media report on an affluent suburb.

Are the residents of the suburb (and the reporters writing the story) also "squanderers of food, housing, clothing"? Is it either an actual or desirable policy that everyone should consume all items at some minimum sustainable level? ... What has happened to pride in our success in improving the living standards of our people? Today's lower-middle classes live at levels that would have been affluent "squandering" a century ago; and today's "squanderers" will set the pace for the less advantaged tomorrow — if ill-considered government meddling does not kill the goose that lays those golden eggs.

3. Gasoline prices have risen drastically and it is unconscionable to let them rise further.

Corrected for inflation, the price of gasoline in 1976 was 2 percent lower than in 1956! Gas prices did slightly more than double over the two decades, but prices in general rose even faster.

A major source of our energy problem is that government policies have been falsifying the true situation to consumers. As a nation, we are paying more for gasoline than two decades ago, but we are doing so through taxes that are used to subsidize the import of foreign oil, in order to hold down the price at the gasoline pump.

4. In a discussion of President Carter's proposals: "The biggest burden will probably fall on industry. Factories and utilities will be taxed heavily unless they shift to coal."

How do you "burden" industry or "tax" a factory? ... Only people can bear a "burden" or pay a tax. An industry, a factory or a utility can do neither ... The burden of the tax is borne either by the stockholders, or the employ es, or the customers — and, in the long run, for a tax on a specific product, primarily by the customers.

We need more investment in the domestic production of energy. Taxing away the fruit of past investment is hardly a sensible way to encourage more investment. It is simply stupid of us to adopt the general policy of taxing away "windfall" profits reaped by farsighted individuals who invested in advance in order to be able to profit from high prices when a "shortage" occurs — whether because of a cartel or a drought or whatnot. That is a sure way to destroy private provision for emergencies and to transform our economy into a centralized corporate state.

5. A congressman about the President's program: "OK, as long as everybody is hurt equally."

What a sadistic philosophy. That is a prescription for universal misery. I thought true American philosophy was. "OK, as long as everyone has an equal opportunity to improve his lot."

6. The House energy committee's 40 members "were carefully chosen ... with a slight tilt toward consumer interests and against racial changes, such as the total elimination of price controls on gas and oil."

The truly radical element of present energy policy is the existence of price controls. The controls on natural gas date back only to 1954, on oil, to 1971. They are not only radical, but a major source of out problem.

7. "Gas-guzzling" cars.

A combination of demagoguery, confusion about morals and bad economics. One man's gas guzzler is another man's necessity. If each of us has to pay the full cost of energy — which is what would occur if the market were allowed free rein — we would each have to choose how to meet the cost. One man would decide to do so by driving a large car fewer miles; another by buying a small car; a third, by conserving on other items of consumption, thereby releasing them for persons who had less urgent need for the gasoline.

Insofar as the problem is one of relieving persons in acute distress, we should do that by giving them general purchasing power, through a negative income tax replacing our present rag bag of welfare programs, not by trying to do something about gasoline separately, food separately, and so on ad nauseam.

Better late than never for Callaway vindication

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of Harper's magazine, contributing editor Jim Hougan has done something almost unknown in the annals of Washington journalism: He has committed a kindness. In the matter of Howard "Bo" Callaway, Hougan has undertaken to right a wrong. Here on the banks of the Potomac, it very seldom happens.

Callaway, if you recall, is the wealthy and affable Georgian, the scion of a public-spirited family, who got into politics as a member of the House in 1964. In 1966 he was robbed of the governorship of Georgia. In May of 1973 he returned to public life as Secretary of the Army. He resigned that post in July of 1975 in order to become manager of Gerald Ford's presidential campaign.

And in March, 1976, the victim of a truly vicious smear campaign, Callaway resigned from the Ford organization. Shortly thereafter, he dropped out of sight. His reputation had been effectively destroyed, his political career put to an end.

A few members of the Washington press corps, knowing Bo Callaway as a man of integrity, defended him from the beginning of the ordeal he experienced. In the hurly-burly of the presidential primaries, our voices went unheard.

Harper's magazine ordinarily is regarded as a mildly liberal outfit, identified with causes that McGovern Democrats hold dear. It is an act of singular grace on the editors' part to resurrect a conservative Republican through Hougan's benedictory piece.

The charge brought against Callaway — if so flimsy a concoction of innuendoes may be dignified by calling it a charge — was that he had used his position as secretary of the army for private gain. The gist of it was that Callaway had put pressure on a couple of cronies in the Department of Agriculture to get special favors for his family-owned ski resort at Crested Butte, Colo.

If Callaway actually had done any such thing, it would have been a palpable violation of criminal law. As Hougan's long and definitive article makes clear, Callaway was wholly innocent. The worst that could be shown was that as secretary of the army, he had devoted a small fraction of his time to personal business interests — a practice universally accepted at the highest levels of both the executive and legislative branches.

Callaway was destroyed, in the event, by a nasty little lynch mob of Democratic senators, led by Floyd Haskell of Colorado, who summoned his subcommittee on the environment and land resources for the kangaroo trial of Bo Callaway.

James J. Kilpatrick

The proceedings were pure travesty. Not one witness could be found to sustain a single substantive allegation. Under oath, 13 persons were asked if Callaway had pressured them in any way on Crested Butte. One by one, they gave their sworn answers: "No, absolutely not, none whatsoever. . ." So the Democratic majority of the committee of course convicted Callaway anyhow. Not of actual wrongdoing, mind you, but of conduct "at least translatable into the appearance of improper pressure."

Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson of Washington, chairman of the parent committee, could have stopped Haskell's irresponsible performance by lifting his hand. Jackson would not lift it. Sen. Frank Church of Idaho could have prevented the destruction of Callaway's reputation by refusing to give Haskell his proxy; Church gave Haskell his proxy. The subcommittee vote was 5-4 to issue the final sleazy report.

Hougan tells a small, revealing story. Some months later, Callaway happened to be in the city room of the Washington Post. He told his tale to Ben Bradlee, executive editor. Bradlee sighed. "C'est vrai," he said, "mais ce n'est pas une histoire." True, but no story.

By that time, Bradlee was right; I cannot fault his news judgment. But Hougan and Harper merit special thanks for reviving the story anyhow. Better their vindication than none at all.

Letters to the editor

Lakewood Class of '77

Perhaps the real dangers of growing older are the failure to distinguish between opinion and fact and the failure to adjust to new situations. A society defined as "the establishment" is permanent and unchanging which lends itself to stagnation. A dynamic society is one that is vibrant, changing and always in a state of evolution.

I attended the 1977 Commencement at Lakewood High School and I, too, was surprised to find a group of graduates celebrating their own graduation. What had once been a solemn rite of passage has naturally evolved into a joyous celebration. Graduates marched onto the field; many were talking and laughing with one another, others were waving to members of the audience. One of the more humorous moments of the evening came after speeches when three of the graduates rated speeches on the scale of one to ten. But the real celebration began when the graduates received their diplomas. There were cheers from the audience and from the graduates themselves; graduates clasped hands and embraced each other; some even performed cartwheels. And when the last name was called, the traditional tossing of caps took place.

I graduated from Lakewood High School 11 years ago, and I am sure G. Lyon (letter 6/22) would have been more comfortable in 1966. When the Class of '66 marched into the graduation arena, we were magnificently in step, in straight little lines, just the way good robots should. We were very well behaved; only a few undisciplined and disrespectful whispers ruined the otherwise solemn and reverant occasion. After all, how could we openly defy authority? All my classmates were well aware the future of the universe, as we knew it then, depended upon us. Besides, the future of the Lakewood High School faculty was riding on our choreographical skills. Really! Who are the commencement exercises for, the graduates, or the spectators? 1966 was for the spectators and 1977 was for the graduates.

Certainly things have changed in 11 years, such as the graduates behavior, but many things remained the same; the Lakewood campus and wholesomeness of Principal Harold I. Judson. I feel sorry for those persons in attendance who were unable for one evening to break down their rigid barriers and guidelines of the sought-after Broadway reproduction, to enjoy the celebration. Surely those person who identify with "the establishment" and are told what car to buy, how to dress and how to smell by Madison Avenue would have a very difficult time appreciating or understanding the Class of '77.

One speaker, Dr. James M. Crawford, of the Long Beach Unified School District Board of Education, pointed out that the graduates of 1977 were the first of the third century of the United States of America. It should be apparent to all that King George III of England called the first generation of Americans (Adams, Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Washington and others) unduly disprespectful, crude and completely undisciplined, just as G. Lyon called the audience and Lakewood graduates. George lost his colonies. Parents may lose their children unless they take time to listen Bob Dylan, "The times they are a changin'."

A clarification

In my letter published June 15, I referred to local newpapers exposing the "big garbage ripoff" of taxpayers. Your paper inadvertantly added the word "Lakewood" taxpayers, which gave cause to be answered by a Jacqueline Rynerson, who charged I made false impressions.

I hope this letter clarifies that my statement was in general and my opening statement did not directly refer to Lakewood. The following paragraphs of my letter cannot be questioned as it was a direct quote by Mayor Pro Tem Jo Bennitt, as recorded in the adopted minutes of the May 10, 1977, council meeting.

If I were to give a personal opinion, I would certainly find fault with the city pocketing $45,000 a year in profits while passing the trash-rate increase onto the homeowner. This is a money-making operation — billing (by the city).

I may be the only one of this opinion, but the city government is here to serve the citizens of Lakewood and its duty is to provide the residents and businesses of Lakewood the best service at the lowest possible cost, and not be looking for ways to shaft the taxpayers in order to enhance the general fund.

LEANNA GEORGE
Lakewood

The Independent, Press-Telegram circulation area includes many cities. When letter writers refer to "the City Council" or "local" taxpayers, without identifying the city, we can only assume they mean the city in which they live, which we carry below their name at the end of their letter – The Editor

Gay rights

In a highly charged, emotional campaign, Anita Bryant and her supporters have not only succeded in denying civil rights to gays, but in effect have succeeded in partially subverting everyone's right to freedom of choice by forcing their limited religious perspective on the rest of the public.

Mr. Whited (Editorial Page article titled, "Gays make a mockery of their own cause," June 22) with his "liberal attitude" toward the gay rights struggle, does not fool me. I can tell where he is coming from politically and I do not agree with him. His equation between the Bryant campaign to limit certain civil rights through her fundamentalist campaign to the struggle for gay rights is utterly ridiculous. Imagine how foolish it would be to use the same reasoning in connection with any other major civil rights movements, the American Revolution or even the advances of science (the Darwin theory is a good example).

Why would the I, P-T put an editorial (article) of such low merit in print? Does this reflect the attitude of the I, P-T? It seems to be that way. Evidently Mr. Whited has never dealt with the fact of male/male contact in any way approaching the poignancy expressed in the letter of Mr. Owens in the same issue of your paper. To be moved so strongly by a letter to the editor as I was by reading what Mr. Wilfred Owen has to say, and then read Mr. Whited's obviously biased (and not in favor of gay rights) simpering over poor Anita Bryant is really a turnabout.

I thank you for this glimpse at a real situation, real feeling as opposed to that of a fool. Enjoy your orange juice, Mr. Whited. Anita loves you, doesn't she?

I have been reading so much in the paper about gay rights, etc., I could climb a wall. What I could say about these people you would not print. In the first place, if they want to live the way they do, that's their business, but why advertise it? In the second place, if all boys growing up today felt the same as they do, then all girls would turn out to be either lesbians or old maids. That would mean no future generation — then what?

In the third place why do they insist on getting married? Why don't they live together as they are doing now and keep their big mouths shut. Just the thought of one man or woman wanting to get married to a person of the same sex is enough to turn my stomach.

In the fourth place, if I have a son old enough to go to camp and I knew the instructors were homosexuals, in no way would I allow that boy to go to camp.

I have nothing against these people living the way they want, but speaking for myself, I want nothing to do with them.

Fare is fair

I certainly do not agree with Ernest Smith as he states in "Unfair to seniors" about the 10-cent fare for riding the bus.

Doesn't he realize this is all government subsidized? I feel it a privilege to be able to ride for 10 cents and feel guilty when I take the Orange County transportation for no cost. I feel they, too, should charge 10 cents.

If the senior citizens who ride the bus would have their 10 cents and Medicare card ready, it would be no problem. But they wait until they board the bus, then have to search for their dime and Medicare card, thus keeping the bus driver waiting until they are seated.

I also think the bus drivers are the most polite and patient people I encounter as they seem to realize that many who board their bus have a difficult time getting on.

If Ernest Smith drove, how far does he think he could get for 10 cents?

Legal scalping

I [illegible] small article in the Independent, Press-Telegram yesterday (June 20) where 11 people were arrested for scalping tickets to the "Led Zepplin" concert in San Diego. The scalpers price for the ticket was [illegible].

My 17-year-old son and four of his buddies purchased tickets for the same concert at the Troy Ticket Service in Anaheim. The price on the tickets was marked $9.75 but they paid $35 each.

Now I believe in paying a service charge for services, but $25.25 is outrageous. If my son had tried to sell his ticket for $35 in San Diego, he could have been arrested.

Ticket scalping is against the law, but the law doesn't seem to apply to the agencies that can afford to buy up thousands of tickets for under $10 each and rip off kids like this.

Gee, I think I'll raise my son's allowance to [illegible] a week too, and maybe he can get a license to become a legal ticket scalper.

Hunter update: Story of crime, punishment

Humanity's greater and lesser tragedies and triumphs have life far beyond their time and place of happening. For better or worse these events become part of history, to be aired through the ages, told and retold by the scribes who keep the chronicles.

History can be an atom bomb falling on Hiroshima or a defeated Napoleon retreating through the Russian snows. History can be the Dionne quintuplets' birth or the coronation of a British queen.

F. C. Anderson

History can be a gun-shot fired in the press room at the Long Beach police building on April 22, 1964. There were three casualties. Independent, Press-Telegram police reporter Bill Hunter, 25, was killed instantly; the police careers of Detectives Errol Greenleaf, 32, and Creighton Wiggins, 31, were wounded beyond repair.

That was a major news story in these papers in 1964, and understandably so. It was a senseless tragedy, the end product of horseplay with guns. It was an inane game of "quick draw," and Bill Hunter innocently became "it" forever when Wiggins' finger triggered the fatal shot.

The story of that tragedy was beautifully recounted by reporter Larry LaRue in our issue of Sunday, June 19. What emerged from his typewriter was not a mere recital of gunplay and victim and horror but a document of crime and punishment, centering on the two police officers involved.

Neither officer served time for the shooting. But both paid dearly — in remorse and remembrance of that awful night when Bill Hunter died and their careers as policemen died with him.

Reader Mrs. C. R. Thorn Jr. of Long Beach is highly critical of the LaRue story and of the newspaper for publishing it. She asks:

"What possible 'public service,' what possible benefit did printing the article have? . . . How is resurrecting 13-year-old news of the unfortunate and unnecessary killing of Bill Hunter news now? If considered a 'human interest' story, it falls far short . . ."

The story did not pretend to be a "public service." The story's intent was to show how two police officers have lived with the memory of Bill Hunter's death in the 13 years since it occurred.

History is about what happens to people. So is news. Indeed, news and history are indistinguishable in that they show how the past shapes the future. Certainly Bill Hunter's death 13 years ago had impact on the future lives of Wiggins and Greenleaf.

We mark that impact as a matter of historical record, a record kept by the scribes who keep the chronicles.

I regard Larry LaRue's story as a document of human interest made even sharper by the passage of time. The story was a news update of a celebrated case in Long Beach, not an invasion of privacy, not an attempt to lacerate old griefs.

Maybe there also is a message in the story for those who play games with guns and "didn't mean to do it."

The fatal shooting of reporter Bill Hunter is a part of our journalistic history in Long Beach. Like the other lessons of history, we can learn from it. I hope we will.

I, P-T MAKES HIT: A motion picture about the late rocket scientist Dr. Wernher Von Braun was entitled "I Aim for the Stars" — to which a wag appended, "But I Hit London."

That wag would have a field day with the Independent, Press-Telegram carrier who serves subscriber Louis Thayer, resident of an apartment building at 1404 E. Third St.

Thayer complains that the carrier must moonlight as a shot-putter, for he launches the paper from several yards away, missing Thayer's door and hitting the screen door of his neighbor.

"My neighbor's screen can't take much more of the carrier's shot. In fact, he's almost as frazzled as his screen. He's ready to blow his top."

The prospect of steam rising up from under the collar of Louis Thayer's neighbor is unsettling, to say the least. So, easy does it, Circulation Department, correct your range and your carrier's aim.

We want the I, P-T to be an editorial hit, but not at the cost of a new screen door.

Thursday deadline for NYC

$425 million, plus interest, owing

By Richard L. Worsnop
Editorial Research Reports

NEW YORK — Next Thursday, June 30, will be a day of painful significance for New York City. That is the deadline for repayment of money borrowed from the federal goverment during the previous 12 months under the emergency loan program approved by Congress in 1975.

The city repaid three loans totaling $600 million, plus interest, on June 16. It still owes the Treasury Department $425 million.

The federal loan program is a humiliating reminder of New York's loss of control over its own financial affairs. If the secretary of the treasury determines that the city is unable to repay its loans in full, Congress is authorized to withhold other federal assistance.

Without the federal loans, New York might well have been forced into municipal bankruptcy — a course originally favored by President Ford. In a speech at the National Press Club on Oct. 29, 1975, Ford asserted that the "primary beneficiaries" of a federal loan-guarantee program "would be the New York officials who would thus escape responsibility for their past follies."

THAT STATEMENT, and others like it, inspired the classic headline, "Ford to City: Drop Dead," in the New York Daily News.

New Yorkers expected better treatment under Jimmy Carter, who carried the city — and hence the state — by a substantial margin in last November's presidential election. But while Carter has expressed sympathy for the city's financial plight, he has provided little in the form of relief.

Since welfare reform was one of Carter's campaign themes, New York officials stepped up their campaign to have the federal government assume the entire national welfare burden. Testifying before the Senate Banking Committee on May 17, Mayor Abraham Beame noted that the city's welfare costs in 1978 would be $[illegible] million. If the federal government took over those costs, he added, the city would have a budget surplus and, therefore, no further need for Treasury Department loans.

But the Carter administration is not prepared to move as fast as Beame and other welfare-reform proponents would like. The President has indicated that major reforms cannot take effect before the budget for fiscal year 1981 is approved.

THE ADMINISTRATION has been vague about other types of federal aid to financially needy cities such as New York. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said last month, "We're working on a mechanism for economic development of central cities and will have it ready sometime this year," but he provided no details.

One program reportedly under consideration is an urban development bank that would provide loans for federally approved development programs in the central cities.

Clearly, then, New York's time of belt tightening is far from over. Since the city's fiscal crisis broke three years ago, 52,000 municipal workers — police officers, librarians, teachers, sanitation workers — have been laid off. But former New York gubernatorial candidate Howard Samuels recently wrote:

"The $[illegible] million increase in municipal interest payments since 1975 virtually cancels the savings we achieved by our layoffs."

[illegible] the federal government [illegible] Perhaps. But the Carter administration so far has seemed reluctant to take [illegible] where [illegible]

Fiscal crisis feared when tideland oil funds expire

cent annual increase in the rate of inflation.

The result is what City Manager John Dever calls "unpleasant medicine."

Neither Dever nor James Phelps, his budget and research director, will speak of cutbacks, however.

Both believe they can maintain the current level of services in the city with a budget which, when inflation is considered, provides less money than last year's.

They propose to do this by reorganization — the number of city departments has been reduced from 24 to 14 — and by reducing the number of employes in city government.

"We aren't as productive as we [illegible] be. The city can stand [illegible] and they can stand [illegible]," Phelps says.

In addition, the city is raising [illegible] to provide more revenue.

[illegible] austerity is necessary for [illegible] reasons.

First, last February the council was told financial planners [illegible] wanted the property tax rate [illegible] or reduced. The city tax rate was held at $2.18 per $100 assessed valuation. But Long Beach's share of the property tax revenue brings only about $30 million to the city. Just about enough, Councilman Wes Carroll observes, to pay for police services in Long Beach.

SECOND, the council decreed that increases in expenditures could not exceed the increase in the cost of living.

This might not have been difficult to live with except that the city, for years, has been underfunding its reserves for worker's compensation and vehicle replacement.

"We have to free up money to begin to develop reserves," Phelps says. "This is probably the only area in the city where we really need to have money." It will take two or three years to replenish the reserves, he says.

The sales tax, another major source of city revenue, has produced what Carroll calls a "shortfall of $2 million." He attributes it to the condition of the downtown commercial area and many auto dealers moving elsewhere.

The budget squeeze this year is [illegible] the result of some free spending in the early '70s. "We had a lot of services considered to be luxuries [illegible] gourmet cooking classes, quilting classes and on and on and on," Phelps says. The per capita expenditure for recreation in Long Beach is 50 per cent higher than 90 per cent of the cities in California, he adds.

The problems with the tax-supported budget, though, do not represent a crisis in city government. City officials are convinced they can hold down spending long enough to build up reserve funds without increasing property taxes.

A fiscal crisis for Long Beach, however, is a distinct possibility 10 years from now.

That's when the tideland oil revenues, which currently bring the city $9 million a year, will be reduced as a result of a complex arrangement with the state to $1 million.

A report prepared last year by Phelps and then acting City Manager Robert Creighton projected an annual deficit in the tidelands of $13.5 million by 1989. Next year the Convention Center and the Queen Mary are expected to lose $2 million each.

By 1989 there will not be enough money from oil revenues to pay the $4.1 million it will take to maintain the beaches that year.

What this means is that the city has been investing a dwindling resource and unless something is done to stop the deficit spending on the shoreline, in 10 years the problem will be dropped on the taxpayers of Long Beach.

SO, IN ADDITION to balancing its tax-supported budget, the city is marshalling its resources on the shoreline in an attempt to make those enterprises at least self-supporting before the money runs out.

Dever is aware that the city has invested $150 million in the Queen Mary, the Convention Center and other efforts to attract tourists. He is committed to a fiscal policy that demands that something be done to make the best of what some critics view as ill-considered investments.

"I think it's important that we utilize every dollar of tideland funds in a way that would pay off to the benefit of the people in this area so there would be a multiplier effect. Those funds are sort of bonus funds, and we ought to use them as investments that would bring us returns in the future," he says.

This means promoting the city as a convention town and making the Convention Center pay for itself. It means building a downtown marina which will show a profit. It also means doing something with the Queen Mary.

Dever says the city will promote the ship in an effort to turn the operation around. But because that seems unlikely he has been working with port commissioners, the State Lands Commission and the state attorney general to create an alternative — handing the ship to the Port of Long Beach.

If all of these enterprises were successful enough to avert a deficit in tideland funds 10 years from now, they would undoubtedly have other positive effects on the city.

Tourist dollars would create jobs and increase sales tax revenues, and the marina and other shoreline recreational facilities would draw investors in commercial and residential property downtown, swelling property tax rolls, according to planners.

Success here might be the springboard for the entire downtown redevelopment, Dever says. "The downtown is functionally and physically obsolete. It's in a very difficult position in terms of competition and the downtown is a key to the economic and social welfare of the community."

THE DOWNTOWN redevelopment has already begun, with $70 million proposed for a shopping mall and garage. Most of the money will come from loans to be repaid from increases in tax revenues the development is expected to produce. The hope has been expressed that the mall would generate an additional $60 million a year in retail sales.

In addition, Dever says the city will push for industrial development on the Westside, around the harbor, at the airport and in some of the outlying areas of the city.

What this all means is that the city is in no immediate financial trouble, at least none that's out of control.

But because tideland oil funds are running out, the city is running out of options. The decisions, good or bad, have been made and there is one decade left to make Long Beach an attractive convention and tourist center, to revive the languishing shoreline and save the downtown commercial district.

It all translates into a long-range fiscal gamble with waning oil revenues as part of the stakes. If we lose, Dever says, "the people of this community are going to be paying and paying heavily."

A survivor lives to encourage future L.B. coronary patients

By Don Borst
Staff Writer

Ken Larson was a key mechanical engineering designer in the development of the Titan missile, the Gemini manned space project and the Trident submarine system before the autumn of 1974.

After he developed heart disease and suffered a series of coronary attacks that year, his ignorance and stubbornness in refusing to be hospitalized nearly cost him his life, the Long Beach resident says.

But emergency heart surgery saved him in October 1974. He recovered and became an activist with the Long Beach Mended Hearts Association to help save the lives of others.

"I had several heart attacks in the late summer that year," Larson recalled, the excruciating pain just a horrible memory.

"I GENUINELY thought I was extremely healthy, and while I knew others who had suffered from heart disease, I just knew it couldn't happen to me.

"There were pains — terrible pains," he said, wincing at the memory, "but I knew I would get over them. I did a damn good job of talking myself and my wife out of rushing me to the hospital several times.

"I guess it shows how ignorant I was."

In September, his 50-year-old heart gave way. It was so blocked at the right coronary passage that it was doing him more harm than good.

Doctors termed his heart "inoperable" just two weeks before the surgery, but when his condition deteriorated considerably, they had no choice other than to operate.

"I was extremely fortunate to have such a tremendous team of surgeons on my case," he said. "I've seen at least a dozen angiograms of other coronary systems which weren't damaged as badly as mine, but all of the other patients died."

Today, Larson is retired at 53.

When he's not tinkering around the garage or attending Long Beach City College, Larson can usually be found working as a volunteer with the association, visiting heart patients who are preparing for surgery.

"It is important for the heart patient to have someone to talk to and to answer questions — someone who understands his own fears and anxieties," Larson said.

ANOTHER of his personal interests is to encourage people who believe that they may have heart problems to look for a cardiologist.

"One of the biggest problems is that people like me won't admit to themselves they have heart problems when symptoms present themselves," he said. "Techniques now available are almost foolproof in determining whether one has a heart disease that can be treated.

"Seventy per cent of the people who have serious heart problems will have a normal appearing cardiogram if it is taken while they're in a resting state. Far more effective is the stress treadmill test," he added.

He noted that a "tremendous number" of the 600,000 to one million deaths from heart-related diseases each year could be spared if they are detected in the early stages.

Taking a class here and there at Long Beach City College has occupied some of his time, but, like most retirees, he has had to resort to hobbies to fill many of his hours, which used to be spent with executive-type decisions.

Instead of designing rocket engines and working on nuclear reactors, now much of his time is spent rebuilding inside and out special-interest automobiles.

He is finishing up his latest, most comprehensive project — completely overhauling the engine and interior of a 28-foot motor home.

It is the former traveling home of the Boraxo Racing Team, and is graced on each side with a huge painting of the 20-mule team that made Borax famous.

BORAXO'S Formula 5000 race team traveled all over the country in the motorhome for years until its transmission gave out and Larson picked it up for a nominal fee.

In the past two years, working with the parts he has, parts he can buy and parts he has to reconstruct himself, Larson has partially or completely restored a 1959 Fiat he found deserted in a field, now worth about $4,000; a 1963 Studebaker Gran Turismo Hawk; a 1959 Austin-Healy, and a 1962 Corvair van.

He says his lifestyle has naturally slowed down quite a bit since the heart attacks.

"Oh, I've learned not to run up stairs two at a time, and I make sure I pace myself during the day."

Church hears debate

Death penalty a deterrent?

By Dick Howland
Staff Writer

While working as a deputy district attorney assigned to Long Beach, Toni Friedenberg met relatives of brutally tortured murder victims.

She says killers with a history of violence deserve to die and she wants the death penalty restored. She explained her views Saturday during a debate at the Covenant Presbyterian Church in Long Beach.

William Dunn, a Long Beach attorney and former member of the Long Beach Human Relations Commission, argued against the death penalty.

"You never know how many lives are saved by the death penalty, just like you never know how many [illegible] are saved by a light[illegible]," Ms. Friedenberg told members of the League of Women Voters and the National Association of Social Workers.

Ms. Friedenberg said that according to an affidavit filed by the wife of a shopowner who was robbed recently, one of the bandits put a gun to the shopowner's head and was about to pull the trigger when an accomplice shouted, "No, no, I don't want to die for murder."

The only thing wrong with capital punishment in the past has been that it hasn't been imposed often enough, she declared.

"Parents know that those who promise to punish a child but never do soon lose their credibility," she said. "Our laws lost their credibility long before they were declared unconstitutional by the courts because they were rarely employed.

"Statistics can prove either side, but one study showed there were seven or eight fewer murders for each execution," she said.

"Only five persons in California are blocking the will of the people, who have voted in favor of restoring the death penalty. Four of seven Supreme Court justices and one governor are stopping the implementation of capital punishment," she added.

(Gov. Brown recently vetoed a death penaly bill passed by the Legislature, and the court has struck down previous death penalty laws. Last week the State Senate voted to override Brown's veto.)

She did not advocate capital punishment for all murders — only when the convicted killer is likely to murder again, when a prison guard's life is endangered or when there has been a history of violence. A husband who beats his wife to death with a pressure cooker, for example, is not a candidate for execution, Ms. Friedenberg said.

"One example of a crime deserving the death penalty is a horrible sex crime I know of in which two lesbians cut off a man's penis and stuffed it down his throat," she said.

Dunn contested Ms. Friedberg's arguments. Standing in a church classroom below a framed print of Jesus Christ, Dunn stressed that justice is relative to contemporary standards throughout history.

"Every one in his own time thinks he's enlightened," Dunn said. "The Athenian lawgiver Solon decreed in 500 B.C. that murder trials should be held outdoors because any killer is polluted and the pollution could spread to jurors and witnesses in an enclosed courtroom. Even inanimate objects responsible for a death were tried, convicted and destroyed.

"In Jesus' days, adulterers were stoned to death. Now adultery is not considered a capital crime in our country.

"We used to burn witches in our country," he continued. "In 1927 two anarchists were convicted of murder and put to death, because of discrimination based on politics and religion. It could happen again in 1977."

He said the issue is: does the death penalty create a better society?

"Through capital punishment, the state condones the very acts it condemns and fosters the idea that killing is OK, which creates the atmosphere of violence which we seek to remove.

"People must think in terms other than violence," Dunn said. "Execution is the premeditated killing of a human. It is murder."

He said society must develop constructive channels for young people to expend their energy and stay out of mischief. Instead, we now graduate high school students with no reading skills and no training for jobs.

"If we improved our educational system, I assure you there would be less crime and fewer murders," he said. "We need a revolutionary new society to stop murder, not the death penalty."

He questioned the deterrent value of the death penalty in most cases. He said clergyman interviewed 167 thieves before their hangings in England during the times of public executions, and 164 said they had witnessed public executions of thieves before those interviewed committed crimes themselves.

"Execution is an illogical and senseless solution to try," he maintained. "Drunken drivers kill repeatedly on the highways, but should we execute them in order to stop people from drinking and driving? Is that the deterrent value we're talking about?"

He added that truth does not always emerge in court, but the death penalty is final and leaves no room for correcting mistaken convictions. One book outlines 57 cases across the nation in this century when convicted killers were later exonerated, Dunn said.

He pointed out that the appeal process is only a limited safeguard because an appeals court must uphold the verdict of a lower court unless it is proven that a technical error in legal proceedings occured during the first trial.

During a 10-minute rebuttal, Ms. Friedenberg said it is great to be an idealist, but society must be practical.

Exxon hit on Sohio pullout

A chief critic of Standard Oil of Ohio's proposed Alaskan oil supertanker terminal in Long Beach says the Exxon Corp.'s withdrawal from financing the terminal's $255-million transcontinental pipeline will have no impact on the project.

Tom Quinn, chairman of the California Air Resources Board (ARB), also hinted that Exxon may be acting in bad faith in its publicized abandoning of support for the 1,025-mile pipeline to Texas.

In withdrawing from a 20 per cent share in the project last Monday, Exxon cited strict California air quality protection and permit requirements as the reason for its withdrawal from the Sohio project.

Quinn said the state and Exxon have had a "stormy relationship" in the past few months.

"Exxon has refused to cooperate with the State of California," Quinn said, charging that the firm "was most belligerent" when dealing with a state commission charged with regulating cost of development.

"I think — in fact, I know — it (the withdrawal) will have no impact on the project," Quinn said.

The pipeline is proposed to transport Alaskan oil from the Sohio terminal in the Port of Long Beach to Midland, Tex., for subsequent distribution to Gulf and Midwestern refineries.

Robert L. Schaadt, a vice president of Sohio Transportation Co., said his firm intends to proceed with pipeline planning and hopes to start construction this year.

"We're optimistically hanging in there," Schaadt said.

As for Exxon's complaint that the ARB's permit requirements are too stringent, Schaadt said, "I guess we wouldn't be pursuing this with all our effort if we felt totally that way."

However, Schaadt said he believes Sohio "is being asked to do things that, as near as we can tell, others have never been asked to do."

New L.B. budget tries to end 'nonplanning'

This is more than an exercise in arithmetic. "We are now accounting for every dollar," City Manager John Dever said. And the implication is clear that this has not always been done in the past.

The second major change in the budget ties directly to the objective of long-range planning by the city. Money is allocated in terms of goals. It's called a programmatic budget and appropriations are directly related to stated objectives. Previous budgets listed salaries, other expenses and capital expenditures without tying them directly to projects and objectives.

"We've been very careful in this budget to clearly state what the total budgetary implications of a project are," says Dever.

Proof of that came dramatically during last Tuesday's budget hearing when critics launched a challenge to an item in the Port of Long Beach budget, $67.8 million in revenue bonds to finance the proposed Standard Oil of Ohio tanker terminal project.

If the item had appeared in last year's budget it would have been buried among proposals for other building projects listed under "capital outlay."

The programmatic budget, by clearly labeling the proposal, gave critics a chance to urge the City Council not to include the bonds in the 1977-78 budget. Council members approved it anyway with the assurance that they will have an opportunity to rule on the specific bond issue later.

MAYOR THOMAS CLARK says this is the beginning of an effort by "the city and the harbor to work more closely" with one another.

Sohio critics would have undoubtedly found another forum for their views. And as Councilwoman Renee Simon observes, "It's more than the budget, it's an increased level of public awareness." But, she adds, "This is the first time, to my knowledge, the harbor budget and harbor projects have been scrutinized by the public and the council."

The idea of budgeting for goals and objectives, some of them long-range, may be an expression of change that goes beyond budget considerations. The budget is a guide for expenditures and it is flexible enough to allow for change. What may be important is the new attitude on the part of the city toward the way in which money is spent and projects are planned.

It is difficult to assess because few people at City Hall want to talk about how things were done in the past.

No one wants to explain, publicly at least, why the city hired Sasaki-Walker Associates and paid them $800,000, nearly half of which was used to design an Aquatic Park the city cannot afford to build.

Few know exactly how the city managed to invest an estimated $80 million in the Queen Mary, which was purchased for less than $4 million.

Few care to admit to an understanding of the process whereby a $3.5-million remodeling of the Long Beach Arena grew, in a series of pieced-together, informal proposals, into a $50-million Convention Center complex.

City Auditor Robert Fronke thinks he knows how it happened:

—The Queen Mary: "You take one step at a time and each step is individually justified, and yet each one of them results in a total plan and, if people knew all about it to start with, they might have said, 'That's no good.' "

—The Convention Center: "It either grew like topsy or there was a master plan in somebody's mind or in somebody's desk and it unfolded one step at a time on the theory that this was the only way it was going to get developed."

Fronke says there was no opportunity to study alternatives to these two massive investments of tideland funds and concludes, "We were not geared to do the kind of long-range planning that should have been done." And there was little or no public participation in the development of either the Queen Mary or the Convention Center.

Dever avoids this kind of postmortem. Both enterprises were an economic reality when he took charge of city management eight months ago. And he intends to make the best of it.

"The citizens of Long Beach," he says, "have invested approximately $150 million in convention, promotion, tourism kinds of facilities. The money is spent. We are now in the most competitive business in the United States today. We are competing with New York, Anaheim, San Franciso and Las Vegas."

THAT MEANS the city has to promote and go after conventions, exhibits and other activities.

"Our citizens stand to lose, unless we're successful, upwards to $5 million a year beginning in 1980." That's when tideland oil revenues begin to run out for the city and losses, if there are any, begin to come out of the taxpayer's pocket, Dever explains.

"We've got to do better than anybody else in the country in promoting or the people of this community are going to be paying and paying heavily," he adds.

Dever is looking in part to the budget to help avoid the essentially unplanned nature of major undertakings.

He says it will provide two things.

—Maximum planning capability for the City Council.

—The greatest degree of control for the council.

"What the system does is force the City Council to look at each of their capital expenditures in terms of what the objective is, what the cost is and what the benefits are. It requires them to specifically authorize, at least for that year, expenditures so that, for instance, instead of appropriating $90 million for capital projects, they are required to look at each project and evaluate that expenditure."

It appears that tideland oil revenues, a major source of capital investment in the past for shoreline projects, will be given more careful study by the city, and the new budget process is moving in that direction.

But is has a ways to go, according to Fronke. "The budget doesn't say much to me. It is a budget in transition," he says. It is moving toward a system which will employ a commercial method of accounting, one that charges off all costs of operation, including depreciation, in enterprise departments — those that are supposed to be self-supporting like the golf courses, the marina, the water and gas departments and the Queen Mary.

These operations should be treated like private commercial enterprises from an accounting standpoint, Fronke says.

What it amounts to is this: If the golf course gets water from the water department, it should be charged to the golf course to provide an accurate picture of the recreational operation. It would also ensure that the cost of the water is reflected in greens fees and not in water bills. If not, it should be clearly stated somewhere that the water department is subsidizing the golf courses.

"The purpose of accounting," the auditor says, "is to provide management with informational tools to control the business and it is not appropriate, in my view, to try to control a commercial enterprise through a municipal appropriation budgeting process."

This type of accounting will be used more widely July 1 when the city's automated financial and management information system goes into operation.

Fronke is also critical of the "tendency to designate revenue by where it's going rather than where it came from."

He's referring to the more than $83 million designated "revenue for capital projects." This money includes bonds as one of its sources and Fronke says, "Borrowed money is not a source of revenue."

HIS CRITICISMS are mostly technical, but he believes good accounting methods are essential to a system which is supposed to provide a government with accurate, intelligible information on which to base decisions.

"It's not nearly the way it ought to be but it's a start," Fronke says.

It is an exaggeration to say a different approach to budgeting will, by itself, improve accountability, planning or control. But the attitudes suggested by changes in this year's budget, along with recent efforts by city government to improve long-range planning and increase citizen participation, offer hope that projects the size of the Convention Center or the Queen Mary will, in the future, be given more study, more thought and a better public airing.

Secret Witness cases, rewards are summarized

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 75 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $51,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P-T Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Camilla Stassi, 20-year-old coed found raped and stabbed to death in her Long Beach apartment in the 100 block of W. Eighth St. on the night of Jan. 17, 1977.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of two masked bandits who held up the manager and clerk at Eddie's Liquor Store, 301 Market St., at 7 a.m. on April 25, 1977, and fled with the loot in the manager's car.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Antonio Magallon, 39, shot to death by unknown assailants following an argument outside his Wilmington home in the 100 block of West D Street at 11:30 p.m. on April 1, 1977.

— Rewards totaling $6,000 to $12,000, depending on the offense, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the disappearance of Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, last seen Oct. 22 when he was checking on some property on Cedar Avenue. Secret Witness guarantees a $1,000 reward for a kidnaping conviction and $2,000 for a murder conviction. The victim's father, Dr. Allan Snider, has pledged $5,000 for a kidnaping conviction and $10,000 for a murder conviction.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Samuel Law, 23, formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrest, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a woman manager in another. Mack is a black man 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2200 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 160 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

What's Your Problem?

Home-owning, although gratifying, not for everyone to try

By Don. G. Campbell

What could be more satisfying than a comfortable house (which needs painting from time to time, and a host of other things), surrounded by a lush lawn (it needs mowing) and a picket fence (from which the slates occasionally fall)?

Well, a lot of people don't find it all that "satisfying." Home ownership, like eggplant, isn't for everybody.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: My wife and I are both retired and have a combined income of some $11,000 per year, all tax-free. In addition, we have approximately $11,000 in a credit union which pays us an additional $650-$700 a year.

Our home, valued at $45,000 is encumbered with a mortgage of $10,000 with payments of $158 per month. We are considering selling our home, investing the equity of some $30,000 in good tax-free bonds, and moving into an apartment on which the rent would be about $250 per month.

We are both near 70 and would appreciate your views. — T.N.B., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. You seem to be pretty dry-eyed about the prospects of giving up the old home so I suspect that your motives for selling it and moving into an apartment aren't entirely financial.

Actually, from a purely financial standpoint, you aren't going to end up impressively ahead. Most tax-free bonds are now yielding about 5½ per cent, so your $30,000 equity will bring you in about $1,650 a year.

Off-setting this to a large degree, of course, is the monthly difference that you will be paying between your present mortgage payments ($158 a month) and your anticipated higher rent ($250). This amounts to $1,104 a year, or a net gain of only $546 a year.

But, as a rationale — at your age — for getting rid of a house and going in for apartment living, I can't fault you.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: We contemplate the purchase of either a mobile home or a conventional house and lot. One can anticipate a profit on the resale of a conventional home. However, on the resale of a mobile home, it seems that they usually sell for less than when new. Can you give any facts or figures or percentages? — L.A.T. Oakland

A. It's an interesting question, and I put it to some friends who have been active in the financing (and resale) of mobile homes. The answer, it seems, is maybe yes, maybe no.

While the one-family residence has been appreciating in value nationally at the compounded rate of about 8 per cent a year, the appreciation (or depreciation) is more variable with mobile homes.

I am told that if the mobile home is a good, sound one, well maintained and in a pleasant location (also well maintained) there is no reason why it shouldn't appreciate in value at a rate comparable to the appreciation of a conventional home.

In other words, exactly the same factors that influence the resale price of a conventional home also influence the resale value of a mobile home. Sorry I couldn't come up with something a little more dramatic.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: The small apartment complex where I live recently changed hands and the new owner — who is very nosey and unpleasant — and I don't get along at all. I'd like to move, but have several more months to go on my lease.

Doesn't the change of ownership mean that my lease is automatically canceled? — W.G.F., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. I think you'd have a rough time in court trying to make a valid case for this interpretation. Unless otherwise specified in your lease, it was a part of the deal.

However, you might check with a lawyer on this since state laws will vary broadly on the subject.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I've just sold my home which had a swimming pool and a wet bar at poolside. The buyer is very angry because I removed the bar because I didn't consider it a part of the house, but a portable piece of furniture. Who's right here? He's being very insistent. — W.F.L. San Diego

A. Unless it's specifically excluded in the description of the property being offered for sale, anything attached to the house is a part of the house and included. The fact that this is a WET bar — with all of the plumbing that this suggests — makes it a part of the house sale in my book.

Hunters Pointe Grand Opening

Two generations of the Warmington family were on hand Thursday for the Grand Opening celebration at Hunters Pointe, a new Robert P. Warmington Co. residential community in Anaheim Hills.

Robert P. Warmington was host to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Warmington as well as to hundreds of community, civic and building industry leaders at a traditional English lawn party. Guests enjoyed a lavish buffet and the music of a string quartet.

The Warmington family has been building homes for Southern California families since 1926. Robert P. Warmington carries on the family tradition in his own company, a tradition of craftsmanship and caring.

Priced from $130,000 to $190,000, the homes at Hunters Pointe have the traditional look of yesterday. Styled in the French, English, Colonial and Early California traditions, the homes are a return to the look and quality construction of yesterday, employing today's modern technology.

THESE ONE and two story, three to five bedroom homes offer 2,000 to 3,206 square feet of living area. The homes at Hunters Pointe are distinguished by use of wooden banisters and spindle railings, oak cabinetry, wood framed windows and shutters.

The gracious homes feature wood-burning fireplaces, wall-to-wall plush carpeting throughout, wet bars, central air conditioning. Kitchens feature a full complement of RCA Whirlpool appliances.

The models were decorated by Mel Grau Designs of Newport Beach.

The first phase of these luxurious executive homes has been sold out. Information on the second and third phases is available at the sales office. The sales center is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

For information call (714) 998-4071.

Landlord/tenant law discussion Monday

"Landlord/Tenant Laws and The Courts" will be the topic of the June installation meeting of the Apartment Association of Orange County, Monday at the Quality Inn in Anaheim at 8 p.m.

Moderated by David Cossaboom, lawyer and legal consultant for the Apartment Association of Orange County, a panel of judges from the Orange County Municipal Courts will discuss landlord/tenant procedures as they apply to cases scheduled for the Orange County Courts. Speakers will include Judge John Wyatt and Judge Phillip McGraw.

The meeting also will include the installation of new officers who will be serving the association throughout the coming year.

Models ready in December

Forty-seven homes are now in the final stages of design to be built in Northwood, City of Irvine. This subdivision will be called "Crestwood Estates" according to Bob Gibbs, president of Patrician-Carlton Development Co. Three models ranging from 1,800 to 2,800 square feet in size will be ready for viewing in early December.

Gibbs said that Red Moltz and Associates are designing the plans for the project.

Appraiser speaks

Gordan Kohlmeyer of the Los Angeles County assessor's office will be the guest speaker at the North Long Beach Real Estate Club's breakfast meeting on Thursday, 7:30 a.m., in the Park Pantry, 1711 Susana Rd.

Kohlmeyer of the principal appraiser for the Long Beach area.

Deuk scores with crime bills

By Bob Houser
Political Editor

State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, has won one-sided Senate victories for three anti-crime bills which now go to the Assembly.

The measures would end the probation subsidy program, crack down on habitual criminals and provide for court-controlled electronic eavesdropping to combat organized crime and narcotics trafficking.

Deukmejian said the subsidy program, after 10 years' operation at a cost of $161 million, is a dismal failure. It rewarded communities for keeping convicted felons from returning to prison.

His bill would replace it with crime and delinquency prevention programs, putting more than $20 million into the "front end of the criminal justice system to help youthful offenders."

The second Deukmejian bill is a $1.5-million program aimed at "eliminating the manipulation of the criminal justice system by 'career criminals'."

The money would fund "career criminal units" in each district attorney's office in the state, "enabling each office to assign its best deputies to handle criminals who cause the most crime." The same deputy could handle a case from start to finish.

The bill also would prohibit plea bargaining on the most serious charge in each case, recognize the people's right to a speedy trial by barring the defendant from waiving his right to a speedy trial, and identify a career criminal as one who has committed one of the most serious felonies or two lesser felonies within the previous 10 years.

Both these bills were passed 32-0.

The vote was 21-10 on the eavesdropping measure.

Deukmejian said it provides careful protection against abuse by limiting court-ordered wiretaps to 10 days, requiring additional court action if they are to be continued.

The bill requires annual reporting on the number of wiretaps, why they were used and what effect they had on prosecutions.

The Senate earlier passed another Deukmejian bill providing that a witness may be compelled to testify through the granting of immunity from prosecution. However, the witness may still be prosecuted for any crime he may have committed if the prosecutor has evidence independent of the compelled testimony.

HOWE APPOINTED

Bettye M. Howe of Compton, a graduate of Long Beach State University, has been appointed by Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, to the State Advisory Health Council.

Ms. Howe, office manager for a Los Angeles physician, is a Compton planning commissioner and a former medical ward clerk of the University of Maryland department of psychiatry.

YOUNG GOP

Los Angeles County Young Republicans will host several GOP candidates for governor and lieutenant governor at a $5 a person fund-raising cocktail party at 8 p.m. July 9 in the John Bennett residence, 3 Eastfield Drive, Rolling Hills. Additional information about the party may be obtained by calling 675-6033.

Boy, 7, drowned hunting pollywogs

SAN LUIS OBISPO (AP) — A 7-year-old boy drowned Friday night in a creek while catching pollywogs, authorities said Saturday.

Herbert Lee Carson was reported missing by his mother, Marilyn Carson, who was visiting friends at a nearby ranch. A three-hour search by the mother failed to locate the missing boy, and the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department was contacted. The body was found by divers in about 10 feet of water.

Postal job abuses to be curbed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is trying to catch employes at its Washington headquarters who take too much time away from the office.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has ordered that employes fill out cards whenever they enter or leave the modern 10-floor building on Washington's L'Enfant Plaza.

Bailar announced the step in a circular to headquarters employes that made clear the purpose of the program was to find those who are spending too much time during the working day outside the building.

"The action is necessary because of the continued unauthorized late arrival and early departure by some postal employes, as well as extended periods of absence from work locations during the day," Bailar said.

AS PART of the procedure, two of the three ground-floor entrances to the building have been blocked off. A checkpoint has been established at the third and employes must fill out a card when they want to leave the building or get back in.

Bailar's announcement said: "A periodic analysis of sign-in, sign-out cards will be provided to each department. Managers should apply existing rules governing the assessment of charges to accrued leave when appropriate, or initiate formal action to correct any continuing abuses."

The issue of morale among postal service workers is one of the subjects expected to be dealt with at House hearings beginning next month on legislation to restructure the Postal Service.

ONE OF the sponsors of that bill, Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., said in a recent floor speech, "The need for such legislation has been underscored by several actions which have further heightened the degree of alienation between top postal management and the rest of the service's employes."

Wilson, chairman of a House Post Office subcommittee, said there is "a severe morale problem among those dedicated people who really make the Postal Service run."

Wilson criticized a program of sending out press releases telling the salaries of postmasters, calling this "a vindictive new program aimed at postmasters who have made critical comments about top management."

The Postal Service also has been involved for several years in controversies with its unions over involuntary transfers of employes. Bailar has said the transfers have made possible substantial savings for the financially pinched agency.

WHY a career at REX L. HODGES REALTY COMPANY

BERNIE JONES
Vice-President, Gen. Sales Mgr.

WHY A CAREER AT REX L. HODGES REALTY?

Answer: You have more going for you. "IT IS JUST THAT SIMPLE," stated Bernie Jones, Vice-President/General Sales Manager. Rex L. Hodges Realty has been in business since 1929. That's over 48 years in the Long Beach Orange County basin. We are a "Family of Companies." Today more than ever before we all value a family relationship. Our family extends from Robert C. Westmyer, owner of Rex L. Hodges Realty, to one of our newer salespersons Steve Smith, who recently joined Rex L. Hodges at our Westminster Village office. Steve formerly owned a large hamburger franchise. Everyday we are striving to make "Our Company" a better Company.

The Real Estate market is pretty well saturated in every city, so there has to be reason to choose REX L. HODGES REALTY and after 48 years in this business we know what the differences are: We also feel the programs we offer to salespersons, and also to the customers, who will be selling their homes, and the persons who will purchase homes in 1977 will enable you, the salesman, to provide 100% coverage. When Rex L. Hodges Realty offers the services, we are aware we have that extra edge coupled with 48 years of sound, confident service. A solid family atmosphere and you have a winner.

JUST LOOK AT THE DIFFERENCES

Growth: We recently opened our new Seal Beach office on Pacific Coast Highway. Juanita Newman, the manager, is a fine example of the great opportunity at Rex L. Hodges company.

If management is in your plans, plan a career with Rex L. Hodges Realty.

In 1976 Rex L. Hodges Realty purchased Pacific Bay Real Estate in Northern California serving the East Bay area including Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond. Now! That's growth, and we are negotiating with others at this very time.

Equity Loans! Your customers can take advantage of a "no payment" part of their equity loan and repay when their home has sold.

Training and Counselling: A professional never stops training and retraining. A license allows you to sell. Rex L. Hodges Realty shows you how to match the right buyer and the right home, and how to market that owner's home to get it sold. Real Estate is a very rewarding profession and yet there are many different problems that arise, and when a Company has fellows like Earl J. Christensen, Vice-President, and Terry Mulholland, Vice-President, you have two of the finest minds in General Real Estate in the State of California. When you join Rex L. Hodges you join our family and families seem to have a way of overcoming any or all of the difficulties that arise.

Trade in Program: An absolute must in the 70's. Our Trade-In Program is not some hit or miss proposition. It works. We pioneered "Trade-Ins" in 1929. Think about it.

H & H Development Co. H & H Development Co. is a subsidiary of Rex L. Hodges, a part of our family. We build apartments, condominiums, shopping centers and medical offices. We will also build for your clients on their buildable lots. All H & H properties are covered by a Builder's One Year Warranty. Another good reason to start your career at Rex L. Hodges.

HOME WARRANTIES:

When you purchase your next home specify you want an American Home Shield Warranty. (*This one year warranty protects your home against the defects or malfunction of the major systems, appliances, and hot water heater, garbage disposal, dishwasher and last but not least waste and drainline stoppages). So call the nearest Rex L. Hodges office and specify that you want an American Home Shield One Year Warranty and leave the shopping to us.

When you sell your home please remember that when your home is listed with Rex L. Hodges Realty, if you so desire, your home will be covered by American Home Shield Warranty. Ask the salesperson about the details. Better still call and we will deliver the brochures with information. Well, we ran out of space, but I hope that maybe we have told the Rex L. Hodges story and remember there is a difference when you join our family.

Cordially yours,
Bernie Jones

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

BETTY WHITE, cohost with Allen Ludden of the "PATSY Awards" show this evening on Ch. 7, gives a hand to last year's top winner, Fred, the cockatoo, of "Baretta."

PATSY AWARDS

No speeches by winners

By Bob Martin
TV-Radio Editor

Another of television's many awards programs airs tonight, but this one is different. None of the winners will make a speech.

How can we be sure? Why, all the winners will be animals.

The 27th annual "PATSY Awards" special will be telecast from 6:30 to 7 this evening on KABC-TV (Channel 7). The awards are presented by the American Humane Association for outstanding performances in TV shows, commercials and movies.

There should be plenty of contestants to choose from, for, as nearly everyone points out, there have been an awful lot of dogs on the tube this season.

Betty White and Allen Ludden host the program, which was taped earlier this month at Knott's Berry Farm. June Lockhart, Pat Paulsen and Dody Goodman serve as presenters of awards.

Seventeen animals will receive Patsys and one will get the Grand Patsy sweepstakes award. The big winner a year ago was Fred the cockatoo, Robert Blake's friend on "Baretta." And, the preceding year, Tonto the cat in the movie "Harry and Tonto" took the top honor.

Winning animals will be on hand, and they also will be seen in clips from their shows.

PATSY is an acronym for Performing Animal Television Star of the Year (for television), as well as Picture Animal Top Star of the Year (for feature films).

Unlike many other TV and movie stars, tonight's winners won't use their awards to demand pay raises. They're happy to work for chicken feed.

High-rise living

'Terraces' focuses on apartment dwellers

JULIE NEWMAR is one of the stars of the new TV movie "Terraces," which airs at 9:30 p.m. Monday on Ch. 4. She plays Chalene Turner, a former Las Vegas showgirl who's living it up in a high-rise apartment.

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

NBC describes its movie pilot "Terraces" as "a frank, frequently shocking but always human drama" about the people whose terraces adjoin in a high-rise apartment building.

Frank? Maybe. Shocking? Only to someone who has been cut off from the world for the past 10 years.

"It was intended to be to urban life what ABC's prime-time 'Family' is to suburban life," said Lila Garrett, who wrote the script with George Kirgo and also produced and directed the 90-minute film which airs on NBC Monday night.

But from the moment the idea was conceived until the final editing of the film, it underwent change every step of the way. Ms. Garrett said it was originally a much tougher, much grittier, much bolder show.

"MY INTENTION in leveling off the hard edges was to make it easier to sell," she said. "I felt that later I could do what I wanted, that I'd have more freedom. But, ironically, I feel I accomplished the opposite.

"I think when you compromise you lose, and generally I don't compromise. But sometimes you have to because they hold all the cards. It's their network."

"Terraces" is about the people who live in the building: a young career couple whose marriage is in trouble, a single girl on her own for the first time, a homosexual couple, an older couple finding it difficult to adjust to retirement, and a heart-of-gold Las Vegas showgirl whose boyfriend pays the rent.

Their lives, problems and conflicts all intermingle in what Ms. Garrett admits is soap opera. "But it's laced with comedy and there is no comedy in soap opera," she said.

"SOAP OPERA has only one shade of life — bathos. When you inject humor into that you have real life. It's humor that makes it bearable for the audience."

Besides the changes asked for by the network's standards and practices department, Ms. Garrett said she made changes of her own after testing the show before an audience.

She said, "After viewing it, one woman said, 'I don't want that kind of reality.' She said she didn't feel threatened by the violence on police shows because she knew it would never touch her. But she felt this could.

"After that I re-edited the film, taking out some scenes and shifting others around. These were changes I made myself. They say testing is only a tool, but in reality it's a weapon.

"The question is how much do you compromise? The answer is you compromise enough that you don't change the intent of your story, yet are still able to get it on the air."

SHE SAID, "I felt I made a mistake making these changes. Not just the changes required by the network but the changes I was willing to make. I felt that by not maintaining my perspective I hurt my picture. It still has some moving scenes, but it's not the same picture. It's not bold any more."

Ms. Garrett asked, "Most commercial television is for children. Who's programming for us, relatively intelligent adults who want to be mentally stimulated and entertained at the same time? Public TV is too highfalutin. It's like invading a library. After you watch a show, two pompous asses get up and tell you what you saw."

Although "Terraces" was originally intended as a pilot for a possible TV series, it's doubtful it will ever develop into a regular show — at least not for the upcoming season.

'A truly nice person'

Ron Howard happy as second banana

By Connie Lauerman
Chicago Tribune

Ron Howard is a truly nice person.

Really nice. Not in a cloying, phony saccharine way, but in a real, modest sincere way. He's the freckled boy-next-door, the clean-cut high school basketball player, the kind of guy who'd take it on the chin with good manners.

Howard, 23, a strawberry blond, wholesome type, started out as the star of the immensely popular '50s spoof "Happy Days." He plays Richie Cunningham, an ingenuous "Joe College" who's not above an occasional thrill.

But somewhere along the line, Henry Winkler's portrayal of naughty, greasy Fonzie eclipsed Howard's Richie. The fan mail poured in. The writers began expanding Fonzie's role. (He had a whirlwind romance one season and lots of attention.) You'd think Winkler was the star of the show, for heaven's sake!

But Howard has plugged along, becoming a stabilizing influence akin to that other prime-time anchor, Mary Tyler Moore's Mary Richards, another nice person.

"Initially, the character of 'Fonzie' was not real developed and Henry attacked the thing with such a unique style instead of falling back on the cliches," Howard says generously.

"He really went for a fresh approach to the tough guy with the heart of gold. The thing just developed and caught on with the public--a real phenomenon. You don't see that often. It's very interesting to be associated with it."

BUT DIDN'T Howard feel even a twinge of jealousy at being pushed aside, playing second banana to a teeny-boppers' heartthrob?

"Well, people always ask that and the answer is no," he says, fiddling with his shoelace. "The episodes aren't all about Richie now, but Richie sure has a lot to do with what happens and I've got my hands full. Got plenty to do."

The facial expression, the choice of words smack of Opie, the cute-as-a-button little boy Howard played for eight years on "The Andy Griffith Show." It was the role that established Howard's acting career, although he previously had done two dozen guest shots on such television shows as "Dobie Gillis," "The Twilight Zone" and "Dennis the Menace."

After the Griffith show, Howard made two films, "The Music Man" and "The Courtship of Eddie's Father." He became an adept player of the gawky adolescent, starring in the film "American Graffiti" and then "Happy Days," which grew out of an episode of "Love American Style."

The son of actors, Jean and Rance, Howard has been acting since he was 4, although he made his debut at 2 with his parents in a Baltimore stage production of "The Seven Year Itch."

But he never felt pushed into show business. "I was always given the choice of whether or not I wanted to work ... It was always something I liked doing, something the grownups liked, and I did well.

"My parents were real careful to avoid some of the crummy stuff, and the pressure. There was no pressure."

RON HOWARD

While "Happy Days" has settled into a comfortable niche, Howard hasn't rested on his laurels. Playing Richie has become routine, so in his spare time Howard has pursued his dream- directing movies.

He was in Chicago recently to promote "Grand Theft Auto," his directing debut. He also stars in the film, which he wrote with his father.

The movie involves two young lovers who decide to elope because the girl's father, a political ambitious business tycoon, is against her marriage to a middle-class nobody, played by Howard.

The couple streaks across the desert to Las Vegas with the police, family and the girl's family-sponsored fiance in hot pursuit. It ends with a demolition derby.

The executive producer of "Grand Theft Auto" was Roger Corman, the movie mogul who has helped such other fledgling directors as Francis Ford Coppola, Martin Scorsese and Peter Bogdanovich.

Howard has been interested in directing since he was 15.

Corman, he says, "really liked the outline and the script—he didn't change much of it at all. He put it right on the production board and we made it."

Although he has no immediate plans to forsake acting, Howard would like to develop his own production company.

THE LAW SAYS:

ALL FICTITIOUS NAME STATEMENTS FILED IN 1972 MUST BE REFILED IN 1977

AND ALSO: those with changes must be republished at time of refiling

HERE IS THE LAW: —

Business and Professions Code

Sec. 17917

(c) Where a new statement is required because the prior statement has expired under subdivision (a) of Section 17920, the new statement need not be published unless there has been a change in the information required in the expired statement.

Sec. 17920

(a) Unless the statement expires earlier under subdivision (b) or (c), a fictitious business name statement expires at the end of five years from December 31 of the year in which it was filed in the office of the county clerk.

Sec. 17917

(b) Subject to the requirements of subdivision (c), the newspaper selected for the publication of the statement should be one that circulates in the area where the business is to be conducted.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE FIVE-YEAR FICTITIOUS NAME LAW

1. QUESTION: When do new requirements in the Fictitious Name Law go into effect?

ANSWER: Beginning January 1, 1976, all statements filed during 1972 must be refiled with the County Clerk.

2. QUESTION: Who must file the required new statement of doing business under a fictitious name?

ANSWER: All individuals, partnerships, corporations and associations which operate under names not their own must refile.

3. QUESTION: Is there a statutory fee for refiling?

ANSWER: Yes, by law the County Clerk will charge [illegible]

4. QUESTION: Must statements be published when refiled?

ANSWER: Yes, if there has been any change in the statement as originally filed in 1972.

5. QUESTION: What is a Fictitious Firm Name?

ANSWER: One that does not include the surname of the operator or one that implies the ownership participation of others, such as "Brothers", "Sons", "Associates", "Company", or if a corporation owner, its name different from that registered in the Articles of Incorporation.

6. QUESTION: What is the purpose of the fictitious name procedure?

ANSWER: The requirements have been in effect in California since 1872 and are designed to protect the consumer by enabling identity of persons with whom transactions take place.

7. QUESTION: Must all firms presently doing business under fictitious names file new statements?

ANSWER: Yes, all must file under new code sections of the Business and Professions Code [illegible] and also Sections [illegible] of the Business and Professions Code.

8. QUESTION: Is it true that a change in the residence address of an individual or general partner doing business under a fictitious name excuses the party at the five year refiling interval from meeting the publication provision?

ANSWER: The requirements for publication with a change in the information is in Section 17917 of the Business and Professions Code. A change in residential address as well as business address is a change in information and will therefore require republication upon renewal at the end of any five year renewal period.

9. QUESTION: Must statements filed in 1972 be refiled in 1977, those filed in 1973 in 1978, and so on?

ANSWER: Yes, statements must be refiled every five years.

10. QUESTION: What is the penalty for failure to file and publish?

ANSWER: Evidence of proof of priority is established in the event of competitors' later use of the same name. The penalty would be inability to entertain a court action until the law has been complied with. In addition, most banks demand evidence of filing and publication prior to opening an account under a fictitious name.

11. QUESTION: Where are the forms to be obtained for filing and publication?

ANSWER: Free forms are available at this newspaper office or at any office of the County Clerk.

12. QUESTION: After January 1, 1976, will all new filings require publication?

ANSWER: Yes.

13. QUESTION: What is the process for publishing?

ANSWER: Publication must be made once a week for four weeks in a qualified newspaper circulating in the area of the affected business. Publication must be commenced within 30 days after filing. And proof of publication must be filed with the County Clerk within 30 days after completion of publication.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

THE MORMON ARCHAEOLOGICAL ARGUMENT

The argument, briefly put, is that the science of archaeology has "proven" the accuracy of the Book of Mormon. A more extended form of the argument would be that (1) the Book of Mormon claims to be a history of ancient people inhabiting Central America until 421 A.D.; (2) No one in 1830 (when the Book of Mormon was published) had any idea of the existence of the great cities and ancient civilizations which once inhabited Central America; (3) Archaeologists and other researchers after 1830 confirmed that such ancient civilizations and cities, similar to those described in the Book of Mormon did exist; (4) Therefore, this shows that the Book of Mormon is accurate and must have been translated by the power of God as Joseph Smith claims.

In my judgement, this is one of the most formidable arguments which LDS teachers present. Formidable, I say, not because it is unanswerable, but because of the lack of information available to the average person on Central American archaeology.

The truth of the matter is, that in 1830 Joseph Smith and others could have had access to no less than seventeen volumes that provided information about the magnificent ruins in Central America before 1830. History of Mexico, (1787); A Star in the West, (1816); History of America (1725) Archaeologia Americana, (1820); The Wonders of Nature and Providence, by Josiah Priest, (1824); just to name a few. Incidently, the last book mentioned was copyrighted June, 1824 in the office of R. R. Lansing — the same office in which the Book of Mormon was copyrighted!

In a statement of Dr. Ross T. Christensen, archaeologist and professor at B.Y.U. In the first place, the statement that the Book of Mormon has already been proven by archaeology is misleading . . . Latter-day Saints who have had any formal training in archaeology are exceeding few . . . As for the notion that the Book of Mormon has already been proved by archaeology, I must say with Shakespeare, 'Lay not that flattering unction to your soul." (The University Archaeological Society Miscellaneous Papers, No. 19, Dec. 1960, pp. 8 and 9). Other Mormon authors have made similar statements, of which we are in possession.

New Mouseketeers

Show delights another generation

—Chicago Tribune

It happens at different times throughout the country, but the pattern is the same.

Outdoor play is interrupted, homework is abandoned, TVs click on, and millions of mostly preteen enthusiasts gather around their sets.

The kids' mothers don't even mind; many of them were hooked by the same Pied Piper of the tube in the late '50s. His name is Mickey Mouse, and his new club has drawn a cult of fans rivaling that of those who adored Annette, Karen, Cubby, Darlene, Tim and Bobby.

Fourteen million American youngsters have grown up with the Mickey Mouse Club since its beginning in 1955 and syndication seven years later. But is it the same? Does the old magic still hold for nostalgia buffs and new viewers alike?

National reaction to the updated revival, which first aired in January, has been mixed. (The program airs weekdays at 5 p.m. on Channel 11 in Los Angeles.)

Basically the format of the new show parallels that of its predecessor. A Mouseketeer announces, "It's time for Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse Club," while Mickey and other Disney characters parade across the screen to the music of the march — the theme, "Who's the leader of the club that's made for you and me? M-I-C-K-E-Y M-O-U-S-E!" Same tune, same lyrics, but slightly jazzed up. Donald Duck clangs the cymbals as he did 21 years ago.

THE 12 new Mouseketeers sing and dance a little. Each day of the week there's a different theme: Who, What, Why, Where, When and How; Let's Go; Surprise; Discovery; Showtime. Either a classic cartoon or a new adventure serial is featured.

Superstars are noticeably absent.

When 10-year-old Patrice Watkins and neighborhood friends gathered in the living room of her Chicago home recently, she was the only one who could identify all the Mousketeers by name. Names don't seem important, but talent does.

"I don't like her, she can't dance," piped up one viewer. "She sings too much," complained another. And when one Mousketeer performed an original composition while playing the piano, George Watkins, 9, frowned, shook his head, and groused: "I hope she doesn't make any more songs. It doesn't sound so good."

At least one of the nine was shrieking every minute, saying things like, "This is the part I like." And some segments, such as the cartoons, clearly were universal favorites. One clue: The circle of little bodies lying on the floor, feet sticking up, arms propping heads, got smaller, closer to the set.

It's encouraging to some children's TV watchdog groups such as Action for Children's Television (ACT) that the animated portions are so popular.

"It's heartening that kids have a sense of beauty of what a cartoon can be," said Debbie First, executive director. "It's certainly refreshing to be able to look at animation that's not limited to what children see on Saturday mornings."

Some believe the original series showed its age in more ways than the out dated hairdos and clothes.

"I sat through all the old Mickey Mouse Clubs for four years straight," said Missey Earnest, who now handles publicity for the new program in Burbank, Calif. "When I saw the syndicated show I couldn't believe it. How I could have sat through the first is incredible."

Ms. Earnest said when the old show was syndicated the second time response was good, but it lasted only about six months. There appeared to be a demand for something more contemporary. Today, while coloring books, records and new Mousketeer products are beginning to crop up, Ms. Earnest said, enthusiasm continues to climb.

FAN mail totals more than 1,000 pieces a week, she said, and though there definitely are favorite Mousketeers, nobody will say who. "The kids in the show aren't supposed to know. When Annette became popular the others felt bad. It was a mistake."

Criticism of the new show is fairly consistent: Old serials like "Spin & Marty" and the "Hardy Boys" are missed. Few like the new upbeat tempo to the theme song. Though the new Mousketeers are ethnically and racially balanced, some attack the balance as sheer tokenism and charge that some racist and sexist stereotypes still exist.

ANNETTE FUNICELLO, one of the original Mouseketeers, visits the "New Mickey Mouse Club" performers. The show airs weekdays at 5 p.m. on Ch. 11.

We are Heart specialists

Because we know that nothing pleases the heart like fresh flowers or a flowering plant. Their color, fragrance, beauty and life are just what the doctor ordered. Just call or stop by. We'll prescribe something she'll love with all her heart.

Flowers and plants. They're a natural for your sweetheart.

TODAY'S HOME...
IS TOMORROW'S INVESTMENT

IN a home of your own, the money you spend for housing does double duty. It buys security as well as shelter.

Every day your equity grows, your capital appreciates and your tax credits accrue. But — you don't benefit till you buy.

Talk to a REALTOR about the most profitable housing package for you. He or she will help you find the right property, the right price, the right payment program. Only REALTORS belong to the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS and subscribe to its strict Code of Ethics. They're real estate professionals . . . people you can count on for sound advice and fair treatment.

Like many other good things in life, security can start at home. Talk to a REALTOR today about yours.

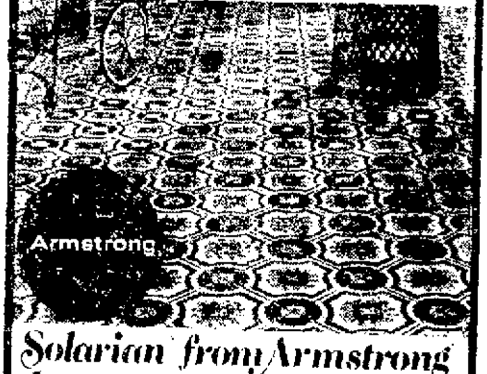
Sears Bros Armstrong
Presents. Solarian®



Solarian from Armstrong the sunny floor that shines without waxing

Solarian's high shine comes from its Mirabond* wear surface, a special formulation that will retain its gloss — without waxing — far longer than any ordinary vinyl floor.
It's also easier to keep clean. Spills, tracked-in dirt — even black heel marks — come up easily.

Approx. $198.00 for a 9x12 room

SUBARU

YOU DON'T PUMP A LOT OF MONEY INTO A SUBARU
37 mpg Hwy / 22 mpg City
Our SEEC-T engine doesn't need a catalytic converter. SUBARU runs on regular gas ... not the more expensive unleaded. Your actual mileage may vary because of the way you drive, condition of your car and whatever optional equipment you may have. It will be a long time before your wallet goes from full to empty with the mileage Subaru gives.

RE-SKIN IT!

SAVE UP TO 60%

Yes, we will re-skin all or part of your kitchen and make it look like new. All existing surfaces are skinned with unfinished ash or birch permanent veneer and matched with your choice of doors to any color you wish. We will make and install all new drawers and add any new convenient features. The savings could be worthwhile enough to remodel a bathroom or add a small room (which we also do).

Why have expensive imitation plastic looking wood when you can have the real natural looking thing. If you don't care to skin it we will tear it out and remodel it completely.

"Before you begin it, get our price to skin it"

Chacun à son gout.

There's no need to settle for second best. If you disagree on which shows to watch, rent a second set. A portable from Rentacolor.
We can put a 12" or 19" portable in your home for as little as $12.95 a month, and quell the Saturday Night Fights. Or the main event Wednesday. Or whatever.

Put a little color in your life, and get free repair by our company trained technicians. There's never a charge for service.

'Roots' performer signed for 'Dan'l'

Ji-Tu Cumbuka, who starred as "The Wrestler" in "Roots," has been signed by executive producer Ernie Frankel to a continuing starring role in "Dan'l," 20th Century-Fox TV drama which premieres this fall as a one-hour series over CBS-TV.

Cumbuka portrays a slave working to buy his freedom who assists, and is aided, by Daniel Boone (Rick Moses), in the action-adventure.

ARCHIE, WHAT HAPPENED TO MY NEWSPAPER?
ER-- IT FELL INTO THE SWIMMING POOL!
WELL, THEN, WHERE'S THE RADIO?
ER-- THAT FELL IN, TOO!
YOU SEE, I WAS GLUEING THE KNOB I BROKE OFF AND THE RADIO GOT STUCK TO THE PAPER AND--- JUGHEAD, GIVE ME A HAND, WILL YOU, PLEASE?
HOW DID YOU KNOW I HAVE IT?
HAVE WHAT?
THIS HAND!
I ACCIDENTALLY BROKE IT OFF THAT STATUE!
GIVE ME STRENGTH!
WHAT'S WRONG, DADDY?
I'VE BEEN TRYING TO STAY CALM TO KEEP MY ULCER FROM ACTING UP---
BUT THOSE FRIENDS OF YOURS ARE DRIVING ME UP THE WALL!
WHY DON'T YOU TRY A PRIMAL SCREAM?
A PRIMAL WHAT?
SCREAM, DADDY! LET OUT A LOUD BLOODCURDLING SCREAM AND IT'LL RELIEVE ALL YOUR TENSION!
EEEEEEYAHH!!
HE MUST HAVE FOUND THE SPOT WHERE WE DROVE THROUGH HIS ROSE BUSHES!

MARK TRAIL
HOOVED ANIMALS HAVING A FOUR-COMPARTMENT STOMACH FOR STORING UNCHEWED VEGETATION ARE KNOWN AS RUMINANTS
THE FOOD IS RETURNED TO THE MOUTH FOR THOROUGH CHEWING CUD-CHEWING IS NOT PECULIAR TO THE MILK COW, BUT IS ALSO PRACTICED BY DOMESTICATED AND WILD CATTLE, SHEEP, GOATS AND DEER
WITH ENEMIES EVER PRESENT, THESE WARY CREATURES EAT RAPIDLY, SWALLOWING THEIR FOOD WHOLE!
THEN, IN THE SAFETY OF A SECLUDED SPOT, THEY BRING UP "CUDS" TO BE THOROUGHLY CHEWED AND SWALLOWED A SECOND TIME
SO THE "MARKET BASKET" STOMACH IS A SAFETY DEVICE...
PERMITTING THE CUD-CHEWER TO FLEE DANGER AND STILL NOT MISS A MEAL!

Ohlmeyer to produce TV awards program

Don Ohlmeyer will produce NBC-TV's presentation of the first Hollywood Academy of Television Arts and Sciences awards ceremonies Sunday, Sept. 11, it was announced by Robert T. Howard, president of the NBC Television Network.

The ceremonies will emanate from the Pasadena Convention Center.

Ohlmeyer joined NBC Sports earlier this year to serve as executive producer of the 1980 Moscow Olympics coverage and as a program packager for the NBC Television Network.

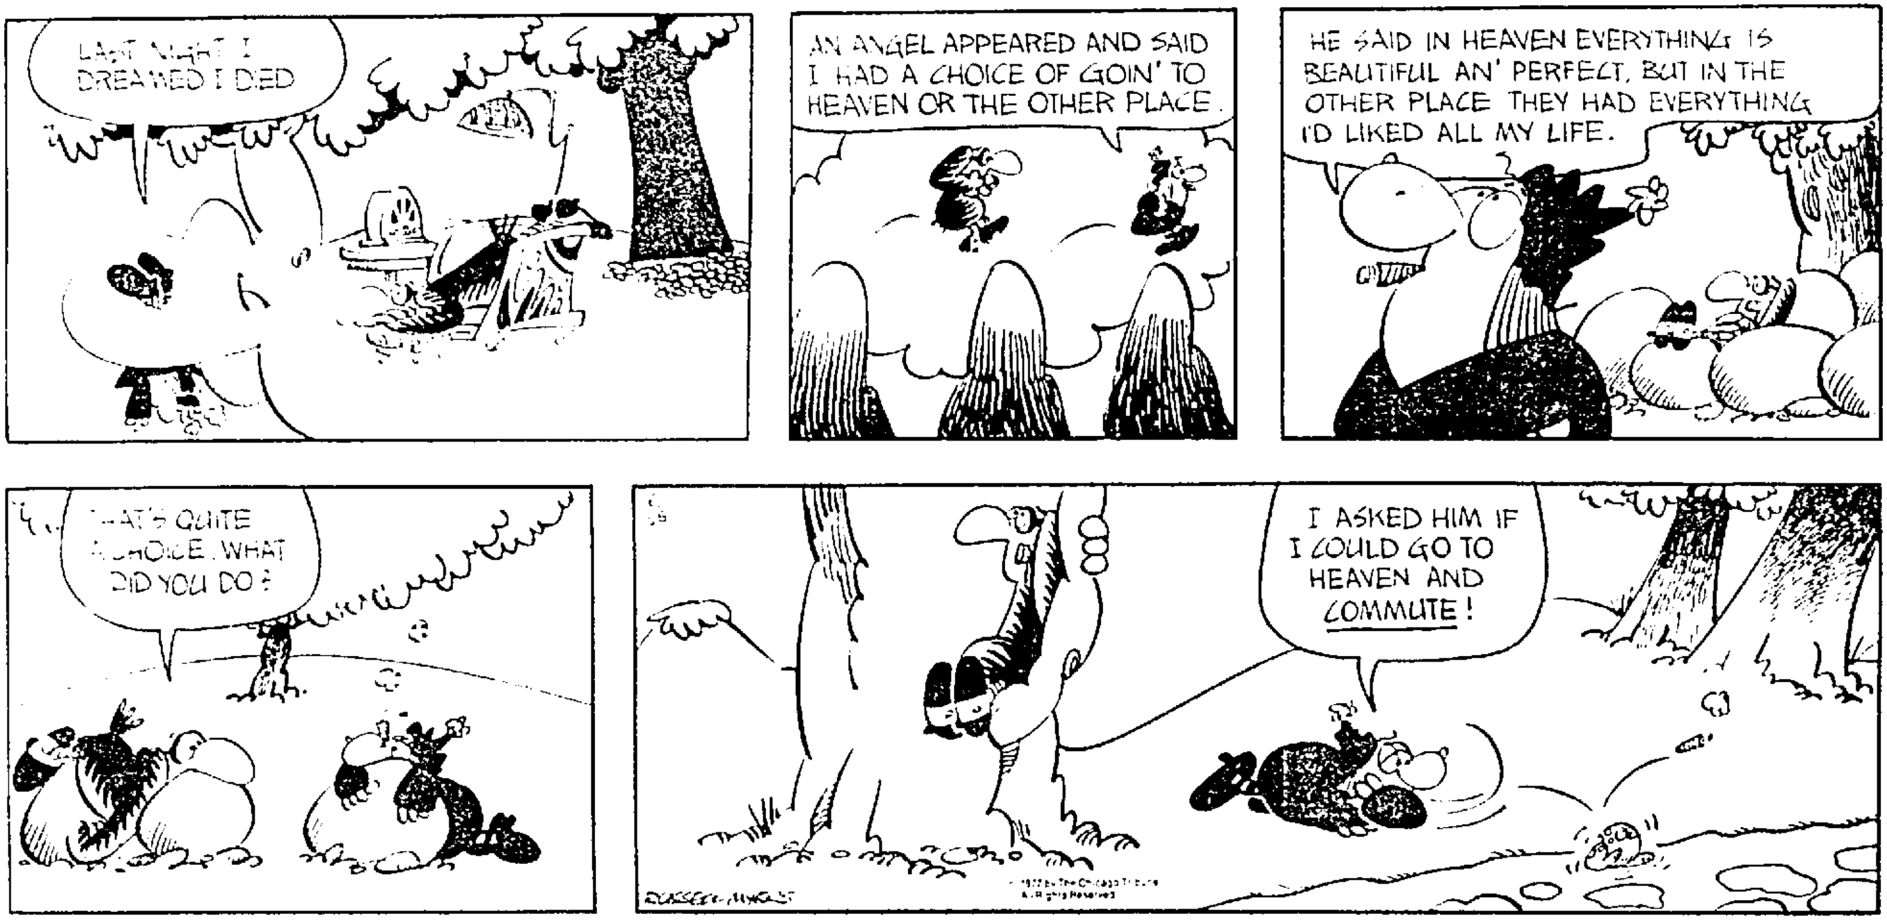
BROOM-HILDA

by Russell Myers



LAST NIGHT I DREAMED I DIED
AN ANGEL APPEARED AND SAID I HAD A CHOICE OF GOIN' TO HEAVEN OR THE OTHER PLACE.
HE SAID IN HEAVEN EVERYTHING IS BEAUTIFUL AN' PERFECT, BUT IN THE OTHER PLACE THEY HAD EVERYTHING I'D LIKED ALL MY LIFE.
THAT'S QUITE A CHOICE. WHAT DID YOU DO?
I ASKED HIM IF I COULD GO TO HEAVEN AND COMMUTE!

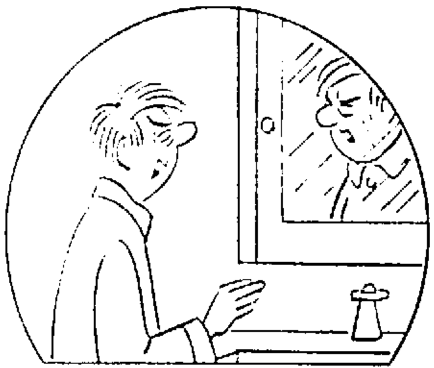
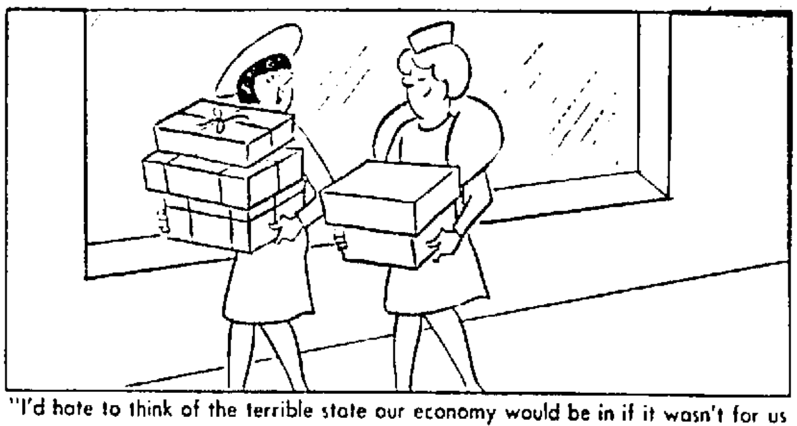
OFF THE RECORD

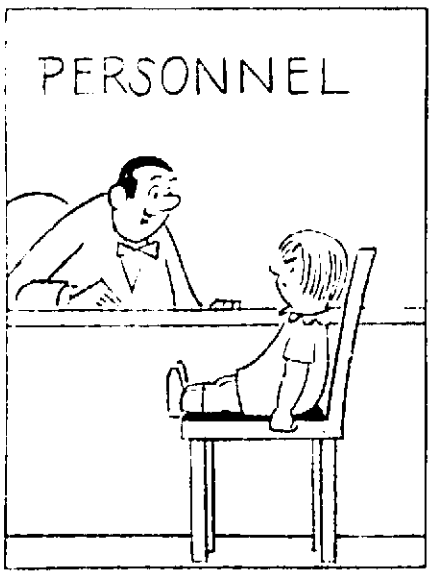
by ED REED



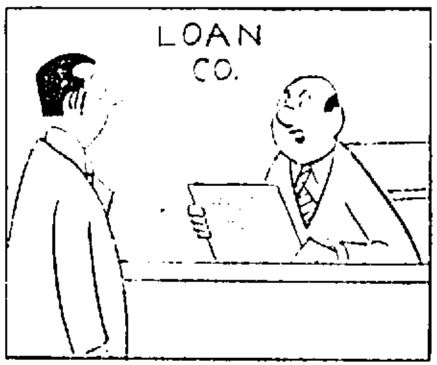
"The way I feel I wasn't too sure I'd see you here this morning."



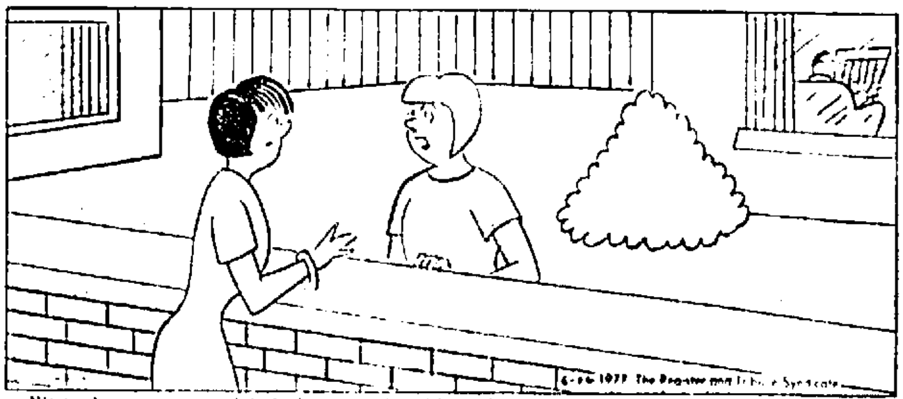
"I'd hate to think of the terrible state our economy would be in if it wasn't for us wives."



"Ms. Mary Jane, you must understand we are not turning you down just because you're female."



"Sorry, no raise for you, Joe — would you like to borrow $50 a month?"



6-26 1977 The Register and Tribune Syndicate

"It took me quite a while before I realized his take-home pay wasn't necessarily his bring home pay."

THE MORE SERUM I DRINK-- THE DEADLIER MY RATTLER'S VENOM!
HEY YOU'RE BEGINNING TO SOUND LIKE A LATE SHOW REJECT!
I HATE TO DO THIS, CURLY-- THWPP!
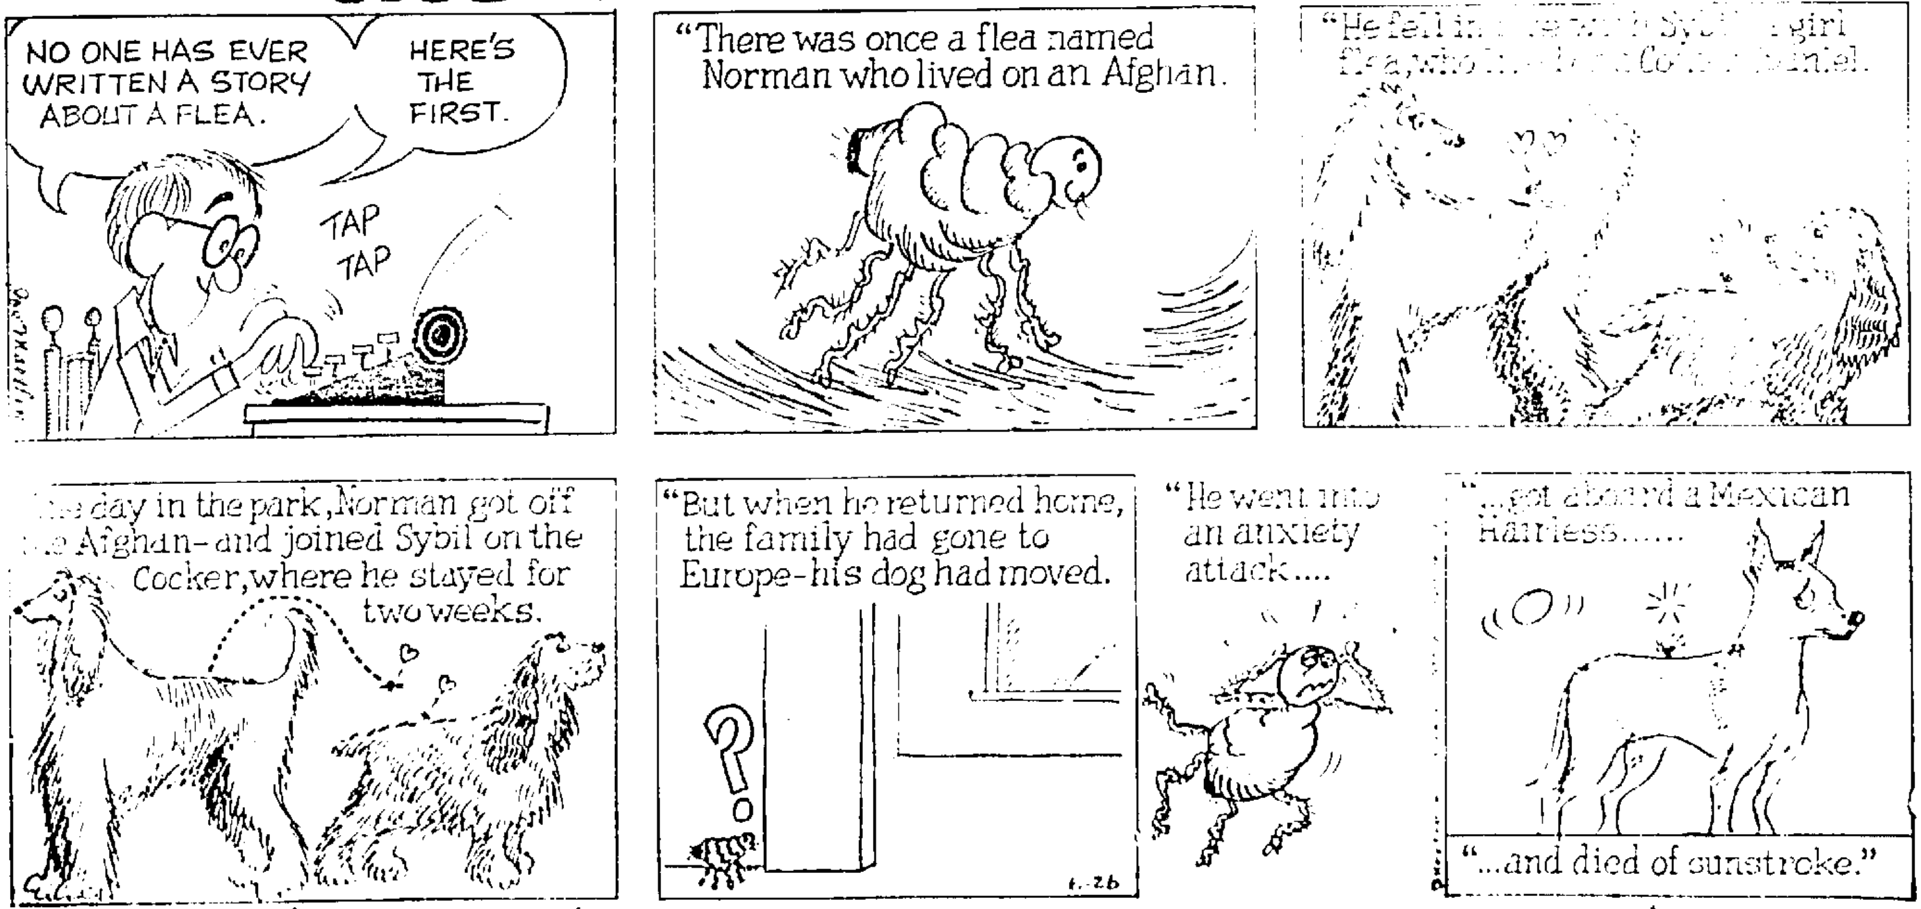
STAN LEE JOHN ROMITA 6-26
WITHOUT THE SERUM, I CAN'T REMAIN AS I AM!
BUT MY POWER WILL LAST LONG ENOUGH FOR ME TO CRUSH YOU LIKE A FLEA!
THE WORD IS SPIDER, CHARLIE!
AND THIS'LL STOP YOU FROM TALKING ME TO DEATH!
UMPFF! IT'S LIKE BUTTING A STONE WALL!
FOOL! YOU FORGOT MY SNAKELIKE STRENGTH!
NEXT THE FINAL DEATH RATTLE!

INSIDE WOODY ALLEN



NO ONE HAS EVER WRITTEN A STORY ABOUT A FLEA.
HERE'S THE FIRST.
TAP TAP
"There was once a flea named Norman who lived on an Afghan.
"He fell in love with Sybil, a girl flea, who lived on a Cocker Spaniel.
"One day in the park, Norman got off the Afghan- and joined Sybil on the Cocker, where he stayed for two weeks.
"But when he returned home, the family had gone to Europe-his dog had moved.
6-26
"He went into an anxiety attack....
"...got aboard a Mexican Hairless......
"...and died of sunstroke."

Q. Who owns the most land in and around Plains, Ga., hometown of President Jimmy Carter?—M.G., Albany, Ga.
A. Most probably Billy Carter, the President's younger brother, who owns about 1800 acres. Next largest owner, it is estimated, is President Carter, followed by William O. Cochran. When Jimmy Carter was running for President, his brother Billy, according to one reliable source, "bought up every piece of property in Plains that could be bought. He particularly bought up all the land near Jimmy's house so that nobody could build up to Jimmy. Billy did this without Jimmy even knowing about it. He did it to protect Jimmy, and I doubt if Billy will ever sell that land . . . certainly not for years to come."

MARTHE KELLER AND AL PACINO

Q. Al Pacino and Marthe Keller—any chance of these two getting married, or is it just a temporary living arrangement?—K.L., Bronxville, N.Y.
A. They fell in love while filming "Bobby Deerfield" in Switzerland. They are the loving but not the marrying kind. But one can never tell about show-biz romances.

Q. In the David Frost interview with Richard Nixon, Nixon claimed that he personally fired Sherman Adams, who was President Eisenhower's chief of staff. That's not true. It was Meade Alcorn, Republican national chairman in 1958, who asked Adams to resign. Why did Nixon tell a lie?—B. F., Austin, Tex.
A. The most charitable explanation is that time has dulled the accuracy of Nixon's recollections. The most uncharitable explanation is that Nixon is no respecter of the truth.

Q. Who said, "Freedom of the press belongs to the man who owns one"?—Mal Vance, Omaha, Neb.
A. The quote is from the late A. J. Liebling, a journalist who wrote for The New Yorker magazine and the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain.

Q. Isn't Gerald Ford being sued left and right now that he's no longer President?—P.O., Riverside, Cal.
A. One gentleman is threatening suit because he was struck by a golf ball hit by Ford. Another gentleman is threatening or by now has filed suit concerning the construction of the Ford home in Rancho Mirage, Cal. But two lawsuits aren't all that many.

Q. Ramsay MacDonald, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, Ernest Bevin and Keir Hardie, all founders of the British Labour party—which, in my opinion, is ruining that once great country—were all these Labour party leaders illegitimate? -Brown Davidson, Cambridge, Mass.
A. James Ramsay MacDonald, Ernest Bevin and Keir Hardie, founding fathers of the Labour party, were all illegitimate. MacDonald was the son of Anne Ramsay, a courageous and plucky domestic, and John MacDonald, a plowman.

Q. I have heard it said of actor Warren Beatty that he is hung up on older women, that he will not date a woman unless she is on Social Security, and that one of the best-kept Hollywood secrets in years has been his long-term love affair with Mae West. How much of this is on the level?—Greta Jones, Oakland, Cal.
A. None of it except that Beatty is "hung up" on women—but not necessarily older women.

Q. Now that Gov. George Wallace of Alabama has declared his intention to run for the U.S. Senate, is there any chance that his wife Cornelia will leave him? -Z.Z., Mobile, Ala.
A. Practically none, and if Wallace takes over John Sparkman's Senate seat, his wife will cut a pretty and colorful figure in Washington.

GOV. GEORGE WALLACE AND WIFE CORNELIA

KRIS KRISTOFFERSON AND WIFE RITA COOLIDGE

Q. Kris Kristofferson, the actor who co-starred with Barbra Streisand in "A Star Is Born," is married to a beauty named Rita Coolidge. Someone said she suffered a missed abortion. Is that true? And if it is, what is a missed abortion?—M.L. Knox, Philadelphia.
A. It is true that Kristofferson's wife recently suffered a missed abortion. Such an abortion occurs when the fetus dies but is retained in the uterine cavity until its removal. Rita Coolidge was hospitalized in Santa Monica, Cal., for such an emergency, has since made a complete recovery.

Q. Why is it that so many U.S. Senators—like Alan Cranston of California, John Tower of Texas, Herman Talmadge of Georgia, Donald Riegle Jr. of Michigan, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Edward Brooke of Massachusetts—can't stay married to their wives? I would also like to know what it cost Senator Brooke to divorce his wife Remigia and if this frees him to wed Barbara Walters?—M.F., Roxbury, Mass.
A. Sharing a husband with the U.S. Senate is one of the most perilous risks undertaken by a wife. She must stifle her own individuality, agree at least in public with almost everything her husband does and says. She must sacrifice herself and frequently her children for his career.

In the case of Sen. Edward Brooke and his wife of 30 years, Remigia, the divorce involved the following settlement: Mrs. Brooke will receive ownership of the couple's house and five acres of land on St. Martin's Island in the Caribbean. She will also receive $18,000 a year in alimony and ownership of the Brooke house in Newton, Mass., on which she will assume an $18,000 mortgage.

Senator Brooke is free to marry any woman of his choice, but there is no romance at this time between him and TV personality Barbara Walters.

Ray Zook has arranged and traveled on 800 Presidential press trips to 80 countries. After 20 years of an exacting but "fascinating" job, he is retiring at age 50 and plans a trip around the world with his wife Doris.

Goodbye, Mr. Zook!

by Lloyd Shearer

WASHINGTON, D.C.

After 20 years of making travel arrangements for the White House press and press staffs, Ray Zook, the ever-smiling baldy, has had it.

Come his 50th birthday on July 1, Zook, the White House correspondents' favorite, is stepping down as chief of the White House Telegraph and Transportation Office.

"I started out during the Truman Administration," he says, "and since then I've traveled on some 800 Presidential press trips, chalked up some 2 million miles and put down in some 80 different countries. But all I've ever seen of them," he adds ruefully, "are airports and hotels."

After six months of retiring and relaxing in Fairfax, Va., Zook plans to take a leisurely trip around the world. "I want to show my wife Doris all the cities I've put down in," he says. "And I'd really like to see them myself. The same thing holds true for this country. Over the years I've been in all the states, all the major cities—but again, just the airports and hotels, getting the press in and getting the press out."

Zook describes his 25-year career in the federal government as "fascinating and memorable, and I'd recommend it to any young fellow." But the truth is he's been away from home 120 to 130 days a year, worked 18 to 20 hours a day week after week—and developed arthritis in his neck, shoulders and hips. He's simply tuckered out.

What Zook, his longtime assistant Bob Manning, 44, and their all-male staff of seven do is this: They handle all the incoming and outgoing commercial White House telegrams (every staff member is a crack teletype operator); when not busy with telegrams, they make plane, hotel, bus, baggage and complete transportation arrangements for the White House press staff and all the members of the press who are covering the President on any of his trips, both domestic and foreign.

Ray, a favorite of the press corps, with assistant Bob Manning, who succeeds him as chief of the White House Telegraph and Transportation Office.

This is not easy. On Carter's first overseas junket to England a few weeks ago, Zook had to find a hotel in London with 140 vacancies and a ballroom large enough to be converted into a press center. He came up with the Churchill, where many of the journalists and TV men griped because they were allegedly charged $1.25 for a cup of coffee.

Ten years ago, when Lyndon Johnson was President and decided upon a round-the-world trip to the South Pacific—with stops in Australia, New Zealand, Vietnam, Thailand and back to Washington via Italy—Zook remembers, "I was one of the advance men along with Bill Moyers. When we got to Wellington, New Zealand, we learned there would be no hotel space for the press or staff.

"In desperation we negotiated to rent an overnight ferry that formerly made the run to North Island. When the main ship came back through there, the press and the press staff and the Secret Service agents boarded our ferry. It began to list to starboard and was quickly dubbed the 'Tiltin' Hilton.' We stayed aboard one night and then fortunately left. I say 'fortunately' because, about a week later, the ferry sank.

The world in 4 days

"That was some trip! We went around the world in four days and spent one night in bed."

Another trip highlight Zook finds amusing in retrospect occurred in 1969, "when we were going to the Vatican with Nixon.

"I had done the advance work in Rome," Zook recalls, "working closely with the fellows in the U.S. Embassy. I explained to one of them that we planned to take a pool bus [a small number of press and TV journalists representing the whole group] through a rear entrance to the Vatican. I asked him if he was sure this bus could make it through the narrow archways leading into the Vatican. He assured me there was no problem, said he'd even gone down and measured the width of one himself.

"And, of course, he was right, because the bus negotiated the first archway very well. But there were six more archways ahead of us before we could reach our destination. By the time we got to the fifth, the bus wouldn't pass through· each of the archways was successively narrower. So we all got out and walked the rest of the way."

The press secretaries

A pleasant and naturally polite man originally from Belleville, Pa., Ray Zook says he has found most of the White House press secretaries easy to work with. He describes Jim Hagerty of the Eisenhower Administration as "simply great"; Pierre Salinger of the Kennedy Administration as "a heck of a good guy, funny, considerate, we're still good friends and see each other every time we're in Europe or he gets over here." Zook also has kind words for LBJ press secretaries George Reedy, Bill Moyers and George Christian. He will say nothing about his relationship with Ron Ziegler, the Nixon White House press secretary. "But I got along just fine with Ron Nessen, who served President Ford, and I think Jody Powell of this Administration is going to be one of the best press secretaries any President has had."

Zook and his successor, Bob Manning, do not make travel arrangements for any U.S. President. Such arrangements are taken care of by the military office in the White House. The military men are charged with the responsibility of seeing that the President has immediate access to the little black box which controls the nuclear warfare destiny of the nation.

Secret Service jobs

The Secret Service, also separated from the Zook-Manning domain, is charged with protecting the President personally and is therefore in charge of transporting his limousines overseas. When a White House limousine is flown to Europe or some other continent, Secret Service agents stay with it to prevent its being bugged by foreign intelligence agents. When President Nixon and his ubiquitous Secretary of State Henry Kissinger conferred with each other in Moscow in 1974, they would do so not in the Kremlin—which they were sure was bugged—but in a U.S. Presidential limousine, which they were relatively sure was not.

For overseas trips the White House T&T Office usually charters two planes, one from Pan Am, the other from TWA. They are 707's, and each seats 90 members of the press and staff, all traveling first class. Pan Am and TWA make it a point to staff these charters with attractive hostesses and the most experienced pilots, and generally their service leaves nothing to be desired. Zook has also chartered a Northwest Airlines jet for a White House press trip to China.

The chartering hassle

On domestic flights his office tries to charter a plane from the airline which ordinarily services the city or territory the President is covering. "If that doesn't work," he explains, "we go from one airline to another until we find an available plane. Sometimes I'll call seven or eight airlines and find only one with a plane and crew available for a particular day. The airlines seem to be cutting down on aircraft—they don't have as many extra crews around as they used to. It's become very difficult, especially if I want to charter a 727. They're almost impossible to get. The airlines have scheduled them so completely into their systems that practically none are available for charter."

How much does it cost to charter a plane for the newspersons and White House press staff? And who pays for it?

At Fairfax, Va., home with his wife and beagle. "We've had precious few vacations together," Ray says. The couple intend to make up for lost time.

According to Zook, "There is no set cost. We add up all the transportation expenses and divide the sum by the number of people along. The news media pay for the White House press staff, so a trip costs a journalist or TV newsperson about 25 percent more than a first class ticket would cost."

The theory is that the White House press staff goes along on these trips not to service the White House but to service the newspersons. The media, however, have no say in the choice of accompanying White House press staff. That is the prerogative of the White House press secretary.

Some journalists who cover the White House on an irregular basis prefer to make their own travel arrangements for commercial flights—usually at a cheaper rate.

In the 20 years Ray Zook has been working the White House T&T Office, six as chief, "I've seen the TV people outnumbering the print journalists four to one, he says. "On a trip to Los Angeles last month, we had about 15 print journalists and 70 TV journalists. The trend is to more and more TV people. I'm told CBS-TV sent 32 staffers over to England to cover the President in Newcastle and London a few weeks ago."

London hotel mix-up

In reference to that particular economics summit trip, a brouhaha developed involving Claridge's Hotel, one of the most fashionable and expensive in London's Mayfair district. Both Ray Zook and Bob Manning are deeply grateful that they were not embroiled in the somewhat sticky, widely publicized embarrassment.

What happened was that the U.S. Embassy in London, when advised of Carter's May trip, immediately reserved at least 50 rooms in Claridge's for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Secretary of the Treasury Michael Blumenthal, Presidential Assistant Hamilton Jordan, Press Secretary Jody Powell and other top Carter men.

Claridge's has long been a favorite hotel for kings, tycoons, sheiks, U.S. presidents and secretaries of state. The U.S. Embassy people felt that Carter would not object to his staff staying there though he himself was scheduled to reside in the much more sumptuous Winfield House, a mansion in Regent's Park donated by Barbara Hutton to the U.S. government for the use of the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

But Jimmy Carter did object. The millionaire image of Claridge's was exactly the type of image he did not want to project or reflect. A few days before he departed Washington for the London summit, he personally ordered that his staff be booked into some less expensive, less prestigious London hotel. The American Embassy came up with the Britannia Hotel in Grosvenor Square.

A suite at Claridge's rents for $135 a day, at the Britannia for $95 a day. A double room at Claridge's goes for $68, at Britannia for $40.

Carter's staff stayed at the Britannia. And now there is talk that Claridge's is thinking of sending the American Embassy a bill for the cost of the last-minute cancellation of some 50 rooms. Either that or in the future insisting upon a large deposit when rooms are booked for U.S. government personnel.

Jody Powell's explanation for the hotel hassle was that President Carter "is as tight as a tick."

Zook is relieved and happy that it was Powell and not he who was called upon to explain the Claridge's affair. "I've had enough hotel headaches of my own," Zook says.

Ray Zook was born of Amish parents and reared religiously. He enlisted in the U.S. Army in December 1949. After basic training he was sent to the Signal Corps at Ft. Monmouth, N.J., where he was trained as a teletype and crypto operator, two skills in which he developed speed and accuracy.

Transferred to the White House communications center, he became a protégé of sorts of the late Dewey Long, then in charge of the White House Telegraph and Transportation Office. "Dewey," he says, "was operating the Truman press plane in those days and would take me along."

Wait for an opening

When Zook's Army enlistment ran out, he married Doris Howke from Oaktown, Va., got a job selling pianos and waited for an opening in Long's office.

It came in December 1958 and Ray went to work, this time as a civilian in the White House with a GS-8 rating and a salary of $8000. When he leaves the White House next week it will be as a GS-15 with a salary of about $37,000 and a pension based on 25 years of federal service.

Zook says each U.S. President he worked for traveled more than his predecessor—Eisenhower more than Truman, Kennedy more than Eisenhower, and so on. And he expects that "eventually Jimmy Carter will out-travel them all because he's the type of man who seems to like to establish personal relationships with other world leaders. And that calls for extensive travel."

When he looks back on his career, Zook says he misses greatly some of the journalistic stars of yesteryear—Merriman Smith of the United Press, Bill Lawrence of The New York Times, Peter Lisagor of The Chicago Daily News, several others who've passed on.

'I'm just tired'

"For a poor country boy," he says, "I've had a fascinating career, a 50-yard-line seat on some of the biggest events in modern times. But now I'm just tired, tired of deadlines and pressures. Being married to me has meant a lot of sacrifices for my wife. We have no children, only a beagle named Martini, and we've had precious few vacations together.

"I remember several years ago when I was going out to do an advance on a Pacific trip Nixon was scheduled to make to meet Marshal Ky or President Thieu, I forget which. Anyway, I'd been away from home about 130 days that year, so I called and said to Doris, 'Why don't you come out to Hawaii and spend a few days here with me?' So she did. But I was working 18 hours a day with the Navy and airport people and hotel managers, and our phone was ringing so constantly that finally she got up and left the room. That's the kind of vacations we've had. Now I'm ready to let somebody make the travel arrangements for us."

West Point cadet Karen McCarthy crawls under barbed wire during basic training. Although women are banned by law from combat, controversy rages over whether they can fight and how they will affect performance of males under fire

Should Women Be Combat Soldiers?

by Phil Stanford

Over the past five years, as a result of pressure from the women's movement and the Pentagon's own need to fill quotas for the all-volunteer army, women have taken an increasingly larger role in this country's armed forces. The number of women in uniform has nearly tripled, going from 45,000 in 1972 to about 120,000 now. At the same time, the number of military jobs open to women has taken a similar jump. Not long ago, women were confined to nursing or clerical duties. Today there are women truck drivers, airplane mechanics and drill sergeants; women are being trained as pilots and they attend the service academies.

There is, however, one important military specialty that is still off limits to women—and that is combat. By law in some cases, and by long-standing policy in others, women are forbidden to serve in any position that might bring them in "direct combat" with an enemy. Whether this is as it should be is the subject of a highly emotional debate that we may be hearing for some time.

Within the military, the debate is particularly heated. On one side are the traditionalists like Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the former Army Chief of Staff. "Maybe you could find one woman in 10,000 who could lead in combat, but she would be a freak," Westmoreland has said. "I don't believe women can carry a pack, live in a foxhole, or go a week without a bath."

He's in minority

On the other side is Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt, former Chief of Naval Operations. "Women," says Zumwalt, "should have the opportunity to have the capability to go into combat. . . . As far as women soldiers are concerned, when I was in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam war, I found that among the most vicious fighters were the Viet Cong women." Zumwalt's views, however, represent a decided minority among military leaders.

As the National Organization for Women sees it, the only question is whether the military has "the right to treat women, regardless of ability, as children who must have their decisions made by others."

To NOW, the only relevant consideration is equal rights. To others, the matter is more complicated. According to a study on "Women and the Military" by Martin Binkin and Shirley J. Bach, to be published next month by the Brookings Institution, there are at least two other vital questions. First, can women fight? And second, how would the presence of women in combat units affect the fighting ability of those units?

As the study points out, neither of these questions has an easy answer.

In a mechanized age, there are still many combat roles that require considerable physical strength. An infantry soldier must carry a backpack that weighs 50 pounds or more; a tank crew member must lift extremely heavy shells and load them into the tank's cannon.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office indicates that women have already experienced problems with physically demanding jobs. Of 97 women assigned to aircraft maintenance, two-thirds reported that they did not have the strength to perform many required tasks, such as changing aircraft tires and brakes and removing batteries and crew seats. In the Marine Corps, most of the women sent to school to be telephone linemen could not climb poles with heavy equipment. Several Army women trained as ammunition storage specialists had to be assigned clerical duties. The supervisors on Navy tugboats indicated that "women cannot physically do much of the work, which includes lifting and handling sandbags that weigh 100 pounds."

Making the grade

Last year, however, the Army ran a test to see if women could pass the standard basic combat training program. Two training battalions, each consisting of two companies of men and two of women, were given the same training program—including tactical exercises, grenade throwing and weapons qualification. The overall performance of the two groups was virtually identical: 87 percent of the men and 85 percent of the women passed. The Army found that "female graduates met the standard in every area except the Physical Readiness Training Program, and that those events can be modified for the women without changing the content of the training or reducing the value of training received."

A factor to be considered is pregnancy. It is doubtful, says the Brookings study, that pregnant women could be expected to perform their duties in combat or at sea. However, concludes the study, "predictions concerning the effects of pregnancy or menstruation on job performance remain largely speculative."

Regardless of whether women are capable of being combat soldiers, many military men feel that putting women into combat units would lower the morale and fighting ability of those units. The problem would be particularly acute, they say, for outfits like airborne infantry divisions, the Rangers or warship crews, whose esprit de corps depends to a great extent on their own machismo image.

Camaraderie in crisis

This is the official Navy view. As former Vice Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Worth Bagley has testified before Congress, many men are attracted to the Navy "because they enjoy being in a job which has been historically associated with fellowship among men in a difficult and dangerous endeavor."

The Army, meanwhile, is completing a series of tests, called MAX WAC, to determine the effect of women serving in combat support units which might be expected to come into direct contact with an enemy on the battlefield. Although the final results are not yet in, an official for the test says, "MAX WAC will show that women can function adequately in support of units without lowering the units' effectiveness."

Observations™

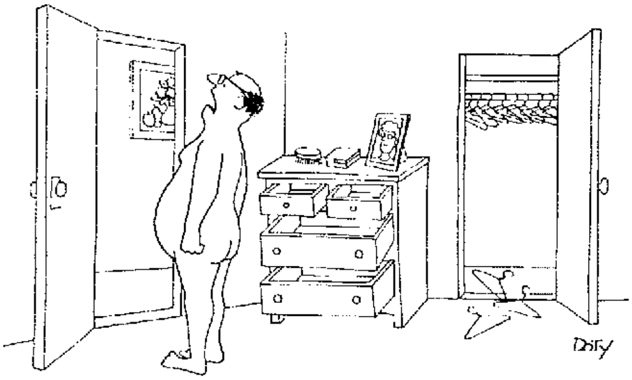
Did you know that 20 million kids haven't been immunized against one or more of the well-known childhood diseases? That's about 40 percent of the children under 15

Of those kids, 19 million are not immunized against polio The number is going up, and could reach 20 million next year—unless parents do something

What all this means is that the chances of serious outbreaks of disease—like polio, measles, German measles, and diphtheria—are going up rapidly

Please, make sure your children get all the shots they should have. Check with your doctor or school health authorities. And ask your neighbors to do the same. You'll be helping all children

We goofed. Remember, a few weeks back, when we compared the 56 words it took to write the Lord's Prayer and the 1,322 for the Declaration of Independence with the government's need to use "26,911 words to issue a regulation on the sale of cabbages"? We thought we had assurance of the regulation's existence, but it turned out we were misled. However, we can say with absolute certainty that there's an 11,400-word federal regulation on California-grown olives, and a 6,900-worder dealing with the peaches of Mesa County, Colorado. So our point—that too much of the national effort is going into long-winded, hard-to-understand regulation—remains valid



"You mean theyve banned everything?"

Your summer plans. They can be helped by a fellow named Howard Simons. He and his family took a 9,500-mile, seven week trip across the U.S. during the summer of '75 and had a chance to contemplate the rich diversity of America. Simons decided that what this country needs is "a universal elixir concocted for mind and spirit." The result, a book of facts about sports and festivals, films and plays, architecture, national parks, bridges, ferries, music, beer, pets, and just about everything else. If you're traveling in the U.S. this summer—or staying home—Simons' List Book (a Fireside Book published by Simon and Schuster) will add to your fun. And, as we've said before, the 1977 edition of the Mobil Travel Guide can enrich your vacation with ratings on hotels, motels, and restaurants, and highlights of what to see. You can get more information about the guide from your Mobil service station, local bookstore, or by writing to Mobil Travel Guide, Box MT, at the address below.

SOLDIERS CONTINUED

In the beginning, says the official, the Army had special rules to protect women in the field. They had to pitch their tents in the center of a company encampment, go to the toilet in pairs, and were not allowed to walk sentry duty. In most cases, these restrictions were found to be unnecessary. "Soldiers out in the field tend to adjust to reality."

The only other test worth noting is the Navy's "Sanctuary" experiment, so named for the USS Sanctuary, a hospital ship to which both men and women were assigned.

They got hot

On one particular cruise, the commanding officer noted, "subtropical temperatures necessitated shifting to tropical uniforms and T-shirts, and many recreation activities were carried out on the weather decks after working hours and during holiday routine. Then, all of a sudden, public display of affection that once was very discreet or nonexistent crept in."

As the commander reported, "This had a demoralizing effect on both men and women and most particularly on the senior petty officers." This problem was solved, he said, by making public displays of affection illegal and subject to punishment under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

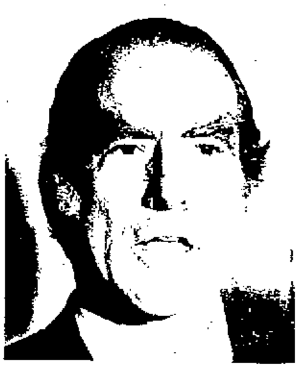
As the Brookings study points out, neither of these experiments tested the performance of women under combat conditions; the results are useful only in a general way. However, there are examples from recent history that should be instructive.

Women sailors pulled their weight during coed cruise on USS Sanctuary. But they also aroused passions. Public displays of affection had to be outlawed

During World War II, more than a million women were drafted into the Russian armed forces, many into combat. Russian women served as fighter pilots, tank crew members, machine gunners, snipers, and in artillery crews. Israeli women fought in the 1948 war for independence—although, contrary to common belief, they no longer fill a combat role. And, of course, there are the Viet Cong women mentioned by Admiral Zumwalt. Each of these examples, says the study, deserves careful study by the Pentagon.

The debate over permitting women to be combat soldiers, says the study, is hardly an idle one. Not only is there the question of equal rights, the Pentagon must also worry about keeping up its force levels. As the baby boom recedes over the next decade, there will be fewer and fewer men eligible for military service. Simple calculations show that the only way to keep this country's forces at their present level of approximately 2 million—short of returning to the draft—is to enlist more women

However, there is a limit on the number of jobs open to women in the military. The study estimates that as things now stand, it would be possible to find places for 400,000 women; any more than that, and it would be necessary to let women be combat soldiers. ℗



Adm. Elmo Zumwalt favors combat for women, says, "The most vicious fighters were Viet Cong women."

Gen. William Westmoreland ridicules the notion and claims women "can't go a week without a bath."

A PERFECT POT ROAST

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Pot roast is usually served with brown gravy, but in our recipe the meat is cooked in a sauce with seasonings that are unusual and blend into a perfect symphony of flavor. It truly lives up to its name—Exotic Pot Roast.

A grapefruit cup makes a good beginning for the dinner. With the pot roast serve fluffy mashed potatoes and a tossed salad. Crisp crackers with any favorite cheese make a fine dessert.

EXOTIC POT ROAST

4 pounds boned and rolled rump or top round of beef
Unseasoned natural meat tenderizer
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, minced
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
½ cup dry red wine
1 square unsweetened chocolate, melted
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon crushed oregano
1 can (1 pound) onions
1 can (1 pound) baby carrots
¼ cup blanched slivered almonds

Treat roast with meat tenderizer as directed. Brown on all sides in hot oil in heavy kettle or Dutch oven. Pour off any excess oil. Add garlic and chopped onion; sprinkle with salt. Stir until onion is lightly browned. Combine tomato sauce, wine, chocolate, chili powder, orange peel, cinnamon, nutmeg and oregano; pour over meat. Cover; simmer until meat is tender, about three hours. Drain onions and carrots; add to sauce in kettle. Cover; simmer until vegetables are heated through.

Place meat in center of platter; surround with vegetables in sauce. Sprinkle with almonds. Makes six to eight servings.

The Lazy Man's Way to Riches

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

But I didn't start making big money until I did less—a lot less.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more.

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you the world's most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

That'll give you plenty of time to get it, look it over, try it out.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K.- now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary—to prove that sending me the 10 dollars... which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied... is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $100,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid it off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it—cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it the Lazy Man's Way—a secret that I've shared with just a few friends 'til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that—nothing more, nothing less—the results will be hard to believe. Remember—I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again—I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for 31 days after it's in the mail.

If I return your material—for any reason—within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

☐ Please send First Class. I'm enclosing an extra dollar.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

CARTER'S ROOTS

Noel Currer-Briggs, one of the leading genealogists in England, is researching President Jimmy Carter's background for Debrett's, the peerage and genealogy publishers.

Currer-Briggs says he has traced the President back to John Carter, a wine merchant whose son Thomas was born in London in 1610 and sailed for Virginia 25 years later.

According to Currer-Briggs, the President had distant cousins who once owned Chequers, the country estate 25 miles west of London which is used as a retreat for British prime ministers. The genealogist claims that Carter's cousins owned Chequers from about 1300 to 1700, a claim confirmed by a genealogist at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) in Salt Lake City.

OVERSIGHT

President Jimmy Carter's visit to England last month was by all accounts a public relations triumph. Everywhere Carter went he was applauded, lionized, admired, respected.

Unfortunately, he could find no time during his five-day visit to pop in on the American Embassy in London and pay the traditional courtesy call.

He stayed at Winfield House, residence of the U.S. Ambassador (now Kingman Brewster, former president of Yale), but somehow the President couldn't make it over to Grosvenor Square, where our embassy employs a staff of 700, half of them American.

Some of the staff were hurt and disappointed, and when the time came to load them on the buses to Heathrow Airport to wave farewell to President Jimmy, a goodly number remained in their offices.

Next time they're in London, President Carter and his smile will surely greet the embassy staff. Jimmy rarely commits the same gaffe twice.

FAMILY OF FOUR

From time to time the Labor Department issues statistics on the cost of living for an urban American family of four.

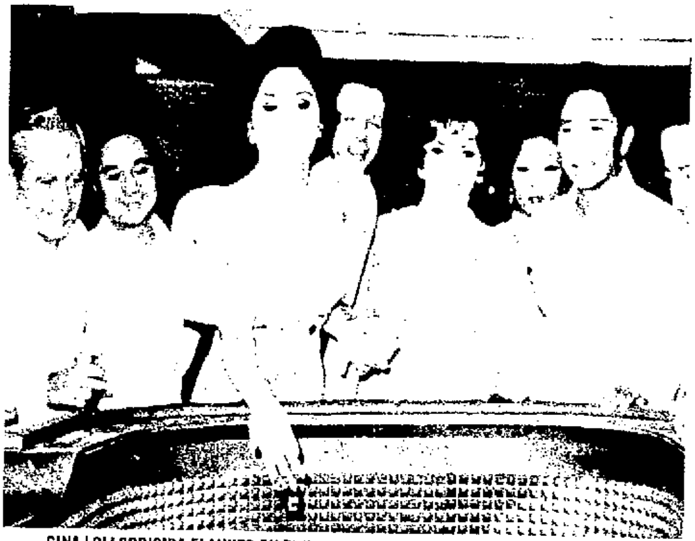
This is a hypothetical family consisting of a 38-year-old husband who is employed full-time, a wife who does no work outside the home, a 13-year-old son and an 8-year-old daughter.

Such a family requires $10,041 to maintain an austere living standard. It needs $16,236 a year to achieve a moderate standard of living. And if it wants to enjoy some luxuries, it requires $23,759 per year.

These costs were calculated for the fall of 1976. They are higher today, of course.

HOT AND COLD INFO

People who have questions about solar heating and cooling can now call the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center at 800-523-2929 (in Pennsylvania, 800-462-4983). Its 25 researchers will answer general questions, do literature searches and serve as a referral point for home owners desiring more detailed information. The center also distributes publications. You may write the center at P.O. Box 1607, Rockville, Md. 20850.



GINA LOLLOBRIGIDA FLANKED BY PHILIPPINE FIRST COUPLE, IMELDA (TOSSING DICE) AND FERDINAND MARCOS, AT OPENING OF FLOATING CASINO IN MANILA LAST YEAR

FRIENDS FALL OUT

Gina Lollobrigida, the Italian actress turned photographer, has threatened to sue the Philippine government for breach of contract.

Imelda Marcos, the president's wife who runs the Philippines with an iron but gloved hand, commissioned Gina to do a photographic essay completely sympathetic to her people and government. Supposedly, the foreign ministry in Manila was to buy and distribute 60,000 copies of Gina's book.

But now the Marcos government has withdrawn the order, and Gina is demanding that her contract be honored. "Either my book is printed," she says, "or Mrs. Marcos pays damages." Gina, who received an advance of about $120,000, wants close to a million. Chances are she will get no more than she's received to date, and Imelda will strike Gina from her list of jet-setters.

TOO FAT

German airplane passengers are too fat. Their excess bodily baggage is going to cost some firms a sizable amount.

Until now the German airlines have been computing the capacity and range of their planes using the weights of 165 pounds for men and 143 pounds for women. These figures are important in determining the number of passengers, baggage allowance and fuel.

But Condor Airlines, Lufthansa's subsidiary specializing in charter flights, got out a scale and found the average male passenger weighs 185. So now the company has to plan more refueling stops or take fewer passengers on their holiday jets. In either case, it will mean $2 million less in profits each year.

SCENE FROM EPISODE OF "POLDARK," A BRITISH IMPORT ON AMERICAN PBS-TV STATIONS

TV IMPORTS

Some of the most popular programs on America's Public Broadcasting Service stations are British.

"Upstairs, Downstairs," "The Forsyte Saga," "War and Peace"--these have proved so much in demand that many PBS stations are rerunning them or planning to do so.

"Upstairs, Downstairs," which recently finished its four-year run, has been replaced by "The Pallisers," a series of 22 episodes based on novels by Anthony Trollope, which paperback publishers are now turning out in abridged editions.

Also on view are "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "Poldark," to be followed by "The Duchess of Duke Street," about a cook who becomes Edward VII's mistress.

None of these series has appeared on commercial TV in this country, yet they are superior artistically to most commercial network TV series.

Why? They are better written, better acted, better produced.

SOVIET JEWS

Many Soviet Jews prefer to emigrate to the U.S. rather than Israel. This is irritating the agency in charge of immigration to Israel.

Since 1970 about 120,000 Jews have left the Soviet Union, all giving Israel as a final destination. Once they arrive in Vienna, however, many choose another country. In 1975, 37% did so.

Jews who leave the Soviet Union are granted exit visas to Israel once they renounce their Soviet citizenship, pay upward of $500 and undergo many other obstacles, irritations and delays. In Moscow, The Netherlands embassy supervises Israeli interests.

Why do so many of these emigrants decline to go to Israel? Many of them fear another war, of having to send their children to join the Israeli army. Many of them have been so brainwashed by the Soviet system that they have lost the will to exercise individual initiative.

BOOTS MARCHING ON

Boots, the largest drugstore chain in England, talks of expanding to the U.S. Boots owns the rights to ibuprofen, a best-selling anti-arthritis, anti-rheumatic drug which is manufactured and distributed by Upjohn Co. in this country under the name Motrin.

Upjohn sold more than $9 million worth of Motrin in North America last year and paid Boots approximately $7 million in royalties. If Boots chooses to manufacture Motrin in Canada or the U.S., it can possibly earn more. The company has made no firm decision, but there is no doubt that it has a winner in Motrin.

PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

NO-GLARE SPOTLIGHT: A new 12-volt spotlight with a long-lasting, 200,000 candlepower bulb can penetrate glass, fog, rain and water with a concentrated beam that reduces glare (claims the maker). Designed for rough use, the light is equipped with recessed switch, pistol-grip handle and plug that fits most cigarette lighter receptacles on cars and boats. With 15' cord, $34.95; with 9' coiled cord, $36.95. Q-Beam Corp., Dept. PP, 4215 McEwen Rd., Dallas, Tex. 75240. (right)

HANDY IN THE KITCHEN: A new wall-hung cabinet can store foil, waxed paper and plastic wrap in their original boxes and holds paper towel exposed for use. In country white or colonial yellow, it also has a fully lipped top shelf useful for recipe boxes, planters, spice bottles or knickknacks. 13" x 11½" x 3½" deep. $15.95 ppd. Habny, Dept. PP, 261 Huntington Ave., Buffalo, N.Y. 14214. (right)

FOR REC VEHICLES: If you're plagued with the problem of a gas pilot going out on refrigerator, hot water tank or heating system, a new automatic pilot relighting system could help. It monitors the flame and sparks the electrode to re-ignite it any time it goes out. Operates from car battery, 12V DC converter or dry cell, drawing only .04 amp while sparking and .015 while monitoring. $39.95. Republic Controls Corp., Dept. PP, Moore Rd., Industrial Park, Box 1284, Syracuse, N.Y. 13201. (right)

MONITOR CLOCK RADIO: Along with AM/FM reception and Citizens Band monitoring, this new unit also serves as an electronic calendar. Its digital display of time, month and date is bright enough to serve as a night light. You can set it to let you fall asleep to music, shut itself off, then wake you to music or alarm and music. $59.95 ppd. Oak Grove Enterprises, Dept. PP, Box 47A, Foristell, Mo. 63348. (right)

FLOTATION CUSHION: Designed for wheelchair patients, a new cushion helps relieve and prevent painful decubitus ulcers. Made of durable vinyl-backed fabric, it's filled with a layer of water to distribute body weight. The 17" x 15" x 2" cushion is sealed to a 16" x 21" pad with eyelets for fastening. Details: Stebco Industries, Dept. PP, 1020 W. 40th St., Chicago, Ill. 60609. (right)

The car of tomorrow? It won't be able to fly, but a test auto being constructed by Minicars, Inc., has "gull-wing" doors. Engineers are putting emphasis on safety, economy and lightness in experimental models they're developing.

Will This Be Your Car in 1985?

by Sid Ross

By 1985 you may be driving a car with radar-controlled brakes, a soft, almost crash-proof front end, doors that are hinged at the top instead of the sides, and a gas consumption rate of over 30 miles to the gallon in city traffic.

These innovations and others are being tested—with the blessing of the U.S. government—by engineers in Goleta, Cal., and Buffalo, N.Y. Between them they are putting together a "car of the future" that will offer greater safety, easier handling, and lower operating costs to tomorrow's motorists.

"We're trying to design a socially responsible car—one that serves most people in the most efficient and economical way, but also a car that most people will want to buy," says Donald Friedman, an electronics engineer who formerly headed commercial projects at General Motors Research Laboratories in Warren, Mich. He now directs Minicars Corporation of Goleta.

Minicars is one of the two contractors whose research on auto design is being funded by the government through the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA). The other is Calspan Corporation of Buffalo, which is working together with the Chrysler Corporation of Detroit.

The Minicars concept of the car of the future is the more innovative—not to say radical—of the two. For a projected price of $4000 to $6000 (in terms of today's currency) you will get a four-passenger car about the size of a Ford Pinto, powered by a four-cylinder engine mounted over the rear wheels, that averages 31 miles per gallon in the city, 39 on the open road. It'll have aluminum wheels with radial tires that can run at 50 mph while flat for 50 miles—which means you won't have to carry a spare.

The most revolutionary feature may be a built-in electronic radar microcomputer that will warn you of obstacles on the road ahead, or that you're following the car ahead too closely, by lighting up a warning sign on the dashboard. The device can also be made to automatically activate the brakes to slow the car down. Minicars' engineers emphasize that the radar computer is still in the experimental-stage, and they note that some drivers may regard it as an infringement of their personal rights.

'Soft' front ends

Minicars is building its RSV's—the letters stand for "Research Safety Vehicles"—with "soft" front ends, meaning that the front bumpers, hood and fenders are made of foam and plastic rather than metal. The resultant "give" means, according to Friedman, that no injury would be suffered by a pedestrian hit by a car going up to 25 mph. In addition, the front end is shaped so that such a victim would wind up lying on the hood instead of being thrown into the air or on the road. And, of course, the soft front would be more resistant to dents and scratches than metal, thus reducing repair bills.

The sides of Minicars' RSV are even more spectacular than its front, for, instead of conventional doors, the entire side of the car lifts outward and upward, providing entry into both the front and rear seats. These top-hinged doors, known as "gull wings," are said to give quicker and easier access into the car than is currently possible.

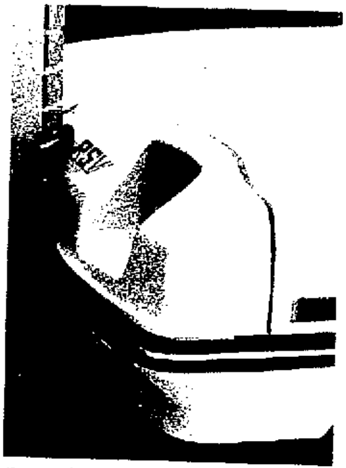
Conservative and traditional

Compared to the Minicars version, the experimental car being built by Calspan-Chrysler seems fairly conservative and traditional, but it also contains many unusual features. It's modeled on an actual present-day vehicle, the front-wheel-drive Simca 1308, which has been built by Chrysler in France and in 1976 was proclaimed the "Safety Car of the Year." Dr. Edwin A. Kidd, head of Calspan's Transportation Research Department, expects it to retail at about $5500.

Like the Minicars model, it has a soft front end that weighs only 31 pounds as compared to the average car's 100 pounds. A special energy-absorbing foam bumper can give up to eight inches with no damage, springing back into shape when the pressure is removed. Other safety features include a steering wheel column that breaks away on impact and a fuel tank so located as to obviate the danger of leakage and fire after a crash. And it, too, utilizes tires that can run flat at 50 mph, so that no spare is necessary. The doors open conventionally sideways.

continued

Research Safety Vehicle made by Calspan-Chrysler looks fairly conventional but has many novel features, including tires that can run flat for 50 miles.



Research Safety Vehicle has front end that snaps back even after hitting wall.

The smoker's guide to low-tar cigarettes.

With all the controversy about smoking going on, lots of smokers are deciding to switch to low-tar cigarettes.

But which low-tar cigarette should a switcher switch to?

Well, here's an easy guide to follow.

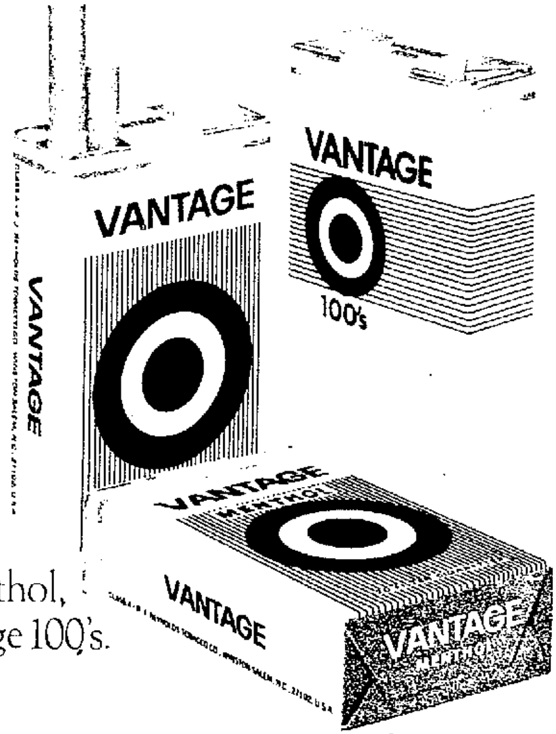
First, there are those so-called new cigarettes claiming scientific breakthrough and hyped-up flavor. Unfortunately there's nothing very revolutionary about the way they taste.

Next there are those brands that promise nothing but low-tar numbers. They're fine if low numbers are all you want. Because their scientific filters work so well, they filter out most of the taste.

Fortunately there is an alternative. Vantage. The low-tar cigarette that's different from all the others.

From the very beginning Vantage was designed to deliver flavor like a full-flavor cigarette with less tar than 95% of all cigarettes. So forget all those empty promises and go with the real flavor of Vantage.

It will probably turn out to be the only low-tar cigarette you'll enjoy.



Regular, Menthol, and new Vantage 100's.

Danger ahead! Cars of next decade may be equipped with radar microcomputers that will warn against tailgating and indicate obstructions on the highway.

CAR CONTINUED

"We're very happy with our RSV," says a Chrysler spokesman. "We feel that it's practical, sensible, saleable and produceable, as well as safe and economical."

While both the Minicars and Chrysler-Calspan models are relatively small cars, weighing well under 3000 pounds, the engineers working on them insist that they will be far safer than the heavier vehicles currently in use.

"We can run our car into a big one, and the people in ours will come out a lot better than those in the other," says Minicars' Dr. Donald E. Struble. "You can get safety along with smallness. And the small car need not be ugly."

Adds G. E. Frig, program manager of Chrysler's Research Safety Vehicle Product Planning and Development Office: "Sure we could make a practically 100 percent safe car by building it like a tank. But who wants to drive his family in a tank?"

At government expense

In a very real sense, the cars being built by both Minicars and Calspan-Chrysler are "owned" by the American people, since the work on them is being done entirely at government expense. The Research Safety Vehicle program was launched by the NHTSA in 1974 and was designed to go through four phases—Research, Development, Construction and Testing—ending in 1979. Right now, Phase III, Construction, is just getting started. So there's a lot of work still to be done before cars of this type are actually on the way to consumers.

Some criticism is already being heard. Minicars recently conducted a marketability survey among NHTSA employees, automotive engineers and engineering students. While this group isn't exactly representative of auto consumers, it nevertheless presumably shares some of the public's outlook on new car features. Those surveyed were universally impressed by the RSV's crashworthiness, economy and pedestrian protection. On the other hand, unfavorable comments were made about the fixed windows, rear vision and mirror, gull-wing doors and front-seat comfort.

Bugs to iron out

So there obviously still are bugs to be ironed out. Both Minicars and Calspan are planning, developing and testing; new changes and improvements are being made constantly. The overriding idea continues to be to build a car that is as light, safe, economical, nonpolluting and as good to look at as is humanly possible.

In addition to the NHTSA program, Congress has also authorized the Energy Research and Development Administration to test the commercial feasibility of electric or "hybrid"—a combination of electrical and gas power—cars. While Congress hasn't yet allocated funds for this program, it conceivably could add still another dimension to the automotive shape of things to come.

In any event, it seems certain that tomorrow's cars will represent a substantial improvement over those of today. Now if only we could bring about a similar upgrading in the quality of tomorrow's drivers. . . . P

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Elvis Sued

One of the penalties of being rich is that it opens a person to a constant barrage of lawsuits.

Elvis Presley is a perfect example. The rock 'n' roller is being sued by three of his closest longtime associates: Dr. George Nichopoulos, Elvis' private physician and confidant; Joe Esposito, his bodyguard and road manager, and Mike McMahon, his old pal.

These three have filed a $150,000 suit against Elvis in Memphis, alleging that he withdrew his financial and personal support in a planned racquetball and handball court promotion. Their complaint charges that Elvis and the trio formed a corporation last year, Racquet Ball of Memphis, Inc. Two months later Presley suggested the name be changed to Presley's Center Courts, Inc., and it was. Presley was made corporate chairman, agreed to be liable for 25 percent of the finances, then last August withdrew his personal and financial support, allegedly without any reason.

Eventually, of course, Elvis will have to explain his side of the dispute.

Terrorism in Italy

Italy has become a riot-torn country. The Italian government not only banned all public meetings in Rome last month, but Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga claimed that extremists have infiltrated student movements all over the nation. Their purpose, he says: to bring down the system, to destroy parliamentary democracy, to replace it with communism, fascism or anarchy.

Terrorism has even spread to the schools. In Milan recently, 400 girls stormed a local high school. They punched teachers and staff, broke into a classroom and dragged out Sergio Brambilla, an 18-year-old student.

They shoved him into the school cafeteria, where they conducted their own trial. The girls accused Brambilla of raping his girlfriend in a car and then threatening her with a gun not to report him. The girls found him guilty and beat him severely.

When other boys broke into the cafeteria to help their classmate, a battle of the sexes raged until police brought in reinforcements.

Unhappy Happy Hour

At U.S. Army clubs throughout Europe, "Happy Hour" was a most welcome period. It usually lasted two hours, from 5 to 7 p.m. one day a week, and drinks were half-price.

In order to "de-emphasize and de-glorify the use of alcohol," Gen. George Blanchard, the West Point football star of yesteryear who now commands our troops in Europe, has abolished the "Happy Hour."

"You are well aware," Blanchard recently notified his officers, "that alcohol abuse in the U.S. Army in Europe has reached such proportions that we must all join forces to meet this problem head-on."

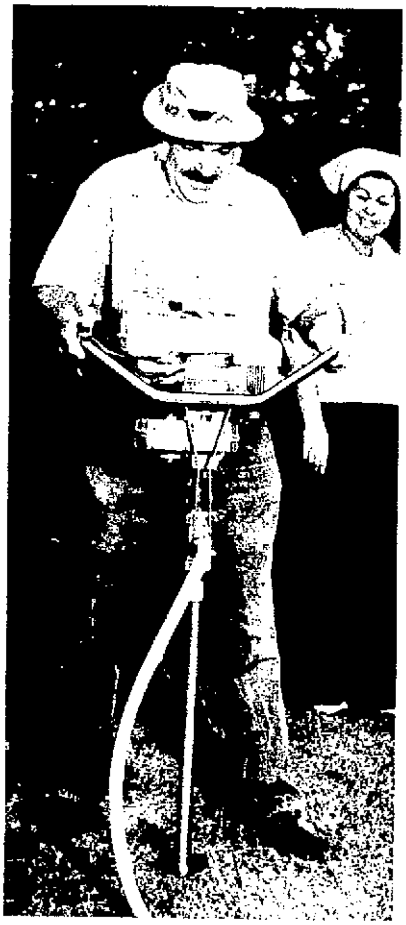
SAVE HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS!

You can tap the vast, unlimited supply of good, clean, pure water beneath the surface of your property and have all the water you need for 2¢ per day.



What makes this possible is a remarkable invention called the Hydra-Drill. Amazingly, it is almost as easy and inexpensive to operate as a power lawn mower. In the last 10 years, thousands of people all over the world have drilled wells with a Hydra-Drill.

If you want to know more about this wonderful way to drill your own water well and have a lifetime supply of chemical-free water for just pennies per day, then do yourself a favor. Send just $1 for our big, fully-illustrated information package including complete instructions on "How To Drill For Water." The information package will be rushed to you by return First Class mail. Satisfaction guaranteed or your $1 back!

THOUSANDS OF SATISFIED USERS

"HYDRA-DRILL worked excellently this past summer in the mountains of northern Idaho. Great invention!"

E. Ireland

"The HYDRA-DRILL's rugged capacity for drilling water wells has far exceeded my expectations. It has proved to be very practical and useful."

Customer in Venezuela

"We have used your equipment in a water resource development project here in Togo, West Africa, and found it quite satisfactory."

Peace Corps worker

"The HYDRA-DRILL is a 'GUTSY' little machine . . . it's structurally well-made. You made a good one!"

Rod Smith, Colorado

"I saw the HYDRA-DRILL in action in a tough spot—solid blue clay—then solid rock—then sand and gravel—then clear water. GREAT!"

A. J. Stahner, Washington

"I drilled several wells with the HYDRA-DRILL, some over 100 feet deep, with good results."

G. S. Lawson, Minnesota

"I have been using a HYDRA-DRILL for three years and I have done very well with it. For going through sandstone and limestone around here, it beats my truck-mounted drill."

Commercial well driller in Illinois

"We have used the HYDRA-DRILL and it works beautifully!"

At Last — Bells of Fine English Bone China

Fine English Bone China has become known as the rarest and best of all the fine china available throughout the world. By every standard used to judge excellence, it is unsurpassed. Its ivory-white color cannot be duplicated. Its light weight gives an impression of delicacy found in no other china. Yet, its strength gives it a durability that belies its delicate appearance.

To produce Fine English Bone China is an art that has been mastered by only a few master china makers. The home of most of these master craftsmen is Stoke-on-Trent, England, truly the Fine English Bone China capital. And it is in Stoke-on-Trent that the beautiful bells that make up this limited edition will be crafted.

Because Fine English Bone China is so difficult to make, and because the demand for the limited quantities that can be produced is so great, it is rare to find an exclusive, privately commissioned, limited edition bell collection made of this precious material. Literally years of careful planning and diligent work are required to make such bells a reality.

But, such bells are now, at last, available. The opportunity to acquire these bells is here, but for only a limited time.

Each Bell a Beautiful Work of Art

To create a bell collection worthy of Fine English Bone China, a specially designed bell shape was created. To produce this unique shape, each bell will be individually cast by hand. Then to complement the delicacy and exquisite beauty of each bell, original paintings of 12 of America's most beautiful roses were commissioned. In this way, each of the 12 bells in the collection colorfully portrays a different rose from the gardens of America. Therefore, the complete collection creates a bouquet of beauty that can be displayed proudly in your home.

Each Rose Beautifully Captured In Full Color

Each rose design is an original work of art created expressly and exclusively for this collection. The commission for the rose designs was awarded to two highly respected rose artists: Norman Langford of England and Allianora Rosse of the United States. Two artists were chosen so that a variety in artistic style could be given to the designs. Yet styles were chosen that were compatible with one another so that the 12 designs combine to make a unified collection. Each artist has captured in his and her own way the elegance of the roses with their beautiful array of colors. The efforts of these artists have combined to create a spectacular collection of America's most beloved roses.

To insure that the full beauty of the artist's original painting is faithfully captured on each bell, the fine skill of old world craftsmen, using techniques involving 20 separate colors, will be called upon. Each bell will be hand decorated and, as a final touch of luxurious elegance, precious 22kt. gold will be applied, by hand, to both the handle and base of each bell.

Issued Under The Auspices of The American Rose Society

Because of the significance of this limited edition collection, it will be issued in the United States by the Danbury Mint under the auspices of The American Rose Society. The Society is the oldest and most prestigious in the United States. For the first time since its founding in 1899, this distinguished horticultural organization has agreed to the issuing of a bell collection under its auspices.

Approximate size of bell is 4½" in height and 3" in diameter.

A Strictly Limited Edition

To maximize the heirloom value of this collection, it will be issued in a strictly limited edition, available only by advance reservation. In the United States, reservations for this collection of Fine English Bone China Bells will be valid only through July 30, 1977, and then the edition will be closed forever.

Convenient Acquisition at a Guaranteed Price

You can reserve your subscription to the American Rose Bell Collection by simply completing the reservation application below. You need send no money now. You will be billed for each of your bells prior to shipment.

PATSY AWARDS

No speeches by winners

By Bob Martin
TV-Radio Editor

Another of television's many awards programs airs tonight, but this one is different. None of the winners will make a speech.

How can we be sure? Why, all the winners will be animals.

The 27th annual "PATSY Awards" special will be telecast from 6:30 to 7 this evening on KABC-TV (Channel 7). The awards are presented by the American Humane Association for outstanding performances in TV shows, commercials and movies.

There should be plenty of contestants to choose from, for, as nearly everyone points out, there have been an awful lot of dogs on the tube this season.

Betty White and Allen Ludden host the program, which was taped earlier this month at Knott's Berry Farm. June Lockhart, Pat Paulsen and Dody Goodman serve as presenters of awards.

Seventeen animals will receive Patsys and one will get the Grand Patsy sweepstakes award. The big winner a year ago was Fred the cockatoo, Robert Blake's friend on "Baretta." And, the preceding year, Tonto the cat in the movie "Harry and Tonto" took the top honor.

Winning animals will be on hand, and they also will be seen in clips from their shows.

PATSY is an acronym for Performing Animal Television Star of the Year (for television), as well as Picture Animal Top Star of the Year (for feature films).

Unlike many other TV and movie stars, tonight's winners won't use their awards to demand pay raises. They're happy to work for chicken feed.

High-rise living

'Terraces' focuses on apartment dwellers

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

NBC describes its movie pilot "Terraces" as "a frank, frequently shocking but always human drama" about the people whose terraces adjoin in a high-rise apartment building.

Frank? Maybe. Shocking? Only to someone who has been cut off from the world for the past 10 years.

"It was intended to be to urban life what ABC's prime-time 'Family' is to suburban life," said Lila Garrett, who wrote the script with George Kirgo and also produced and directed the 90-minute film which airs on NBC Monday night.

But from the moment the idea was conceived until the final editing of the film, it underwent change every step of the way. Ms. Garrett said it was originally a much tougher, much grittier, much bolder show.

"MY INTENTION in leveling off the hard edges was to make it easier to sell," she said. "I felt that later I could do what I wanted, that I'd have more freedom. But, ironically, I feel I accomplished the opposite.

"I think when you compromise you lose, and generally I don't compromise. But sometimes you have to because they hold all the cards. It's their network."

"Terraces" is about the people who live in the building: a young career couple whose marriage is in trouble, a single girl on her own for the first time, a homosexual couple, an older couple finding it difficult to adjust to retirement, and a heart-of-gold Las Vegas showgirl whose boyfriend pays the rent.

JULIE NEWMAR is one of the stars of the new TV movie "Terraces," which airs at 9:30 p.m. Monday on Ch. 4. She plays Chalene Turner, a former Las Vegas showgirl who's living it up in a high-rise apartment.

Their lives, problems and conflicts all intermingle in what Ms. Garrett admits is soap opera. "But it's laced with comedy and there is no comedy in soap opera," she said.

"SOAP OPERA has only one shade of life — bathos. When you inject humor into that you have real life. It's humor that makes it bearable for the audience."

Besides the changes asked for by the network's standards and practices department, Ms. Garrett said she made changes of her own after testing the show before an audience.

She said, "After viewing it, one woman said, 'I don't want that kind of reality.' She said she didn't feel threatened by the violence on police shows because she knew it would never touch her. But she felt this could.

"After that I re-edited the film, taking out some scenes and shifting others around. These were changes I made myself. They say testing is only a tool, but in reality it's a weapon.

"The question is how much do you compromise? The answer is you compromise enough that you don't change the intent of your story, yet are still able to get it on the air."

SHE SAID, "I felt I made a mistake making these changes. Not just the changes required by the network but the changes I was willing to make. I felt that by not maintaining my perspective I hurt my picture. It still has some moving scenes, but it's not the same picture. It's not bold any more."

Ms. Garrett asked, "Most commercial television is for children. Who's programming for us, relatively intelligent adults who want to be mentally stimulated and entertained at the same time? Public TV is too highfalutin. It's like invading a library. After you watch a show, two pompous asses get up and tell you what you saw."

Although "Terraces" was originally intended as a pilot for a possible TV series, it's doubtful it will ever develop into a regular show — at least not for the upcoming season.

A Potent Drug for Anemia

by Lawrence Galton

Once every three to four weeks, on their appointed days, scores of toddlers and teenagers come to a special homey room at Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, N.Y. For four hours or more, they talk among themselves, read and watch TV as they get their blood transfusions—and it's a miracle they are alive.

They're victims of Cooley's anemia, an inherited, devastating, incurable disease. Until a dozen years ago, few could have survived to age 10. With regular, intensive transfusions of packed red blood cells, many have been living into the teens, some into the early 20's. That was a first advance.

Now, another major development promises to extend their lives and make them better lives—and do the same for many others, children and adults, with aplastic anemias, sickle cell anemia, chronic leukemia, and other diseases requiring regular transfusion treatment.

The new development: a drug, Desferal, just approved by the Food and Drug Administration. It takes the fatal sting out of these transfusions, which prolong life but eventually produce a vast excess of iron in the body that damages the heart and other organs. The drug chelates, or latches onto, excess iron and pulls it out of the body.

A Cooley's anemia patient after a periodic blood transfusion at Long Island College Hospital. The disease is inherited and incurable, but a drug just approved by the FDA promises to extend lives and offers hope for the future.

From Mediterranean

Cooley's anemia can occur anywhere but is particularly prevalent in the Mediterranean basin, in Italy, Sicily, Sardinia, Greece, Crete, Cyprus, Syria and Turkey. In Greece and Italy alone, two million are affected.

It also occurs in the Middle East, southern China, central Africa. In the U.S., intermarriage has distributed the Cooley genetic defect to Americans of various backgrounds. But children of Mediterranean parentage are most likely to inherit the anemia, which requires a double dose of the gene defect.

When only one defective gene is transmitted, the inheritor carries the trait but may lead a normal life. When both parents carry the gene, one in four of their children may receive the double dose.

The two faulty genes affect hemoglobin, the pigment in red blood cells that carries oxygen to body tissues. In Cooley's, there isn't enough hemoglobin—and the little available is abnormal and kills young red blood cells.

Most Cooley's children appear healthy at birth. But at 1 or 2 years of age, sometimes as early as 3 months, an affected child becomes pale, listless, irritable. A mother may notice that her baby hasn't strength to finish a meal. Growth is retarded.

Meanwhile, devastating events occur in the body. The spleen, which normally removes old, worn-out red cells, is inundated with the prematurely destroyed young cells, has to work excessively, and enlarges like an overworked muscle. So does the liver. As a result, the abdomen swells.

The bone marrow, where new red cells are formed, works desperately to compensate for the rapid destruction—but can't. The marrow overactivity affects the bones: they become brittle, break easily, take 10 times longer to heal. Often head bones thicken, giving a child a mongoloid look.

Heart overworked

The heart, overworking to pump more hemoglobin-short blood to tissues starving for oxygen, enlarges and finally loses pumping vigor, and fails.

Until the mid-'60's, little could be done for Cooley's victims. Blood transfusions were used sparingly because of the risk of depositing large amounts of iron in body tissues—a serious hazard. Iron is needed to make hemoglobin; in Cooley's victims the body, stimulated by hemoglobin shortage, absorbs from food far more than normal amounts of iron. On top of that, transfusions add iron.

Then, in the mid-'60's, investigators discovered that more intensive transfusions could minimize bone fractures, facial malformations, and liver and spleen enlargement without adding to the iron overloading. The hypertransfusion added iron but at the same time iron absorption from food decreased as the anemia improved.

Lives of the child victims were vastly improved—at least to puberty. But then normal growth and sexual development failed to occur because of iron damage to the endocrine glands. Heart enlargement and heart failure had been postponed from earlier ages, but now they occurred because of large amounts of iron deposited in the heart. Diabetes, other gland disturbances, and cirrhosis of the liver—all related to iron overload—made their appearance. Hypertransfusion doubled life expectancy, but death from iron overload came in the late teens or early 20's.

Chemical compounds known as chelators bind various metallic ions. Chelators of many types were studied for possible usefulness in iron removal. But they weren't potent enough or, if they were, they were too poisonous.

Each year in the U. S., 2000 cases of acute iron poisoning occur, mostly among children. The death rate had been about 50 percent. Then, in 1968, came the drug Desferal, an unusual chelator that cut the death rate to 1.7 percent.

Could it help in Cooley's? Early short-term studies were disappointing, but a few investigators persisted. And beginning three years ago came a series of highly hopeful reports.

Greek physicians reported that some patients who had already accumulated large amounts of iron from transfusion stopped accumulating more when given Desferal.

Australian workers reported 5-to-8-year trials, with patients experiencing marked improvement in general health, better heart function, and clearing of heart failure in some cases.

Vitamin C need

British investigators discovered that most patients with iron overload were severely deficient in vitamin C. And when they overcame the vitamin deficiency, there was as much as an 800 percent increase in urinary excretion of iron after a Desferal injection.

In the U. S., equally promising results were reported by investigators in research sponsored by the Cooley's Anemia Blood and Research Foundation for Children, Garden City, N.Y.

Dr. Mary Kaufman, director of pediatric hematology at Long Island College Hospital and one of the pioneering American investigators, has studied the drug in many patients. She calls it "the most significant development since hypertransfusion."

Her patients receive Desferal by vein while being transfused. They also receive a daily intramuscular injection at home administered by a parent.

Diabetes avoided

The children soon begin to lose the grayish look that iron overload produces. "And we haven't had a single patient develop diabetes," says Dr. Kaufman.

Like other researchers, Dr. Kaufman is hopeful that the drug will greatly prolong as well as improve life, perhaps even make for a normal or near-normal life span, but it will be many years before that can be determined.

Meanwhile, the outlook for young people with Cooley's anemia is much brighter. Happily, it is, too, for others—young and old—with other anemias and other diseases who need regular transfusions and now can have them with a far better chance of escaping iron overload and its deadly consequences. P

Chicago Tribune

Ron Howard is a truly nice person.

Really nice. Not in a cloying, phony saccharine way, but in a real, modest sincere way. He's the freckled boy-next-door, the clean-cut high school basketball player, the kind of guy who'd take it on the chin with good manners.

Howard, 23, a strawberry blond, wholesome type, started out as the star of the immensely popular '50s spool "Happy Days." He plays Richie Cunningham, an ingenuous "Joe College" who's not above an occasional thrill.

But somewhere along the line, Henry Winkler's portrayal of naughty, greasy Fonzie eclipsed Howard's Richie. The fan mail poured in. The writers began expanding Fonzie's role. (He had a whirlwind romance one season and lots of attention.) You'd think Winkler was the star of the show, for heaven's sake!

But Howard has plugged along, becoming a stabilizing influence akin to that other prime-time anchor, Mary Tyler Moore's Mary Richards, another nice person.

"Initially, the character of 'Fonzie' was not real developed and Henry attacked the thing with such a unique style instead of falling back on the cliches," Howard says generously.

"He really went for a fresh approach to the tough guy with the heart of gold. The thing just developed and caught on with the public—a real phenomenon. You don't see that often. It's very interesting to be associated with it."

BUT DIDN'T Howard feel even a twinge of jealousy at being pushed aside, playing second banana to a teeny-boppers' heartthrob?

"Well, people always ask that and the answer is no," he says, fiddling with his shoelace. "The episodes aren't all about Richie now, but Richie sure has a lot to do with what happens and I've got my hands full. Got plenty to do."

The facial expression, the choice of words smack of Opie, the cute-as-a-button little boy Howard played for eight years on "The Andy Griffith Show." It was the role that established Howard's acting career, although he previously had done two dozen guest shots on such television shows as "Dobie Gillis," "The Twilight Zone" and "Dennis the Menace."

After the Griffith show, Howard made two films, "The Music Man" and "The Courtship of Eddie's Father." He became an adept player of the gawky adolescent, starring in the film "American Graffiti" and then "Happy Days," which grew out of an episode of "Love American Style."

The son of actors, Jean and Rance, Howard has been acting since he was 4, although he made his debut at 2 with his parents in a Baltimore stage production of "The Seven Year Itch."

But he never felt pushed into show business. "I was always given the choice of whether or not I wanted to work . . . It was always something I liked doing, something the grownups liked, and I did well.

"My parents were real careful to avoid some of the crummy stuff and the pressure. There was no pressure."

RON HOWARD

While "Happy Days" has settled into a comfortable niche, Howard hasn't rested on his laurels. Playing Richie has become routine, so in his spare time Howard has pursued his dream—directing movies.

He was in Chicago recently to promote "Grand Theft Auto," his directing debut. He also stars in the film, which he wrote with his father.

The movie involves two young lovers who decide to elope because the girl's father, a political ambitious business tycoon, is against her marriage to a middle-class nobody, played by Howard.

The couple streaks across the desert to Las Vegas with the police, family and the girl's family-sponsored fiance in hot pursuit. It ends with a demolition derby.

The executive producer of "Grand Theft Auto" was Roger Corman, the movie mogul who has helped such other fledgling directors as Francis Ford Coppola, Martin Scorsese and Peter Bogdanovich.

Howard has been interested in directing since he was 15.

Corman, he says, "really liked the outline and the script—he didn't change much of it at all. He put it right on the production board and we made it."

Although he has no immediate plans to forsake acting, Howard would like to develop his own production company.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

THE MORMON ARCHAEOLOGICAL ARGUMENT

The argument, briefly put, is that the science of archaeology has "proven" the accuracy of the Book of Mormon. A more extended form of the argument would be that (1) the Book of Mormon claims to be a history of ancient people inhabiting Central America until 421 A.D.; (2) No one in 1830 (when the Book of Mormon was published) had any idea of the existence of the great cities and ancient civilizations which once inhabited Central America; (3) Archaeologists and other researchers after 1830 confirmed that such ancient civilizations and cities, similar to those described in the Book of Mormon did exist; (4) Therefore, this shows that the Book of Mormon is accurate and must have been translated by the power of God as Joseph Smith claims.

In my judgement, this is one of the most formidable arguments which LDS teachers present. Formidable, I say, not because it is unanswerable, but because of the lack of information available to the average person on Central American archaeology.

The truth of the matter is, that in 1830 Joseph Smith and others could have had access to no less than seventeen volumes that provided information about the magnificent ruins in Central America before 1830. History of Mexico, (1787); A Star in the West, (1816); History of America (1725) Archaeologia Americana, (1820); The Wonders of Nature and Providence, by Josiah Priest, (1824); just to name a few. Incidently, the last book mentioned was copyrighted June, 1824 in the office of R. R. Lansing — the same office in which the Book of Mormon was copyrighted!

In a statement of Dr. Ross T. Christensen, archaeologist and professor at B.Y.U. In the first place, the statement that the Book of Mormon has already been proven by archaeology is misleading . . . Latter-day Saints who have had any formal training in archaeology are exceeding few . . . As for the notion that the Book of Mormon has already been proved by archaeology, I must say with Shakespeare, "Lay not that flattering unction to your soul." (The University Archaeological Society Miscellaneous Papers, No. 19, Dec. 1960, pp. 8 and 9). Other Mormon authors have made similar statements, of which we are in possession.

New Mouseketeers

Show delights another generation

—Chicago Tribune

It happens at different times throughout the country, but the pattern is the same.

Outdoor play is interrupted, homework is abandoned, TVs click on, and millions of mostly preteen enthusiasts gather around their sets.

The kids' mothers don't even mind: many of them were hooked by the same Pied Piper of the tube in the late '50s. His name is Mickey Mouse, and his new club has drawn a cult of fans rivaling that of those who adored Annette, Karen, Cubby, Darlene, Tim and Bobby.

Fourteen million American youngsters have grown up with the Mickey Mouse Club since its beginning in 1955 and syndication seven years later. But is it the same? Does the old magic still hold for nostalgia buffs and new viewers alike?

National reaction to the updated revival, which first aired in January, has been mixed (The program airs weekdays at 5 p.m. on Channel 11 in Los Angeles.)

ANNETTE FUNICELLO, one of the original Mouseketeers, visits the "New Mickey Mouse Club" performers. The show airs weekdays at 5 p.m. on Ch. 11.

Basically the format of the new show parallels that of its predecessor. A Mouseketeer announces, "It's time for Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse Club," while Mickey and other Disney characters parade across the screen to the music of the march — the theme, "Who's the leader of the club that's made for you and me? M-I-C-K-E-Y M-O-U-S-E!" Same tune, same lyrics, but slightly jazzed up. Donald Duck clangs the cymbals as he did 21 years ago.

THE 12 new Mousketeers sing and dance a little. Each day of the week there's a different theme: Who, What, Why, Where, When and How; Let's Go; Surprise; Discovery; Showtime. Either a classic cartoon or a new adventure serial is featured.

Superstars are noticeably absent.

When 10-year-old Patrice Watkins and neighborhood friends gathered in the living room of her Chicago home recently, she was the only one who could identify all the Mousketeers by name. Names don't seem important, but talent does.

"I don't like her, she can't dance," piped up one viewer. "She sings too much," complained another. And when one Mousketeer performed an original composition while playing the piano, George Watkins, 9, frowned, shook his head, and groused: "I hope she doesn't make any more songs. It doesn't sound so good."

At least one of the nine was shrieking every minute, saying things like, "This is the part I like." And some segments, such as the cartoons, clearly were universal favorites. One clue: The circle of little bodies lying on the floor, feet sticking up, arms propping heads, got smaller, closer to the set.

It's encouraging to some children's TV watchdog groups such as Action for Children's Television (ACT) that the animated portions are so popular.

"It's heartening that kids have a sense of beauty of what a cartoon can be," said Debbie First, executive director. "It's certainly refreshing to be able to look at animation that's not limited to what children see on Saturday mornings."

Some believe the original series showed its age in more ways than the out dated hairdos and clothes.

"I sat through all the old Mickey Mouse Clubs for four years straight," said Missey Earnest, who now handles publicity for the new program in Burbank, Calif. "When I saw the syndicated show I couldn't believe it. How I could have sat through the first is incredible."

Ms. Earnest said when the old show was syndicated the second time response was good, but it lasted only about six months. There appeared to be a demand for something more contemporary. Today, while coloring books, records and new Mousketeer products are beginning to crop up, Ms. Earnest said, enthusiasm continues to climb.

FAN mail totals more than 1,000 pieces a week, she said, and though there definitely are favorite Mousketeers, nobody will say who. "The kids in the show aren't supposed to know. When Annette became popular the others felt bad. It was a mistake."

Criticism of the new show is fairly consistent: Old serials like "Spin & Marty" and the "Hardy Boys" are missed. Few like the new upbeat tempo to the theme song. Though the new Mousketeers are ethnically and racially balanced, some attack the balance as sheer tokenism and charge that some racist and sexist stereotypes still exist.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by DAVE BARRY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dave Barry, in his sixth year of appearing with singer Wayne Newton, says proudly, "We've been averaging 40 weeks a year in Las Vegas [often at the Sands Hotel]."

Barry's comedy style is relaxed, and when he walks out on stage—because Wayne Newton gets so many standing ovations—he sometimes looks at the audience and says, "My God, a sitting ovation." Among his credits are the record albums "Laughs for Losers" and "Will the Real Howard Hughes Please Stand Up?"

He is the father of five children and talks about them in his act. "Listening to them keeps me updated," he says. Here Dave Barry talks about his kids, his wife, Las Vegas and other things:

Sometimes I have to divide my kids into categories. There's my dumb son. He was driving here and saw a sign, "Las Vegas, Left." So he turned around and went home.

Then I have a mean son. He's so mean he gave wrong directions to an ambulance.

Then there's the good one, the loving son. Every week he sends home a bundle to his mother. She washes it and sends it back to him.

One of my sons is 24 years old and just graduated from law school. And I have a 19-year-old son who may be his first case.

I have to classify my wife as a kook. On our honeymoon night she said we were seeing too much of each other.

A woman was gambling in Las Vegas and said to her husband, "I just lost $12 on the slot machine." And the husband said, "Why, that's terrible!" She said, "But you lost $1600." He said, "But I know how to gamble."

Then there was the husband who said to his wife, "Well, I'm going to gamble. What are you going to do?" She said, "Well, I'm going to put some money on number 57 on the roulette table—I have a hunch." He said, "There is no number 57 on the roulette table." And she replied, "No wonder the house makes so much money. They leave out all the lucky numbers."

●

I'm bald, and I champion the cause of bald-headed men. I think baldness is sexy, virile. Bald guys have charisma, but people don't say nice things about them. A guy walked up to me the other day and said, "I have a joke that'll knock the hair right off your head." Then he remarked, "I see you've heard it already."

●

They really do want your money here. I sent a bellhop out for a deck of cards—he made 52 trips.

Definition of a loser: A man who plays a piano in a marching band.

I knew one guy who was such a loser, he spent his whole life paying off a cemetery plot—and then he drowned at sea.

I have three grandchildren, one of whom was named after me. They call him Grandpa.

Las Vegas used to be a watering hole, now it's a milking station.

I live in Beverly Hills, which is a very exclusive neighborhood. One day I went to report a stolen car and the policeman said, "Who recommended you?"

I haven't spoken to my next-door neighbors in 20 years—and they're my own mother and father.

And we even have schools for overprivileged children.

"Golf is all right, but personally I'd rather walk around eighteen stores!"

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

P-437

SIMPLE BUT CHIC

One seam and finishing details make this simple-sew-style quick to do. It can be worn as shown, over one shoulder, or draped to suit your mood. A second version can be made with two seams in two colors for a new and different look.

This fascinating dress can be made only from a stretch fabric. And it's easy to pack when traveling.

P-437 with photo-guide is in one size (hips 32-38) and requires 3¼ yards of 60-inch fabric.

TO ORDER:

Send $1 plus 25¢ for postage and handling to PARADE, Dept. P, Box 475, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Print name, address, zip code, pattern number and size. Please allow three weeks for delivery.

Include an extra $2, which includes postage and handling charges, for PARADE'S BASIC FASHION BOOK . . . filled with designs from which to choose your patterns plus special features on Use of Border Prints, Diagonals and Problem Fabrics.

Sears Bros. Presents. Armstrong Solarian

Solarian from Armstrong the sunny floor that shines without waxing

Solarian's high shine comes from its Mirabond wear surface, a special formulation that will retain its gloss — without waxing — far longer than any ordinary vinyl floor.
It's also easier to keep clean. Spills, tracked in dirt — even black heel marks — come up easily.

Approx. $198.00 for a 9x12 room

RE-SKIN IT!

SAVE UP TO 60%

Yes, we will re-skin all or part of your kitchen and make it look like new. All existing surfaces are skinned with unfinished ash or birch permanent veneer and matched with your choice of doors to any color you wish. We will make and install all new drawers and add any new convenient features. The savings could be worthwhile enough to remodel a bathroom or add a small room (which we also do).

Why have expensive imitation plastic looking wood when you can have the real natural looking thing. If you don't care to skin it we will tear it out and remodel it completely.

"Before you begin it, get our price to skin it"

'Roots' performer signed for 'Dan'l'

Ji-Tu Cumbuka, who starred as "The Wrestler" in "Roots," has been signed by executive producer Ernie Frankel to a continuing starring role in "Dan'l," 20th Century-Fox TV drama which premieres this fall as a one-hour series over CBS-TV.

Cumbuka portrays a slave working to buy his freedom who assists, and is aided, by Daniel Boone (Rick Moses), in the action-adventure.

Ohlmeyer to produce TV awards program

Don Ohlmeyer will produce NBC-TV's presentation of the first Hollywood Academy of Television Arts and Sciences awards ceremonies Sunday, Sept. 11, it was announced by Robert T. Howard, president of the NBC Television Network.

The ceremonies will emanate from the Pasadena Convention Center.

Ohlmeyer joined NBC Sports earlier this year to serve as executive producer of the 1980 Moscow Olympics coverage and as a program packager for the NBC Television Network.

Q. Who owns the most land in and around Plains, Ga., hometown of President Jimmy Carter?—M.G., Albany, Ga.
A. Most probably Billy Carter, the President's younger brother, who owns about 1800 acres. Next largest owner, it is estimated, is President Carter, followed by William O. Cochran. When Jimmy Carter was running for President, his brother Billy, according to one reliable source, "bought up every piece of property in Plains that could be bought. He particularly bought up all the land near Jimmy's house so that nobody could build up to Jimmy. Billy did this without Jimmy even knowing about it. He did it to protect Jimmy, and I doubt if Billy will ever sell that land . . . certainly not for years to come."

MARTHE KELLER AND AL PACINO

Q. Al Pacino and Marthe Keller—any chance of these two getting married, or is it just a temporary living arrangement?—K.L., Bronxville, N.Y.
A. They fell in love while filming "Bobby Deerfield" in Switzerland. They are the loving but not the marrying kind. But one can never tell about show-biz romances.

Q. In the David Frost interview with Richard Nixon, Nixon claimed that he personally fired Sherman Adams, who was President Eisenhower's chief of staff. That's not true. It was Meade Alcorn, Republican national chairman in 1958, who asked Adams to resign. Why did Nixon tell a lie?—B. F., Austin, Tex.
A. The most charitable explanation is that time has dulled the accuracy of Nixon's recollections. The most uncharitable explanation is that Nixon is no respecter of the truth.

Q. Who said, "Freedom of the press belongs to the man who owns one"? —Mal Vance, Omaha, Neb.
A. The quote is from the late A. J. Liebling, a journalist who wrote for The New Yorker magazine and the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain.

Q. Isn't Gerald Ford being sued left and right now that he's no longer President?—P.O., Riverside, Cal
A. One gentleman is threatening suit because he was struck by a golf ball hit by Ford. Another gentleman is threatening or by now has filed suit concerning the construction of the Ford home in Rancho Mirage, Cal. But two lawsuits aren't all that many.

Q. Ramsay MacDonald, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, Ernest Bevin and Keir Hardie, all founders of the British Labour party—which, in my opinion, is ruining that once great country—were all these Labour party leaders illegitimate?—Brown Davidson, Cambridge, Mass.
A. James Ramsay MacDonald, Ernest Bevin and Keir Hardie, founding fathers of the Labour party, were all illegitimate. MacDonald was the son of Anne Ramsay, a courageous and plucky domestic, and John MacDonald, a plowman

Q. I have heard it said of actor Warren Beatty that he is hung up on older women, that he will not date a woman unless she is on Social Security, and that one of the best-kept Hollywood secrets in years has been his long-term love affair with Mae West. How much of this is on the level?—Greta Jones, Oakland, Cal.
A. None of it except that Beatty is "hung up" on women—but not necessarily older women.

Q. Now that Gov. George Wallace of Alabama has declared his intention to run for the U.S. Senate, is there any chance that his wife Cornelia will leave him?—Z.Z., Mobile, Ala.
A. Practically none, and if Wallace takes over John Sparkman's Senate seat, his wife will cut a pretty and colorful figure in Washington.

GOV. GEORGE WALLACE AND WIFE CORNELIA

KRIS KRISTOFFERSON AND WIFE RITA COOLIDGE

Q. Kris Kristofferson, the actor who co-starred with Barbra Streisand in "A Star Is Born," is married to a beauty named Rita Coolidge. Someone said she suffered a missed abortion. Is that true? And if it is, what is a missed abortion?—M.L. Knox, Philadelphia.
A. It is true that Kristofferson's wife recently suffered a missed abortion. Such an abortion occurs when the fetus dies but is retained in the uterine cavity until its removal. Rita Coolidge was hospitalized in Santa Monica, Cal., for such an emergency, has since made a complete recovery.

Q. Why is it that so many U.S. Senators—like Alan Cranston of California, John Tower of Texas, Herman Talmadge of Georgia, Donald Riegle Jr. of Michigan, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Edward Brooke of Massachusetts—can't stay married to their wives? I would also like to know what it cost Senator Brooke to divorce his wife Remigia and if this frees him to wed Barbara Walters?—M.L., Roxbury, Mass.
A. Sharing a husband with the U.S. Senate is one of the most perilous risks undertaken by a wife. She must stifle her own individuality, agree at least in public with almost everything her husband does and says. She must sacrifice herself and frequently her children for his career.

In the case of Sen. Edward Brooke and his wife of 30 years, Remigia, the divorce involved the following settlement: Mrs. Brooke will receive ownership of the couple's house and five acres of land on St. Martin's Island in the Caribbean. She will also receive $18,000 a year in alimony and ownership of the Brooke house in Newton, Mass., on which she will assume an $18,000 mortgage.

Senator Brooke is free to marry any woman of his choice, but there is no romance at this time between him and TV personality Barbara Walters.

Ray Zook has arranged and traveled on 800 Presidential press trips to 80 countries. After 20 years of an exacting but "fascinating" job, he is retiring at age 50 and plans a trip around the world with his wife Doris.

Goodbye, Mr. Zook!

by Lloyd Shearer

WASHINGTON, D.C.

After 20 years of making travel arrangements for the White House press and press staffs, Ray Zook, the ever-smiling baldy, has had it.

Come his 50th birthday on July 1, Zook, the White House correspondents' favorite, is stepping down as chief of the White House Telegraph and Transportation Office.

"I started out during the Truman Administration," he says, "and since then I've traveled on some 800 Presidential press trips, chalked up some 2 million miles and put down in some 80 different countries. But all I've ever seen of them," he adds ruefully, "are airports and hotels."

After six months of retiring and relaxing in Fairfax, Va., Zook plans to take a leisurely trip around the world. "I want to show my wife Doris all the cities I've put down in," he says. "And I'd really like to see them myself. The same thing holds true for this country. Over the years I've been in all the states, all the major cities—but again, just the airports and hotels, getting the press in and getting the press out."

Zook describes his 25-year career in the federal government as "fascinating and memorable, and I'd recommend it to any young fellow." But the truth is he's been away from home 120 to 130 days a year, worked 18 to 20 hours a day week after week—and developed arthritis in his neck, shoulders and hips. He's simply tuckered out.

What Zook, his longtime assistant Bob Manning, 44, and their all-male staff of seven do is this: They handle all the incoming and outgoing commercial White House telegrams (every staff member is a crack teletype operator); when not busy with telegrams, they make plane, hotel, bus, baggage and complete transportation arrangements for the White House press staff and all the members of the press who are covering the President on any of his trips, both domestic and foreign.

Ray, a favorite of the press corps, with assistant Bob Manning, who succeeds him as chief of the White House Telegraph and Transportation Office.

This is not easy. On Carter's first overseas junket to England a few weeks ago, Zook had to find a hotel in London with 140 vacancies and a ballroom large enough to be converted into a press center. He came up with the Churchill, where many of the journalists and TV men griped because they were allegedly charged $1.25 for a cup of coffee.

Ten years ago, when Lyndon Johnson was President and decided upon a round-the-world trip to the South Pacific—with stops in Australia, New Zealand, Vietnam, Thailand and back to Washington via Italy—Zook remembers, "I was one of the advance men along with Bill Moyers. When we got to Wellington, New Zealand, we learned there would be no hotel space for the press or staff.

"In desperation we negotiated to rent an overnight ferry that formerly made the run to North Island. When the main ship came back through there, the press and the press staff and the Secret Service agents boarded our ferry. It began to list to starboard and was quickly dubbed the 'Tiltin' Hilton.' We stayed aboard one night and then fortunately left. I say 'fortunately' because, about a week later, the ferry sank.

The world in 4 days

"That was some trip! We went around the world in four days and spent one night in bed."

Another trip highlight Zook finds amusing in retrospect occurred in 1969, "when we were going to the Vatican with Nixon.

"I had done the advance work in Rome," Zook recalls, "working closely with the fellows in the U.S. Embassy. I explained to one of them that we planned to take a pool bus [a small number of press and TV journalists representing the whole group] through a rear entrance to the Vatican. I asked him if he was sure this bus could make it through the narrow archways leading into the Vatican. He assured me there was no problem, said he'd even gone down and measured the width of one himself.

"And, of course, he was right, because the bus negotiated the first archway very well. But there were six more archways ahead of us before we could reach our destination. By the time we got to the fifth, the bus wouldn't pass through—each of the archways was successively narrower. So we all got out and walked the rest of the way."

The press secretaries

A pleasant and naturally polite man originally from Belleville, Pa., Ray Zook says he has found most of the White House press secretaries easy to work with. He describes Jim Hagerty of the Eisenhower Administration as "simply great"; Pierre Salinger of the Kennedy Administration as "a heck of a good guy, funny, considerate, we're still good friends and see each other every time we're in Europe or he gets over here." Zook also has kind words for LBJ press secretaries George Reedy, Bill Moyers and George Christian. He will say nothing about his relationship with Ron Ziegler, the Nixon White House press secretary. "But I got along just fine with Ron Nessen, who served President Ford, and I think Jody Powell of this Administration is going to be one of the best press secretaries any President has had."

At Fairfax, Va., home with his wife and beagle. "We've had precious few vacations together," Ray says. The couple intend to make up for lost time.

Zook and his successor, Bob Manning, do not make travel arrangements for any U.S. President. Such arrangements are taken care of by the military office in the White House. The military men are charged with the responsibility of seeing that the President has immediate access to the little black box which controls the nuclear warfare destiny of the nation.

Secret Service jobs

The Secret Service, also separated from the Zook-Manning domain, is charged with protecting the President personally and is therefore in charge of transporting his limousines overseas. When a White House limousine is flown to Europe or some other continent, Secret Service agents stay with it to prevent its being bugged by foreign intelligence agents. When President Nixon and his ubiquitous Secretary of State Henry Kissinger conferred with each other in Moscow in 1974, they would do so not in the Kremlin—which they were sure was bugged—but in a U.S. Presidential limousine, which they were relatively sure was not.

For overseas trips the White House T&T Office usually charters two planes, one from Pan Am, the other from TWA. They are 707's, and each seats 90 members of the press and staff, all traveling first class. Pan Am and TWA make it a point to staff these charters with attractive hostesses and the most experienced pilots, and generally their service leaves nothing to be desired. Zook has also chartered a Northwest Airlines jet for a White House press trip to China.

The chartering hassle

On domestic flights his office tries to charter a plane from the airline which ordinarily services the city or territory the President is covering. "If that doesn't work," he explains, "we go from one airline to another until we find an available plane. Sometimes I'll call seven or eight airlines and find only one with a plane and crew available for a particular day. The airlines seem to be cutting down on aircraft—they don't have as many extra crews around as they used to. It's become very difficult, especially if I want to charter a 727. They're almost impossible to get. The airlines have scheduled them so completely into their systems that practically none are available for charter."

How much does it cost to charter a plane for the newspersons and White House press staff? And who pays for it?

According to Zook, "There is no set cost. We add up all the transportation expenses and divide the sum by the number of people along. The news media pay for the White House press staff, so a trip costs a journalist or TV newsperson about 25 percent more than a first class ticket would cost."

The theory is that the White House press staff goes along on these trips not to service the White House but to service the newspersons. The media, however, have no say in the choice of accompanying White House press staff. That is the prerogative of the White House press secretary.

Some journalists who cover the White House on an irregular basis prefer to make their own travel arrangements for commercial flights—usually at a cheaper rate.

In the 20 years Ray Zook has been working the White House T&T Office, six as chief, "I've seen the TV people outnumbering the print journalists four to one, he says. "On a trip to Los Angeles last month, we had about 15 print journalists and 70 TV journalists. The trend is to more and more TV people. I'm told CBS-TV sent 32 staffers over to England to cover the President in Newcastle and London a few weeks ago."

London hotel mix-up

In reference to that particular economics summit trip, a brouhaha developed involving Claridge's Hotel, one of the most fashionable and expensive in London's Mayfair district. Both Ray Zook and Bob Manning are deeply grateful that they were not embroiled in the somewhat sticky, widely publicized embarrassment.

What happened was that the U.S. Embassy in London, when advised of Carter's May trip, immediately reserved at least 50 rooms in Claridge's for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Secretary of the Treasury Michael Blumenthal, Presidential Assistant Hamilton Jordan, Press Secretary Jody Powell and other top Carter men.

Claridge's has long been a favorite hotel for kings, tycoons, sheiks, U.S. presidents and secretaries of state. The U.S. Embassy people felt that Carter would not object to his staff staying there though he himself was scheduled to reside in the much more sumptuous Winfield House, a mansion in Regent's Park donated by Barbara Hutton to the U.S. government for the use of the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

But Jimmy Carter did object. The millionaire image of Claridge's was exactly the type of image he did not want to project or reflect. A few days before he departed Washington for the London summit, he personally ordered that his staff be booked into some less expensive, less prestigious London hotel. The American Embassy came up with the Britannia Hotel in Grosvenor Square.

A suite at Claridge's rents for $135 a day, at the Britannia for $95 a day. A double room at Claridge's goes for $68, at Britannia for $40.

Carter's staff stayed at the Britannia. And now there is talk that Claridge's is thinking of sending the American Embassy a bill for the cost of the last-minute cancellation of some 50 rooms. Either that or in the future insisting upon a large deposit when rooms are booked for U.S. government personnel.

Jody Powell's explanation for the hotel hassle was that President Carter "is as tight as a tick."

Zook is relieved and happy that it was Powell and not he who was called upon to explain the Claridge's affair. "I've had enough hotel headaches of my own," Zook says.

Ray Zook was born of Amish parents and reared religiously. He enlisted in the U.S. Army in December 1949. After basic training he was sent to the Signal Corps at Ft. Monmouth, N.J., where he was trained as a teletype and crypto operator, two skills in which he developed speed and accuracy.

Transferred to the White House communications center, he became a protégé of sorts of the late Dewey Long, then in charge of the White House Telegraph and Transportation Office. "Dewey," he says, "was operating the Truman press plane in those days and would take me along."

Wait for an opening

When Zook's Army enlistment ran out, he married Doris Howke from Oaktown, Va., got a job selling pianos and waited for an opening in Long's office.

It came in December 1958 and Ray went to work, this time as a civilian in the White House with a GS-8 rating and a salary of $8000. When he leaves the White House next week it will be as a GS-15 with a salary of about $37,000 and a pension based on 25 years of federal service.

Zook says each U.S. President he worked for traveled more than his predecessor—Eisenhower more than Truman, Kennedy more than Eisenhower, and so on. And he expects that "eventually Jimmy Carter will out-travel them all because he's the type of man who seems to like to establish personal relationships with other world leaders. And that calls for extensive travel."

When he looks back on his career, Zook says he misses greatly some of the journalistic stars of yesteryear—Merriman Smith of the United Press, Bill Lawrence of The New York Times, Peter Lisagor of The Chicago Daily News, several others who've passed on.

'I'm just tired'

"For a poor country boy," he says, "I've had a fascinating career, a 50-yard-line seat on some of the biggest events in modern times. But now I'm just tired, tired of deadlines and pressures. Being married to me has meant a lot of sacrifices for my wife. We have no children, only a beagle named Martini, and we've had precious few vacations together.

"I remember several years ago when I was going out to do an advance on a Pacific trip Nixon was scheduled to make to meet Marshal Ky or President Thieu, I forget which. Anyway, I'd been away from home about 130 days that year, so I called and said to Doris, 'Why don't you come out to Hawaii and spend a few days here with me?' So she did. But I was working 18 hours a day with the Navy and airport people and hotel managers, and our phone was ringing so constantly that finally she got up and left the room. That's the kind of vacations we've had. Now I'm ready to let somebody make the travel arrangements for us."

Should Women Be Combat Soldiers?

by Phil Stanford

Over the past five years, as a result of pressure from the women's movement and the Pentagon's own need to fill quotas for the all-volunteer army, women have taken an increasingly larger role in this country's armed forces. The number of women in uniform has nearly tripled, going from 45,000 in 1972 to about 120,000 now. At the same time, the number of military jobs open to women has taken a similar jump. Not long ago, women were confined to nursing or clerical duties. Today there are women truck drivers, airplane mechanics and drill sergeants, women are being trained as pilots and they attend the service academies.

There is, however, one important military specialty that is still off limits to women—and that is combat. By law in some cases, and by long-standing policy in others, women are forbidden to serve in any position that might bring them in "direct combat" with an enemy. Whether this is as it should be is the subject of a highly emotional debate that we may be hearing for some time.

Within the military, the debate is particularly heated. On one side are the traditionalists like Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the former Army Chief of Staff. "Maybe you could find one woman in 10,000 who could lead in combat, but she would be a freak," Westmoreland has said. "I don't believe women can carry a pack, live in a foxhole, or go a week without a bath."

He's in minority

On the other side is Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt, former Chief of Naval Operations. "Women," says Zumwalt, "should have the opportunity to have the capability to go into combat. . . . As far as women soldiers are concerned, when I was in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam war, I found that among the most vicious fighters were the Viet Cong women." Zumwalt's views, however, represent a decided minority among military leaders.

As the National Organization for Women sees it, the only question is whether the military has "the right to treat women, regardless of ability, as children who must have their decisions made by others."

To NOW, the only relevant consideration is equal rights. To others, the matter is more complicated. According to a study on "Women and the Military" by Martin Binkin and Shirley J. Bach, to be published next month by the Brookings Institution, there are at least two other vital questions. First, can women fight? And second, how would the presence of women in combat units affect the fighting ability of those units?

As the study points out, neither of these questions has an easy answer.

In a mechanized age, there are still many combat roles that require considerable physical strength. An infantry soldier must carry a backpack that weighs 50 pounds or more; a tank crew member must lift extremely heavy shells and load them into the tank's cannon.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office indicates that women have already experienced problems with physically demanding jobs. Of 97 women assigned to aircraft maintenance, two-thirds reported that they did not have the strength to perform many required tasks, such as changing aircraft tires and brakes and removing batteries and crew seats. In the Marine Corps, most of the women sent to school to be telephone linemen could not climb poles with heavy equipment. Several Army women trained as ammunition storage specialists had to be assigned clerical duties. The supervisors on Navy tugboats indicated that "women cannot physically do much of the work, which includes lifting and handling sandbags that weigh 100 pounds."

Making the grade

Last year, however, the Army ran a test to see if women could pass the standard basic combat training program. Two training battalions, each consisting of two companies of men and two of women, were given the same training program—including tactical exercises, grenade throwing and weapons qualification. The overall performance of the two groups was virtually identical: 87 percent of the men and 85 percent of the women passed. The Army found that "female graduates met the standard in every area except the Physical Readiness Training Program, and that those events can be modified for the women without changing the content of the training or reducing the value of training received."

A factor to be considered is pregnancy. It is doubtful, says the Brookings study, that pregnant women could be expected to perform their duties in combat or at sea. However, concludes the study, "predictions concerning the effects of pregnancy or menstruation on job performance remain largely speculative."

Regardless of whether women are capable of being combat soldiers, many military men feel that putting women into combat units would lower the morale and fighting ability of those units. The problem would be particularly acute, they say, for outfits like airborne infantry divisions, the Rangers or warship crews, whose esprit de corps depends to a great extent on their own machismo image.

Camaraderie in crisis

This is the official Navy view. As former Vice Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Worth Bagley has testified before Congress, many men are attracted to the Navy "because they enjoy being in a job which has been historically associated with fellowship among men in a difficult and dangerous endeavor."

The Army, meanwhile, is completing a series of tests, called MAX WAC, to determine the effect of women serving in combat support units which might be expected to come into direct contact with an enemy on the battlefield. Although the final results are not yet in, an official for the test says, "MAX WAC will show that women can function adequately in support of units without lowering the units' effectiveness."

Observations™

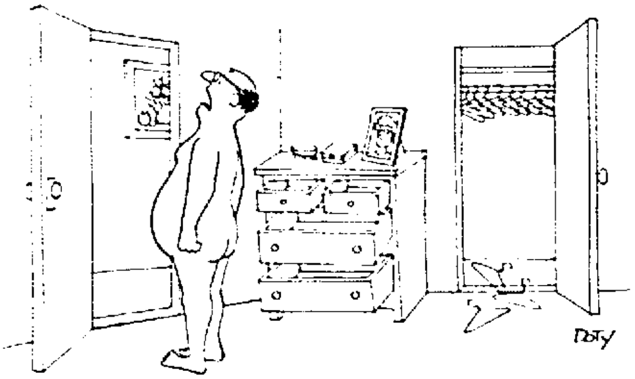
Did you know that 20 million kids haven't been immunized against one or more of the well-known childhood diseases? That's about 40 percent of the children under 15.

Of those kids, 19 million are not immunized against polio. The number is going up, and could reach 20 million next year—unless parents do something.

What all this means is that the chances of serious outbreaks of disease—like polio, measles, German measles, and diphtheria—are going up rapidly.

Please, make sure your children get all the shots they should have. Check with your doctor or school health authorities. And ask your neighbors to do the same. You'll be helping all children.

We goofed. Remember, a few weeks back, when we compared the 56 words it took to write the Lord's Prayer and the 1,322 for the Declaration of Independence with the government's need to use 26,911 words to issue a regulation on the sale of cabbages? We thought we had assurance of the regulation's existence, but it turned out we were misled. However, we can say with absolute certainty that there's an 11,400-word federal regulation on California-grown olives, and a [illegible]-word order dealing with the peaches of Mesa County, Colorado. So our point—that too much of the national effort is going into long-winded, hard-to-understand regulation—remains valid.



You mean they've banned everything?

Your summer plans. They can be helped by a fellow named Howard Simons. He and his family took a 9,500-mile, seven-week trip across the U.S. during the summer of '75 and had a chance to contemplate the rich diversity of America. Simons decided that what this country needs is "a universal elixir concocted for mind and spirit." The result: a book of facts about sports and festivals, films and plays, architecture, national parks, bridges, ferries, music, beer, pets, and just about everything else. If you're traveling in the U.S. this summer—or staying home—Simons' List Book (a Fireside Book published by Simon and Schuster) will add to your fun. And, as we've said before, the 1977 edition of the Mobil Travel Guide can enrich your vacation with ratings on hotels, motels, and restaurants, and highlights of what to see. You can get more information about the guide from your Mobil service station, local bookstore, or by writing to Mobil Travel Guide, Box MT, at the address below.

SOLDIERS CONTINUED

In the beginning, says the official, the Army had special rules to protect women in the field. They had to pitch their tents in the center of a company encampment, go to the toilet in pairs, and were not allowed to walk sentry duty. In most cases, these restrictions were found to be unnecessary. "Soldiers out in the field tend to adjust to reality."

The only other test worth noting is the Navy's "Sanctuary" experiment, so named for the USS Sanctuary, a hospital ship to which both men and women were assigned.

They got hot

On one particular cruise, the commanding officer noted, "subtropical temperatures necessitated shifting to tropical uniforms and T-shirts, and many recreation activities were carried out on the weather decks after working hours and during holiday routine. Then, all of a sudden, public display of affection that once was very discreet or nonexistent crept in."

As the commander reported, "This had a demoralizing effect on both men and women and most particularly on the senior petty officers." This problem was solved, he said, by making public displays of affection illegal and subject to punishment under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

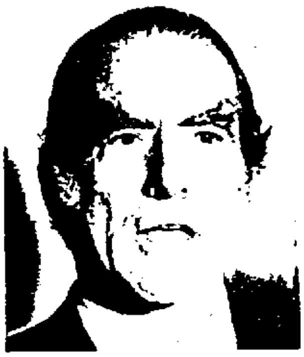
As the Brookings study points out, neither of these experiments tested the performance of women under combat conditions; the results are useful only in a general way. However, there are examples from recent history that should be instructive.

During World War II, more than a million women were drafted into the Russian armed forces, many into combat. Russian women served as fighter pilots, tank crew members, machine gunners, snipers, and in artillery crews. Israeli women fought in the 1948 war for independence—although, contrary to common belief, they no longer fill a combat role. And, of course, there are the Viet Cong women mentioned by Admiral Zumwalt. Each of these examples, says the study, deserves careful study by the Pentagon.

Women sailors pulled their weight during coed cruise on USS Sanctuary. But they also aroused passions. Public displays of affection had to be outlawed.

The debate over permitting women to be combat soldiers, says the study, is hardly an idle one. Not only is there the question of equal rights, the Pentagon must also worry about keeping up its force levels. As the baby boom recedes over the next decade, there will be fewer and fewer men eligible for military service. Simple calculations show that the only way to keep this country's forces at their present level of approximately 2 million—short of returning to the draft—is to enlist more women.

However, there is a limit on the number of jobs open to women in the military. The study estimates that as things now stand, it would be possible to find places for 400,000 women; any more than that, and it would be necessary to let women be combat soldiers. ℙ



Adm. Elmo Zumwalt favors combat for women, says, "The most vicious fighters were Viet Cong women."

Gen. William Westmoreland ridicules the notion and claims women "can't go a week without a bath."

A PERFECT POT ROAST

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Pot roast is usually served with brown gravy, but in our recipe the meat is cooked in a sauce with seasonings that are unusual and blend into a perfect symphony of flavor. It truly lives up to its name—Exotic Pot Roast.

A grapefruit cup makes a good beginning for the dinner. With the pot roast serve fluffy mashed potatoes and a tossed salad. Crisp crackers with any favorite cheese make a fine dessert.

EXOTIC POT ROAST

4 pounds boned and rolled rump or top round of beef
Unseasoned natural meat tenderizer
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, minced
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
½ cup dry red wine
1 square unsweetened chocolate, melted
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon crushed oregano
1 can (1 pound) onions
1 can (1 pound) baby carrots
¼ cup blanched slivered almonds

Treat roast with meat tenderizer as directed. Brown on all sides in hot oil in heavy kettle or Dutch oven. Pour off any excess oil. Add garlic and chopped onion; sprinkle with salt. Stir until onion is lightly browned. Combine tomato sauce, wine, chocolate, chili powder, orange peel, cinnamon, nutmeg and oregano; pour over meat. Cover; simmer until meat is tender, about three hours. Drain onions and carrots; add to sauce in kettle. Cover; simmer until vegetables are heated through.

Place meat in center of platter; surround with vegetables in sauce. Sprinkle with almonds. Makes six to eight servings.

The Lazy Man's Way to Riches

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

But I didn't start making big money until I did less--a lot less.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more.

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you the world's most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

That'll give you plenty of time to get it, look it over, try it out.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K.—now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary—to prove that sending me the 10 dollars... which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied... is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $100,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid if off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it—cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it—the Lazy Man's Way--a secret that I've shared with just a few friends 'til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that—nothing more, nothing less--the results will be hard to believe. Remember—I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again—I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for 31 days after it's in the mail.

If I return your material—for any reason – within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN

CARTER'S ROOTS

Noel Currer-Briggs, one of the leading genealogists in England, is researching President Jimmy Carter's background for Debrett's, the peerage and genealogy publishers.

Currer-Briggs says he has traced the President back to John Carter, a wine merchant whose son Thomas was born in London in 1610 and sailed for Virginia 25 years later.

According to Currer-Briggs, the President had distant cousins who once owned Chequers, the country estate 25 miles west of London which is used as a retreat for British prime ministers. The genealogist claims that Carter's cousins owned Chequers from about 1300 to 1700, a claim confirmed by a genealogist at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) in Salt Lake City.

OVERSIGHT

President Jimmy Carter's visit to England last month was by all accounts a public relations triumph. Everywhere Carter went he was applauded, lionized, admired, respected.

Unfortunately, he could find no time during his five-day visit to pop in on the American Embassy in London and pay the traditional courtesy call.

He stayed at Winfield House, residence of the U.S. Ambassador (now Kingman Brewster, former president of Yale), but somehow the President couldn't make it over to Grosvenor Square, where our embassy employs a staff of 700, half of them American.

Some of the staff were hurt and disappointed, and when the time came to load them on the buses to Heathrow Airport to wave farewell to President Jimmy, a goodly number remained in their offices.

Next time they're in London, President Carter and his smile will surely greet the embassy staff. Jimmy rarely commits the same gaffe twice.

FAMILY OF FOUR

From time to time the Labor Department issues statistics on the cost of living for an urban American family of four.

This is a hypothetical family consisting of a 38-year-old husband who is employed full-time, a wife who does no work outside the home, a 13-year-old son and an 8-year-old daughter.

Such a family requires $10,041 to maintain an austere living standard. It needs $16,236 a year to achieve a moderate standard of living. And if it wants to enjoy some luxuries, it requires $23,759 per year.

These costs were calculated for the fall of 1976. They are higher today, of course.

GINA LOLLOBRIGIDA FLANKED BY PHILIPPINE FIRST COUPLE, IMELDA (TOSSING DICE) AND FERDINAND MARCOS, AT OPENING OF FLOATING CASINO IN MANILA LAST YEAR

FRIENDS FALL OUT

Gina Lollobrigida, the Italian actress turned photographer, has threatened to sue the Philippine government for breach of contract.

Imelda Marcos, the president's wife who runs the Philippines with an iron but gloved hand, commissioned Gina to do a photographic essay completely sympathetic to her people and government. Supposedly, the foreign ministry in Manila was to buy and distribute 60,000 copies of Gina's book.

But now the Marcos government has withdrawn the order, and Gina is demanding that her contract be honored. "Either my book is printed," she says, "or Mrs. Marcos pays damages." Gina, who received an advance of about $120,000, wants close to a million. Chances are she will get no more than she's received to date, and Imelda will strike Gina from her list of jet-setters.

TOO FAT

German airplane passengers are too fat. Their excess bodily baggage is going to cost some firms a sizable amount.

Until now the German airlines have been computing the capacity and range of their planes using the weights of 165 pounds for men and 143 pounds for women. These figures are important in determining the number of passengers, baggage allowance and fuel.

But Condor Airlines, Lufthansa's subsidiary specializing in charter flights, got out a scale and found the average male passenger weighs 185. So now the company has to plan more refueling stops or take fewer passengers on their holiday jets. In either case, it will mean $2 million less in profits each year.

SCENE FROM EPISODE OF "POLDARK," A BRITISH IMPORT ON AMERICAN PBS-TV STATIONS

TV IMPORTS

Some of the most popular programs on America's Public Broadcasting Service stations are British.

"Upstairs, Downstairs," "The Forsyte Saga," "War and Peace"--these have proved so much in demand that many PBS stations are rerunning them or planning to do so.

"Upstairs, Downstairs," which recently finished its four-year run, has been replaced by "The Pallisers," a series of 22 episodes based on novels by Anthony Trollope, which paperback publishers are now turning out in abridged editions.

Also on view are "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "Poldark," to be followed by "The Duchess of Duke Street," about a cook who becomes Edward VII's mistress.

None of these series has appeared on commercial TV in this country, yet they are superior artistically to most commercial network TV series.

Why? They are better written, better acted, better produced.

SOVIET JEWS

Many Soviet Jews prefer to emigrate to the U.S. rather than Israel. This is irritating the agency in charge of immigration to Israel.

Since 1970 about 120,000 Jews have left the Soviet Union, all giving Israel as a final destination. Once they arrive in Vienna, however, many choose another country. In 1975, 37% did so.

Jews who leave the Soviet Union are granted exit visas to Israel once they renounce their Soviet citizenship, pay upward of $500 and undergo many other obstacles, irritations and delays. In Moscow, The Netherlands embassy supervises Israeli interests.

Why do so many of these emigrants decline to go to Israel? Many of them fear another war, of having to send their children to join the Israeli army. Many of them have been so brainwashed by the Soviet system that they have lost the will to exercise individual initiative.

BOOTS MARCHING ON

Boots, the largest drugstore chain in England, talks of expanding to the U.S. Boots owns the rights to ibuprofen, a best-selling anti-arthritis, anti-rheumatic drug which is manufactured and distributed by Upjohn Co. in this country under the name Motrin.

Upjohn sold more than $9 million worth of Motrin in North America last year and paid Boots approximately $7 million in royalties. If Boots chooses to manufacture Motrin in Canada or the U.S., it can possibly earn more. The company has made no firm decision, but there is no doubt that it has a winner in Motrin.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

NO-GLARE SPOTLIGHT: A new 12-volt spotlight with a long-lasting, 200,000 candlepower bulb can penetrate glass, fog, rain and water with a concentrated beam that reduces glare (claims the maker). Designed for rough use, the light is equipped with recessed switch, pistol-grip handle and plug that fits most cigarette lighter receptacles on cars and boats. With 15' cord, $34.95; with 9' coiled cord, $36.95. Q-Beam Corp., Dept. PP, 4215 McEwen Rd., Dallas, Tex. 75240. (right)

HANDY IN THE KITCHEN: A new wall-hung cabinet can store foil, waxed paper and plastic wrap in their original boxes and holds paper towel exposed for use. In country white or colonial yellow, it also has a fully lipped top shelf useful for recipe boxes, planters, spice bottles or knickknacks. 13" x 11½" x 3½" deep. $15.95 ppd. Habny, Dept. PP, 261 Huntington Ave., Buffalo, N.Y. 14214. (right)

FOR REC VEHICLES: If you're plagued with the problem of a gas pilot going out on refrigerator, hot water tank or heating system, a new automatic pilot relighting system could help. It monitors the flame and sparks the electrode to re-ignite it any time it goes out. Operates from car battery, 12V DC converter or dry cell, drawing only .04 amp while sparking and .015 while monitoring. $39.95. Republic Controls Corp., Dept. PP, Moore Rd., Industrial Park, Box 1284, Syracuse, N.Y. 13201. (right)

MONITOR CLOCK RADIO: Along with AM/FM reception and Citizens Band monitoring, this new unit also serves as an electronic calendar. Its digital display of time, month and date is bright enough to serve as a night light. You can set it to let you fall asleep to music, shut itself off, then wake you to music or alarm and music. $59.95 ppd. Oak Grove Enterprises, Dept. PP, Box 47A, Foristell, Mo. 63348. (right)

FLOTATION CUSHION: Designed for wheelchair patients, a new cushion helps relieve and prevent painful decubitus ulcers. The car of tomorrow? It won't be able to fly, but a test auto being constructed by Minicars, Inc., has "gull-wing" doors. Engineers are putting emphasis on safety, economy and lightness in experimental models they're developing.

Will This Be Your Car in 1985?

by Sid Ross

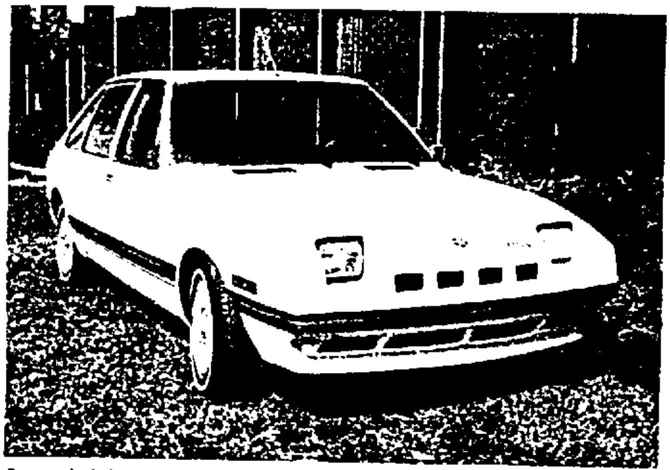
By 1985 you may be driving a car with radar-controlled brakes, a soft, almost crash-proof front end, doors that are hinged at the top instead of the sides, and a gas consumption rate of over 30 miles to the gallon in city traffic.

These innovations and others are being tested—with the blessing of the U.S. government—by engineers in Goleta, Cal., and Buffalo, N.Y. Between them they are putting together a "car of the future" that will offer greater safety, easier handling, and lower operating costs to tomorrow's motorists.

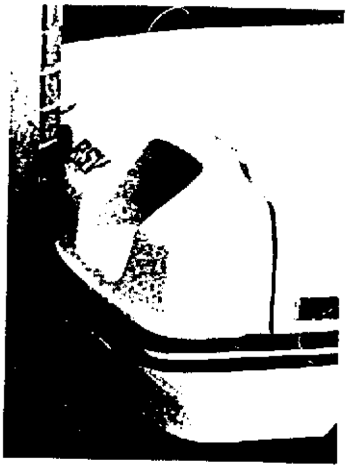
"We're trying to design a socially responsible car—one that serves most people in the most efficient and economical way, but also a car that most people will want to buy," says Donald Friedman, an electronics engineer who formerly headed commercial projects at General Motors Research Laboratories in Warren, Mich. He now directs Minicars Corporation of Goleta.

Minicars is one of the two contractors whose research on auto design is being funded by the government through the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA). The other is Calspan Corporation of Buffalo, which is working together with the Chrysler Corporation of Detroit.

The Minicars concept of the car of the future is the more innovative—not to say radical—of the two. For a projected price of $4000 to $6000 (in terms of today's currency) you will get a four-passenger car about the size of a Ford Pinto, powered by a four-cylinder engine mounted over the rear wheels, that averages 31 miles per gallon in the city, 39 on the open road. It'll have aluminum wheels with radial tires that can run at 50 mph while flat for 50 miles—which means you won't have to carry a spare.



Research Safety Vehicle made by Calspan-Chrysler looks fairly conventional but has many novel features, including tires that can run flat for 50 miles.



Research Safety Vehicle has front end that snaps back even after hitting wall

The most revolutionary feature may be a built-in electronic radar microcomputer that will warn you of obstacles on the road ahead, or that you're following the car ahead too closely, by lighting up a warning sign on the dashboard. The device can also be made to automatically activate the brakes to slow the car down. Minicars' engineers emphasize that the radar computer is still in the experimental stage, and they note that some drivers may regard it as an infringement of their personal rights.

'Soft' front ends

Minicars is building its RSV's—the letters stand for "Research Safety Vehicles"—with "soft" front ends, meaning that the front bumpers, hood and fenders are made of foam and plastic rather than metal. The resultant "give" means, according to Friedman, that no injury would be suffered by a pedestrian hit by a car going up to 25 mph. In addition, the front end is shaped so that such a victim would wind up lying on the hood instead of being thrown into the air or on the road. And, of course, the soft front would be more resistant to dents and scratches than metal, thus reducing repair bills.

The sides of Minicars' RSV are even more spectacular than its front, for, instead of conventional doors, the entire side of the car lifts outward and upward, providing entry into both the front and rear seats. These top-hinged doors, known as "gull wings," are said to give quicker and easier access into the car than is currently possible.

Conservative and traditional

Compared to the Minicars version, the experimental car being built by Calspan-Chrysler seems fairly conservative and traditional, but it also contains many unusual features. It's modeled on an actual present-day vehicle, the front-wheel-drive Simca 1308, which has been built by Chrysler in France and in 1976 was proclaimed the "Safety Car of the Year." Dr. Edwin A. Kidd, head of Calspan's Transportation Research Department, expects it to retail at about $5500.

Like the Minicars model, it has a soft front end that weighs only 31 pounds as compared to the average car's 100 pounds. A special energy-absorbing foam bumper can give up to eight inches with no damage, springing back into shape when the pressure is removed. Other safety features include a steering wheel column that breaks away on impact and a fuel tank so located as to obviate the danger of leakage and fire after a crash. And it, too, utilizes tires that can run flat at 50 mph, so that no spare is necessary. The doors open conventionally sideways.

The smoker's guide to low-tar cigarettes.

With all the controversy about smoking going on, lots of smokers are deciding to switch to low-tar cigarettes.

But which low-tar cigarette should a switcher switch to?

Well, here's an easy guide to follow.

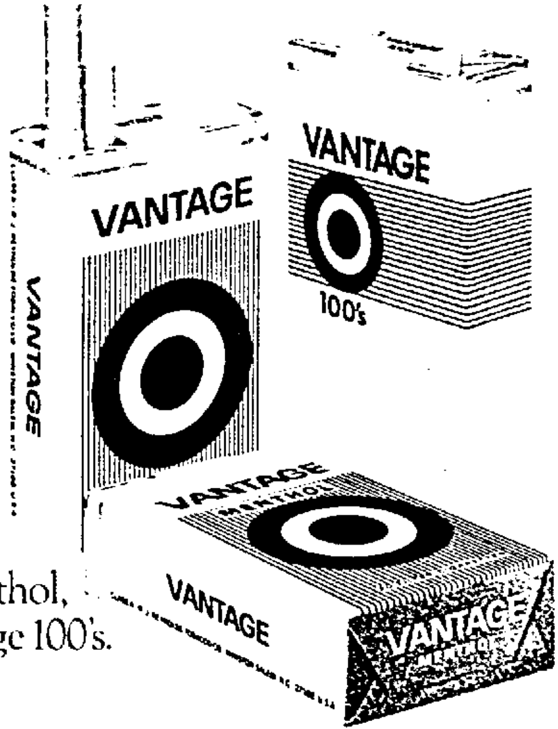
First, there are those so-called new cigarettes claiming scientific breakthrough and hyped-up flavor. Unfortunately there's nothing very revolutionary about the way they taste.

Next there are those brands that promise nothing but low-tar numbers. They're fine if low numbers are all you want. Because their scientific filters work so well, they filter out most of the taste.

Fortunately there is an alternative. Vantage. The low-tar cigarette that's different from all the others.

From the very beginning Vantage was designed to deliver flavor like a full-flavor cigarette with less tar than 95% of all cigarettes. So forget all those empty promises and go with the real flavor of Vantage.

It will probably turn out to be the only low-tar cigarette you'll enjoy.



Regular, Menthol, and new Vantage 100's.

Danger ahead! Cars of next decade may be equipped with radar microcomputers that will warn against tailgating and indicate obstructions on the highway.

CAR CONTINUED

"We're very happy with our RSV," says a Chrysler spokesman. "We feel that it's practical, sensible, saleable and produceable, as well as safe and economical."

While both the Minicars and Chrysler-Calspan models are relatively small cars, weighing well under 3000 pounds, the engineers working on them insist that they will be far safer than the heavier vehicles currently in use.

"We can run our car into a big one, and the people in ours will come out a lot better than those in the other," says Minicars' Dr. Donald E. Struble. "You can get safety along with smallness. And the small car need not be ugly."

Adds G. E. Frig, program manager of Chrysler's Research Safety Vehicle Product Planning and Development Office: "Sure we could make a practically 100 percent safe car by building it like a tank. But who wants to drive his family in a tank?"

At government expense

In a very real sense, the cars being built by both Minicars and Calspan-Chrysler are "owned" by the American people, since the work on them is being done entirely at government expense. The Research Safety Vehicle program was launched by the NHTSA in 1974 and was designed to go through four phases—Research, Development, Construction and Testing—ending in 1979. Right now, Phase III, Construction, is just getting started. So there's a lot of work still to be done before cars of this type are actually on the way to consumers.

Some criticism is already being heard. Minicars recently conducted a marketability survey among NHTSA employees, automotive engineers and engineering students. While this group isn't exactly representative of auto consumers, it nevertheless presumably shares some of the public's outlook on new car features. Those surveyed were universally impressed by the RSV's crashworthiness, economy and pedestrian protection. On the other hand, unfavorable comments were made about the fixed windows, rear vision and mirror, gull-wing doors and front-seat comfort.

Bugs to iron out

So there obviously still are bugs to be ironed out. Both Minicars and Calspan are planning, developing and testing; new changes and improvements are being made constantly. The overriding idea continues to be to build a car that is as light, safe, economical, nonpolluting and as good to look at as is humanly possible.

In addition to the NHTSA program, Congress has also authorized the Energy Research and Development Administration to test the commercial feasibility of electric or "hybrid"—a combination of electrical and gas power—cars. While Congress hasn't yet allocated funds for this program, it conceivably could add still another dimension to the automotive shape of things to come.

In any event, it seems certain that tomorrow's cars will represent a substantial improvement over those of today. Now if only we could bring about a similar upgrading in the quality of tomorrow's drivers.... P

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Elvis Sued

One of the penalties of being rich is that it opens a person to a constant barrage of lawsuits.

Elvis Presley is a perfect example. The rock 'n' roller is being sued by three of his closest longtime associates: Dr. George Nichopoulos, Elvis' private physician and confidant; Joe Esposito, his bodyguard and road manager, and Mike McMahon, his old pal.

These three have filed a $150,000 suit against Elvis in Memphis, alleging that he withdrew his financial and personal support in a planned racquetball and handball court promotion. Their complaint charges that Elvis and the trio formed a corporation last year, Racquet Ball of Memphis, Inc. Two months later Presley suggested the name be changed to Presley's Center Courts, Inc., and it was.

Presley was made corporate chairman, agreed to be liable for 25 percent of the finances, then last August withdrew his personal and financial support, allegedly without any reason.

Eventually, of course, Elvis will have to explain his side of the dispute.

Terrorism in Italy

Italy has become a riot-torn country. The Italian government not only banned all public meetings in Rome last month, but Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga claimed that extremists have infiltrated student movements all over the nation. Their purpose, he says: to bring down the system, to destroy parliamentary democracy, to replace it with communism, fascism or anarchy.

Terrorism has even spread to the schools. In Milan recently, 400 girls stormed a local high school. They punched teachers and staff, broke into a classroom and dragged out Sergio Brambilla, an 18-year-old student.

They shoved him into the school cafeteria, where they conducted their own trial. The girls accused Brambilla of raping his girlfriend in a car and then threatening her with a gun not to report him. The girls found him guilty and beat him severely.

When other boys broke into the cafeteria to help their classmate, a battle of the sexes raged until police brought in reinforcements.

Unhappy Happy Hour

At U.S. Army clubs throughout Europe, "Happy Hour" was a most welcome period. It usually lasted two hours, from 5 to 7 p.m. one day a week, and drinks were half-price.

In order to "de-emphasize and de-glorify the use of alcohol," Gen. George Blanchard, the West Point football star of yesteryear who now commands our troops in Europe, has abolished the "Happy Hour."

"You are well aware," Blanchard recently notified his officers, "that alcohol abuse in the U.S. Army in Europe has reached such proportions that we must all join forces to meet this problem head-on."

THOUSANDS OF SATISFIED USERS

"HYDRA-DRILL worked excellently this past summer in the mountains of northern Idaho. Great invention!"
E. Ireland

"The HYDRA-DRILL's rugged capacity for drilling water wells has far exceeded my expectations. It has proved to be very practical and useful."
Customer in Venezuela

"We have used your equipment in a water resource development project here in Togo, West Africa, and found it quite satisfactory."
Peace Corps worker

"The HYDRA-DRILL is a 'GUTSY' little machine . . . it's structurally well-made. You made a good one!"
Rod Smith, Colorado

"I saw the HYDRA-DRILL in action in a tough spot—solid blue clay—then solid rock—then sand and gravel—then clear water. GREAT!"
A. J. Stahner, Washington

"I drilled several wells with the HYDRA-DRILL, some over 100 feet deep, with good results."
G. S. Lawson, Minnesota

"I have been using a HYDRA-DRILL for three years and I have done very well with it. For going through sandstone and limestone around here, it beats my truck-mounted drill."
Commercial well driller in Illinois

"We have used the HYDRA-DRILL and it works beautifully!"

Bells of Fine English Bone China

The American Rose Collection

A limited edition of 12 Fine English Bone China Bells to be issued under the auspices of The American Rose Society

Approximate size of bell is 4½" in height and 3" in diameter

Fine English Bone China stands alone as representing the absolute finest of the china maker's art. And in the world of beautiful flowers, roses are the most beloved. To portray the exquisite and delicate beauty of America's most beloved roses in a limited edition collection of Fine English Bone China bells is an accomplishment worthy of worldwide collector interest.

At Last — Bells of Fine English Bone China

Fine English Bone China has become known as the rarest and best of all the fine china available throughout the world. By every standard used to judge excellence, it is unsurpassed. Its ivory-white color cannot be duplicated. Its light weight gives an impression of delicacy found in no other china. Yet, its strength gives it a durability that belies its delicate appearance.

To produce Fine English Bone China is an art that has been mastered by only a few master china makers. The home of most of these master craftsmen is Stoke-on-Trent, England, truly the Fine English Bone China capital. And it is in Stoke-on-Trent that the beautiful bells that make up this limited edition will be crafted.

Because Fine English Bone China is so difficult to make, and because the demand for the limited quantities that can be produced is so great, it is rare to find an exclusive, privately commissioned, limited edition bell collection made of this precious material. Literally years of careful planning and diligent work are required to make such bells a reality.

But, such bells are now, at last, available. The opportunity to acquire these bells is here, but for only a limited time.

Each Bell a Beautiful Work of Art

To create a bell collection worthy of Fine English Bone China, a specially designed bell shape was created. To produce this unique shape, each bell will be individually cast by hand. Then to complement the delicacy and exquisite beauty of each bell, original paintings of 12 of America's most beautiful roses were commissioned. In this way, each of the 12 bells in the collection colorfully portrays a different rose from the gardens of America. Therefore, the complete collection creates a bouquet of beauty that can be displayed proudly in your home.

Each Rose Beautifully Captured In Full Color

Each rose design is an original work of art created expressly and exclusively for this collection. The commission for the rose designs was awarded to two highly respected rose artists: Norman Langford of England and Allianora Rosse of the United States. Two artists were chosen so that a variety in artistic style could be given to the designs. Yet styles were chosen that were compatible with one another so that the 12 designs combine to make a unified collection. Each artist has captured in his and her own way the elegance of the roses with their beautiful array of colors. The efforts of these artists have combined to create a spectacular collection of America's most beloved roses.

To insure that the full beauty of the artist's original painting is faithfully captured on each bell, the fine skill of old world craftsmen, using techniques involving 20 separate colors, will be called upon. Each bell will be hand decorated and, as a final touch of luxurious elegance, precious 22kt. gold will be applied, by hand, to both the handle and base of each bell.

Issued Under The Auspices of The American Rose Society

Because of the significance of this limited edition collection, it will be issued in the United States by the Danbury Mint under the auspices of The American Rose Society. The Society is the oldest and most prestigious in the United States. For the first time since its founding in 1899, this distinguished horticultural organization has agreed to the issuing of a bell collection under its auspices.

Approximate size of bell is 5½" in height and 3" in diameter

A Strictly Limited Edition

To maximize the heirloom value of this collection, it will be issued in a strictly limited edition, available only by advance reservation. In the United States, reservations for this collection of Fine English Bone China Bells will be valid only through July 30, 1977, and then the edition will be closed forever.

Convenient Acquisition at a Guaranteed Price

You can reserve your subscription to the American Rose Bell Collection by simply completing the reservation application below. You need send no money now. You will be billed for each of your bells prior to shipment.

A Potent Drug for Anemia

by Lawrence Galton

A Cooley's anemia patient after a periodic blood transfusion at Long Island College Hospital. The disease is inherited and incurable, but a drug just approved by the FDA promises to extend lives and offers hope for the future.

Once every three to four weeks, on their appointed days, scores of toddlers and teenagers come to a special homey room at Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, N.Y. For four hours or more, they talk among themselves, read and watch TV as they get their blood transfusions—and it's a miracle they are alive.

They're victims of Cooley's anemia, an inherited, devastating, incurable disease. Until a dozen years ago, few could have survived to age 10. With regular, intensive transfusions of packed red blood cells, many have been living into the teens, some into the early 20's. That was a first advance.

Now, another major development promises to extend their lives and make them better lives—and do the same for many others, children and adults, with aplastic anemias, sickle cell anemia, chronic leukemia, and other diseases requiring regular transfusion treatment.

The new development: a drug, Desferal, just approved by the Food and Drug Administration. It takes the fatal sting out of these transfusions, which prolong life but eventually produce a vast excess of iron in the body that damages the heart and other organs. The drug chelates, or latches onto, excess iron and pulls it out of the body.

From Mediterranean

Cooley's anemia can occur anywhere but is particularly prevalent in the Mediterranean basin, in Italy, Sicily, Sardinia, Greece, Crete, Cyprus, Syria and Turkey. In Greece and Italy alone, two million are affected.

It also occurs in the Middle East, southern China, central Africa. In the U.S., intermarriage has distributed the Cooley genetic defect to Americans of various backgrounds. But children of Mediterranean parentage are most likely to inherit the anemia, which requires a double dose of the gene defect.

When only one defective gene is transmitted, the inheritor carries the trait but may lead a normal life. When both parents carry the gene, one in four of their children may receive the double dose.

The two faulty genes affect hemoglobin, the pigment in red blood cells that carries oxygen to body tissues. In Cooley's, there isn't enough hemoglobin—and the little available is abnormal and kills young red blood cells.

Most Cooley's children appear healthy at birth. But at 1 or 2 years of age, sometimes as early as 3 months, an affected child becomes pale, listless, irritable. A mother may notice that her baby hasn't strength to finish a meal. Growth is retarded.

Meanwhile, devastating events occur in the body. The spleen, which normally removes old, worn-out red cells, is inundated with the prematurely destroyed young cells, has to work excessively, and enlarges like an overworked muscle. So does the liver. As a result, the abdomen swells.

The bone marrow, where new red cells are formed, works desperately to compensate for the rapid destruction—but can't. The marrow overactivity affects the bones: they become brittle, break easily, take 10 times longer to heal. Often head bones thicken, giving a child a mongoloid look.

Heart overworked

The heart, overworking to pump more hemoglobin-short blood to tissues starving for oxygen, enlarges and finally loses pumping vigor, and fails.

Until the mid-'60's, little could be done for Cooley's victims. Blood transfusions were used sparingly because of the risk of depositing large amounts of iron in body tissues—a serious hazard. Iron is needed to make hemoglobin; in Cooley's victims the body, stimulated by hemoglobin shortage, absorbs from food far more than normal amounts of iron. On top of that, transfusions add iron.

Then, in the mid-'60's, investigators discovered that more intensive transfusions could minimize bone fractures, facial malformations, and liver and spleen enlargement without adding to the iron overloading. The hypertransfusion added iron but at the same time iron absorption from food decreased as the anemia improved.

Lives of the child victims were vastly improved—at least to puberty. But then normal growth and sexual development failed to occur because of iron damage to the endocrine glands. Heart enlargement and heart failure had been postponed from earlier ages, but now they occurred because of large amounts of iron deposited in the heart. Diabetes, other gland disturbances, and cirrhosis of the liver—all related to iron overload—made their appearance. Hypertransfusion doubled life expectancy, but death from iron overload came in the late teens or early 20's.

Chemical compounds known as chelators bind various metallic ions. Chelators of many types were studied for possible usefulness in iron removal. But they weren't potent enough or, if they were, they were too poisonous.

Each year in the U. S., 2000 cases of acute iron poisoning occur, mostly among children. The death rate had been about 50 percent. Then, in 1968, came the drug Desferal, an unusual chelator that cut the death rate to 1.7 percent.

Could it help in Cooley's? Early short-term studies were disappointing, but a few investigators persisted. And beginning three years ago came a series of highly hopeful reports.

Greek physicians reported that some patients who had already accumulated large amounts of iron from transfusion stopped accumulating more when given Desferal.

Australian workers reported 5-to-8-year trials, with patients experiencing marked improvement in general health, better heart function, and clearing of heart failure in some cases.

Vitamin C need

British investigators discovered that most patients with iron overload were severely deficient in vitamin C. And when they overcame the vitamin deficiency, there was as much as an 800 percent increase in urinary excretion of iron after a Desferal injection.

In the U. S., equally promising results were reported by investigators in research sponsored by the Cooley's Anemia Blood and Research Foundation for Children, Garden City, N.Y.

Dr. Mary Kaufman, director of pediatric hematology at Long Island College Hospital and one of the pioneering American investigators, has studied the drug in many patients. She calls it "the most significant development since hypertransfusion."

Her patients receive Desferal by vein while being transfused. They also receive a daily intramuscular injection at home administered by a parent.

Diabetes avoided

The children soon begin to lose the grayish look that iron overload produces. "And we haven't had a single patient develop diabetes," says Dr. Kaufman.

Like other researchers, Dr. Kaufman is hopeful that the drug will greatly prolong as well as improve life, perhaps even make for a normal or near-normal life span, but it will be many years before that can be determined.

Meanwhile, the outlook for young people with Cooley's anemia is much brighter. Happily, it is, too, for others—young and old—with other anemias and other diseases who need regular transfusions and now can have them with a far better chance of escaping iron overload and its deadly consequences. P

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by DAVE BARRY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dave Barry, in his sixth year of appearing with singer Wayne Newton, says proudly, "We've been averaging 40 weeks a year in Las Vegas [often at the Sands Hotel]."

Barry's comedy style is relaxed, and when he walks out on stage—because Wayne Newton gets so many standing ovations—he sometimes looks at the audience and says, "My God, a sitting ovation." Among his credits are the record albums "Laughs for Lovers" and "Will the Real Howard Hughes Please Stand Up?"

He is the father of five children and talks about them in his act. "Listening to them keeps me updated," he says. Here Dave Barry talks about his kids, his wife, Las Vegas and other things:

Sometimes I have to divide my kids into categories. There's my dumb son. He was driving here and saw a sign, "Las Vegas, Left." So he turned around and went home.

Then I have a mean son. He's so mean he gave wrong directions to an ambulance.

Then there's the good one, the loving son. Every week he sends home a bundle to his mother. She washes it and sends it back to him.

One of my sons is 24 years old and just graduated from law school. And I have a 19-year-old son who may be his first case.

I have to classify my wife as a kook. On our honeymoon night she said we were seeing too much of each other.

A woman was gambling in Las Vegas and said to her husband, "I just lost $12 on the slot machine." And the husband said, "Why, that's terrible!" She said, "But you lost $1600." He said, "But I know how to gamble."

Then there was the husband who said to his wife, "Well, I'm going to gamble. What are you going to do?" She said, "Well, I'm going to put some money on number 57 on the roulette table—I have a hunch." He said, "There is no number 57 on the roulette table." And she replied, "No wonder the house makes so much money. They leave out all the lucky numbers."

I'm bald, and I champion the cause of bald-headed men. I think baldness is sexy, virile. Bald guys have charisma, but people don't say nice things about them. A guy walked up to me the other day and said, "I have a joke that'll knock the hair right off your head." Then he remarked, "I see you've heard it already."

●

They really do want your money here. I sent a bellhop out for a deck of cards—he made 52 trips.

Definition of a loser: A man who plays a piano in a marching band.

I knew one guy who was such a loser, he spent his whole life paying off a cemetery plot—and then he drowned at sea.

I have three grandchildren, one of whom was named after me. They call him Grandpa.

Las Vegas used to be a watering hole, now it's a milking station.

I live in Beverly Hills, which is a very exclusive neighborhood. One day I went to report a stolen car and the policeman said, "Who recommended you?"

I haven't spoken to my next-door neighbors in 20 years—and they're my own mother and father.

And we even have schools for overprivileged children.

"Golf is all right, but personally I'd rather walk around eighteen stores!"

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

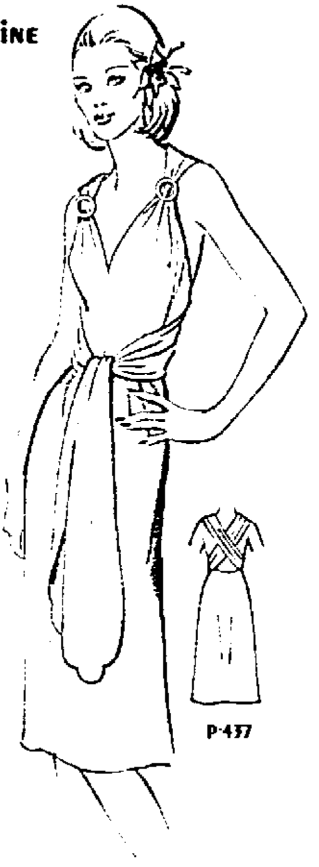
The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

PATTERNS by PAULINE

simple but chic



One seam and finishing details make this simple-sew-style quick to do. It can be worn as shown, over one shoulder, or draped to suit your mood. A second version can be made with two seams in two colors for a new and different look.

This fascinating dress can be made only from a stretch fabric. And it's easy to pack when traveling.

P-437 with photo-guide is in one size (hips 32-38) and requires 3¼ yards of 60-inch fabric.
